"I think we became friends because of football. It was something we both loved. When we weren't playing for the Manets, we would find some kids and play pickup touch at LaBrecque Park," said Desmond.

They never played on opposite sides until high school when they were opposing quarterbacks for the freshman and JV games.

"It is an odd feeling competing against your best friend," said Desmond.

"We're not trash-talkers, but we might bust chops a little in a friendly way," smiled Fallon.

They were rarely on the same field at the same time until Thanksgiving. As freshmen and JVs, Fallon and Desmond played quarterback and sat on defense. They would watch each other perform on the opposing team, but they would seldom play against each other in an offense vs. defense match.

That changed on Thanksgiving. Desmond, who is a terrific athlete, played free safety for the Presidents, a spot where he played for the last four games of the season. Free safeties read the quarterback and follow the ball. The free safety knew the quarterback well. The quarterback is his best

Injured Lawless Big Part Of NQ Football Team

By BILL GRIFFIN

The hardest thing for an athlete to do is to sit and watch.

An athlete wants to play. He works hard in the off-season to prepare himself. He wants to enjoy the challenge of competition and that fine sense of being a teammate on the field.

An injury can change everything. When the injury occurs in a player's senior year, a year he has dreamed about and worked towards since youth sports, it is especially frustrating.

North linebacker Joel Lawless was ready for his senior year. He played well as a junior when he was given varsity time. He had a good season in lacrosse. He worked hard in summer camp and had a promising senior season in front of him.

Then came the injury. In the third game of the season against Hanover, he went down in a pile of players. His leg twisted, and he tore the ACL in his right knee. His season was over. He went from being a player to being a spectator. It was not an easy adjustment.

"Watching is hard. Sometimes I feel like I want to just jump out there and make a play," he said. "I thought about getting a sports brace so I could play, but the doctors wouldn't allow it."

The Red Raiders have missed his contributions.

"We were looking forward to having him active at linebacker," said coach Mark Nutley. "He did everything we asked. He looked good as a junior. He's a good, quiet kid who worked hard in the off season. It was unfortunate the injury happened when it did. We were counting on him at linebacker and we've missed him."

For some players, one of the hardest things about being injured is they lose the sense of being a teammate. No matter how close they stay to the team, no matter how hard they work to get back, the fact is they are watching and their friends are playing. It can create a gap, but this has not been the case with Lawless.

"I still feel part of the team. I always have," he said. "I have a lot of friends in the senior class. I go back with them to when we all played youth football for the Storm. Players like Jake Grady and Ryan Manning are good friends. I still feel like a teammate."

He has done physical therapy to rebuild his injured knee. Some find physical therapy tedious, but Lawless has enjoyed it because he has seen the results of his hard work.

"I like it," he said. "We do a lot of work on the muscles around my knee, especially my quads. My quads feel much stronger, and that will only help the knee get better more quickly."

The most difficult game to miss was, of course, the Quincy game. It is a day for seniors. It is the last day many seniors will ever play football. It is against their city rival. It is a game they have thought about since the days with the Storm and the Manets. It is a day when the injured player feels the loss of just watching most sharply.

"I would give anything to play against Quincy. I would probably cut off a finger," said Lawless.

Cutting off an appendage is never a good idea, but the idea of it gives a good glimpse into how much a player misses his game in his senior year.

The hardest thing to do is to sit and watch.

The Quincy Recreation Department has limited openings for its ski or snowboard instruction program to be conducted at the Blue Hills Ski Area.

Registration can be done online at QuincyRec.com. or in person at the Quincy Recreation Department, 1 Merrymount Parkway.

The program is open to Quincy youngsters age 8 through high school and features a 90-minute lesson for beginners to advanced, use of the ski tow, supervision, and transportation to and from the ski area.

The staff of the Recreation Department supervises the transportation and the lesson instruction is provided by certified instructors from the Blue Hills Ski School.

This program will be conducted on Tuesdays beginning Jan. 5 and will continue for five weekly lessons. Cost is $200 and is payable at the time of registration. The Blue Hills Ski Area can provide rental equipment at an additional cost.

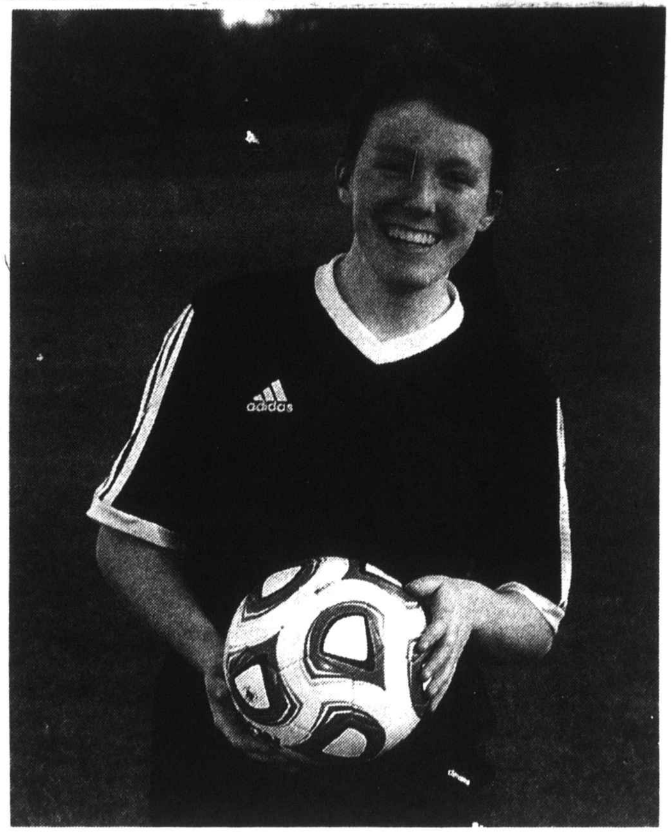
Arrangements for rental equipment will be done by the Recreation Department at the time of registration. Five-week rental of skis (with boots and poles) or a snowboard (with boots) is $85. Helmets are required and can also be rented for $30 for the five week program. Gift certificates are available for this program.

The program leaves from the office of the Quincy Recreation Department, One Merrymount Parkway at 3:30 p.m. and returns at 7 p.m.

The Blue Hill Ski Area is opening this year with increased snowmaking output, upgrades to its lighting systems and lifts.

Registrations must be done according to the schedule. The registration will continue at the Quincy Recreation Department, 1 Merrymount Parkway and online at QuincyRec.com until Friday, Dec. 18. There is limited enrollment available for this activity.

For more information call the Quincy Recreation Department at 617-376-1394 or online at QuincyRec.com.



MEGHAN FORDE

Meghan Forde Independent League Soccer All-Star

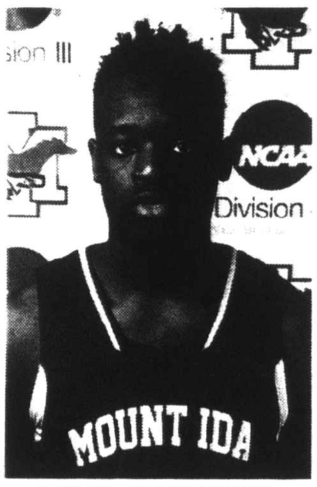
Meghan Forde of Quincy, a senior at Elizabeth Seton Academy, Dorchester, has been selected as an All Star soccer player by the coaches of the Girls Independent League.

Forde, #31, a captain and striker for the team, scored 13 goals this season,

"Meghan always put forth her best effort in support of her team, even when victory seemed unreachable," said Coach Frank Durant. "I can think of no other individual in this league who faced such adversity, yet was continuously striving to be the best she could be. Meghan Forde in my opinion is the quintessential player and team leader," Durant added.

Elizabeth Seton Academy, Boston's only all-girls Catholic high school, is an independent, urban school that provides a nurturing community that embraces religious, cultural, and ethnic diversity for learners from 25 communities within the city and the greater Boston area.

Solomon Umoren On Mount Ida Basketball Team



SOLOMON UMOREN

Solomon Umoren is a member of the basketball team at Mount Ida College. The 2015 graduate of North Quincy High School and co-captain of the Red Raiders is a freshman guard for the Division III Mustangs.

Mount Ida is off to a 3-1 start as part of the Great Northeast Athletic Conference, but Umoren's collegiate debut is on hold while he recuperates from recent knee surgery. Mount Ida head coach Ben Davis has high hopes for the 6-1 defensive specialist, one of three first-year players on his young squad.

"Solomon is one of the cornerstone players of our freshman class," said Davis, now in his third year at the Newton school. "He has a really bright future with the program as someone who can help us on both ends of the floor. He is a strong athletic defender and a hard worker with good character and work ethic."

Those are the traits Umoren displayed as a three-year varsity player at North Quincy High School. Last year, he co-captained a team that finished 11-9. He led the team in rebounds and was among its leading scorers.

Umoren was a member of the South Select All-Star team chosen for the 13th Annual Fitzy-Nolan Games, teaming up with top juniors and seniors south of Boston to take on the Boston Amateur Basketball Club (BABC) Juniors.

The year before, as a junior, Umoren helped the Red Raiders to a 23-2 record, the Patriot League championship and three tournament wins on its way to a second consecutive MIAA Division I South Sectional Final. Following the season, he was voted a Patriot League All-Star.

Umoren is studying interior design at Mount Ida and, along with Coach Davis, eagerly anticipating his chance to hit the court.

"We are looking forward to getting Solomon healthy and on the floor so he can help the team," said Davis.

friend.

"I think I know a little about his reads, a little about what he likes to do, and where he likes to throw the ball. He has a great arm," said Desmond.

Fallon was well aware of Desmond and Desmond's exceptional speed. The quarterback knew the free safety well. The free safety is his best friend.

"My one fear was that he would pick one off against me. With his speed, he might be gone. If that happened, I would not hear about it," said Fallon.

One of the best mottoes of the Thanksgiving is: Rivals during the game, friends when it is over. Few are better examples of the wise words than Fallon and Desmond.

"We will always be friends," said Desmond. "We talked the night before the game and there wasn't a lot of boasting. We walked through the line and shook hands after the game. Our families took our pictures.

"I'm sure there will be a little bragging. We have beaten them four times in a row on Turkey Day. And Joey will always let me know that my man was open for the TD pass he threw. It's something best friends do."

Best friends know everything about each other. They know funny stories. Desmond's was the taco story. Fallon has one of his own.

"We were in eighth grade and Broad Meadows," said Fallon. "There was a school show. I was on the stage crew, so I didn't have to perform anything. Cody sang a solo and sang in a group. He was just atrocious. You could hear that voice everywhere. I'm not kidding. Just awful."

Enough talk. The game was over. It was time for turkey. It was time for tacos.

Quincy's Abby Rose Plourde Among Four All-League Players

The Woodward Wildcats completed their 2015 soccer season with an impressive 11-1-2 record, which earned them the #2 spot in the league.

The Wildcats were top in the league for scoring, with 72 goals and 40 assists. Four members of the team received athletic awards from the Girl's Independent League (GIL), and Coach Bob Giordano said "This is the best soccer team that Woodward has ever produced."

Quincy resident, Abby Rose Plourde '16, was named a GIL All-League Player. In her final season wearing a Wildcat's jersey, Abby scored 17 goals and left her mark with eight assists. Abby is a multi-sport athlete, and she is a leader both on and off the pitch. In the 2014-2015 season, Abby was named to Independent Girl's Conference (IGC) All-Star list for both Varsity soccer and softball. She represented The Woodward School in October as the designated speaker at the annual wreath-laying ceremony for President John Adams' birthday. Abby has served as Class Vice President continuously since 9th grade and is a member of the National Honor Society.

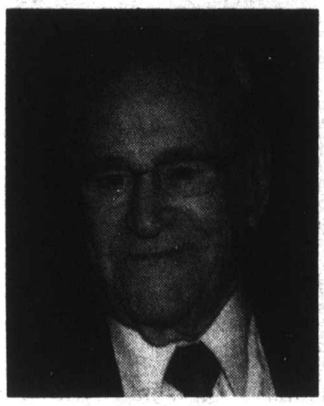
Aleksandra Kostick '16 of West Roxbury, was named GIL Most Valuable Player and All-League. Ali scored 19 goals and earned 15 assists this season. Ali will graduate from Woodward's soccer program as the second leading scorer in school history.

Randolph resident, Destiny Joseph '17, was named a GIL All-League Player. Recognized for her athleticism, Destiny's ability to play both defense and offense secured this honor.

Kelly Lynch '18 of Weymouth, was named a GIL All-League Player. Throughout her two years at Woodward, Kelly has played virtually every position and flourished when she was forced to fill in as sweeper when the senior sweeper went down with a season ending injury.

OBITUARIES

Alfred DiRico, 95



ALFRED DIRICO

A funeral Mass for Alfred "Fred" DiRico, 95, a lifelong Quincy resident, will be celebrated tomorrow (Friday) at 10 a.m. in St. Mary's Church, Quincy.

Mr. DiRico died peacefully Nov. 28 at Massachusetts General Hospital, surrounded by his loving family.

He was born on April 18, 1920, in Quincy to Italian immigrant parents, Francesco and Rose (Masciarelli) DiRico. Francesco entered the United States through Ellis Island, New York, in 1905 and Rose in 1914.

Mr. DiRico attended Quincy High School and graduated from Thayer Academy in Braintree. He went on to study at the Massachusetts School of Optometry and then to the University of Maine's College of Engineering. As World War II broke out, he enlisted the U.S. Army and attained the rank of 1st lieutenant. Mr. DiRico served with the Allied Forces in Europe and participated in the Rhineland Campaign. Honorably discharged, he received the European African Middle Eastern Service Medal, the World War II Victory Medal and the American Service Medal. After the war, he joined his family's business, the Hub Folding Box Company, Inc., formerly of Boston and now of Mansfield, where he worked until the age of 95.

Mr. DiRico was the president and owner of Hub Folding Box Company, Inc., which is the largest independent premier paper and plastic folding carton converter in the Northeast. Approaching its 100th Anniversary in 2018, Hub Folding Box Company, Inc., is a business that creates innovative custom designs and award winning packaging for leading consumer product companies. Mr. DiRico ran the company with his late brothers, Joseph and Henry, and late sister Mary "Millie" Flavin. His children Paul, Mark, Joseph and Jack and his nephew, Tony, continue to operate the business today.

His greatest love was his family, always placing his wife, children and grandchildren first. He enjoyed being with them above all else. He loved his summers on Cape Cod and weekend afternoons watching his favorite Boston sports teams. Mr. DiRico was also an avid horse race enthusiast as well as an owner and breeder. He loved travelling to Saratoga to see his horses run. He was a member of the Neighborhood Club of Quincy and the Wollaston Golf Club.

Beloved husband for 66 years of Rosalie M. (McWilliams) DiRico. Devoted father of Frank DiRico and his wife Jennifer of FL, Paul DiRico of Marshfield, Mark DiRico and his wife Lisa of Norwell, Joseph DiRico of Quincy, John "Jack" DiRico and his wife Krista of Marshfield, Margaret Carr and her husband Chris of CT. Loving grandfather of Sarah, Elizabeth, Katie and Emily DiRico, Fred and David DiRico, Jack, Matthew and Cameron DiRico, Timothy and Brian Carr. The last of four siblings, Mr. DiRico was predeceased by Joseph DiRico and his late wife Adeline, Mary M. "Millie" Flavin and her late husband Aloysius, Henry DiRico and his wife Patricia (Manion) DiRico of Milton. He is also survived by many treasured nieces, nephews, cousins and friends.

Visiting hours are 3-8 p.m. today (Thursday) at Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy. Funeral from the funeral home at 9 a.m. tomorrow, prior to the Mass.

Interment with Military Honors at Blue Hill Cemetery in Braintree followed by a reception at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy, 27 Glendale Rd.

Memorial donations may be made to the Friends of Mass General Cancer Center, 55 Fruit St., Boston, MA 02114.

Sharon M. Wheeler, 57

A funeral Mass for Sharon M. Wheeler, 57, will be celebrated at a later date.

Ms. Wheeler died Nov. 19.

She was born and raised in Dorchester and had lived in Quincy for many years. Ms. Wheeler was a manager for the GNC Vitamin and Nutrition Center in Walpole.

Devoted mother of Joseph P. Clifford of Braintree. She leaves behind her devoted lifelong companion Frank Clifford of Quincy. Beloved sister of Carole Lydon of NH, David Wheeler of Waltham, Paul Wheeler of ME, Mark Wheeler of ME and the late Laura Wheeler. Loving grandmother to Devin. Beloved daughter of the late Ronald and Lucille Wheeler. Also survived by her loving stepchildren Donna, Diane, Patty, Laurie, Frank and Brian. Also survived by many other loving family members.

Funeral arrangements were made by Clancy-Lucid Funeral Home, Weymouth.

Memorial donations may be made to the Quincy Animal Shelter, 56 Broad St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Hanging Of The Greens Ceremony Sunday

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold its annual Hanging of the Greens at the 10:30 a.m. worship service Sunday, Dec. 6.

The origin of the Hanging of the Greens ceremony is unknown.

"Evergreens have a very long symbolic history," said Rev. Dr. Susan Jarek-Glidden, pastor, Quincy Community United Methodist Church. "Since ancient times they have represented life and rebirth. This was especially true in those areas of the world where the winter months were long, dark and cold.

"The church adopted this ancient symbol and gave it new meaning, teaching that evergreens represent eternal life. At some point in time, someone literally brought evergreens into a church building, but precisely how and when that happened we just don't know," Dr. Jarek-Glidden said.

"Over time, decorating churches became a tradition, and evolved into the Hanging of the Greens," she added.

Many different versions of the Hanging of the Greens service exist. The one used at Quincy Community United Methodist Church combines readings from Scripture and songs, and was written by Dr. Jarek-Glidden. The real focus of the service, she says, is participation.

Before the service begins, everyone is invited to help decorate the Sanctuary with greenery. Then, at a certain point in the ceremony, volunteers are asked to carry out their part of the decorating.

"The decorating is informal and lots of fun," Dr. Jarek-Glidden said, "and that makes the Hanging of the Greens a great service for families and kids. Towards the end of the service, the church Christmas tree is lit for the first time.

The public is invited to participate in Sunday's ceremony. The building is handicapped accessible at the front doors nearest the flagpole.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

The Mackay and Rheault family will light the Peace advent candle. Steve Reed, minister of music will play and direct the choir.

Following the service a fellowship coffee hour is hosted by Nancy and Molly Jacobs.

The Christmas Post Office opens this Sunday to exchange cards with your church family. It is also the last day to bring unwrapped gifts for ISS children.

Amy Ross leads a yoga class every Tuesday and Thursday at 7 p.m. Bring a mat, water and $5.

Chanukah Celebration Dec. 6 At Beth Shalom-Blue Hills

Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills will celebrate the festive Jewish holiday of Chanukah with a Community-wide Family Celebration on Sunday, Dec. 6, from 10:30 a.m. to noon at Pierce Middle School, 451 Central Ave. (and Brook Road), Milton. This family Chanukah event for all ages will be under the direction of Education Director Nancy Mollitor and Rabbi Alfred Benjamin.

The celebration, sponsored by the congregation's Religious School, will include arts and crafts, games and songs, latkes and sufganiyot (jelly donuts). The event is open to the entire community. Admission is $5/pp, $3 under age 13, and free for children 3 and under, with a family maximum of $18.00.

This event is part of Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills' regular observance and celebration of all the holidays on the Jewish calendar, both solemn and festive. Chanukah is an eight day celebration of freedom, commemorating an ancient Jewish victory over tyranny and oppression against overwhelming odds. It is observed this year from the evening of Dec. 6th through Dec. 14th.

William T. Scanlon Jr., 67

A funeral Mass for William T. "Billy" Scanlon, Jr., 67, of Quincy was celebrated Monday in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mr. Scanlon died peacefully Nov. 22 at the E.M. Rogers Memorial Veterans Hospital in Bedford.

Born and raised in South Boston, he served two tours in Vietnam with the U.S. Army after high school. When he returned, he earned a bachelor's degree from Boston State College and began a career that ended with his retirement from the post office after 22 years of service.

A quiet yet witty man, Mr. Scanlon enjoyed life. He spent a lot of time with his family and friends, often showing his love by just being there for their most important moments. He was an avid reader and an accomplished photographer who in later years developed an interest in antiquing. He also enjoyed watching movies, golfing, playing cards or watching football with the guys, and going to the theater.

He was the devoted, caring and proud father of Sean Scanlon and his wife Lori of Brighton and a loving Papa Bill to his granddaughter Alexa Rose. He was a dear brother of Helen Monteagudo of Quincy, Paul Scanlon and his wife Sheila of Melrose, Robert Scanlon and his wife Kathleen of South Boston. He is also survived by Patricia Scanlon of Saugus and many cherished nieces and nephews.

Charlene Archer

A funeral service for Charlene (Delp) Archer of Quincy will be held today (Thursday) at 11 a.m. in the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene.

Mrs. Archer died Nov. 27 after a sudden illness.

Her life was centered around her family, especially her son Curran. She was a high school biology teacher at Bridgewater-Raynham Regional High School and also an adjunct professor at Quincy College. Being a mother and role model for children is where she excelled and her life's work was dedicated to bringing out the best in other people. A perfect day was one spent on the water in Wollaston Bay on her sailboat with her son Curran.

She supported many worthy causes but two dear to her heart were "Experience Camps" and cancer research. She ran several marathons, including Boston; she was a lover of art and was passionate about mentoring others. Mrs. Archer was a member of the Quincy Art Association and Wollaston Yacht Club. She will be remembered by her son as a loving and caring mother as well as an inspiration to all for her amazing life.

Helen M. Salkowski

A funeral Mass for Helen M. (Ryan) Salkowski of Quincy and formerly Bensenville, Ill., was celebrated yesterday (Wednesday) in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Salkowski died Nov. 25.

Her life revolved around her family. She was especially dedicated to raising her son John, who was disabled and in a wheelchair. Her care and John's life was an inspiration to so many people. She grew up in Bensenville, IL, and graduated cum laude from Case Western Reserve in Cleveland, OH. She and her husband met while working on the reservation bureau for the Milwaukee Railroad, where they both gained a passion for travel.

Over the years, Mrs. Salkowski traveled with her husband John, member of the BSO, on many Boston Symphony Orchestra tours in North America, the Far East, Europe and South America. In later years they enjoyed taking cruises to various destinations. Mrs. Salkowski was also an accomplished cook and experimented with many recipes she gathered from around the world. She was the kind of person people were naturally drawn to and enjoyed being in her company.

Devoted wife of John A. Salkowski of Quincy. Loving mother of John W. Salkowski of Plymouth. Cherished daughter of the late William Ryan and Helen (Velten). Sister of Roger Ryan of IL.

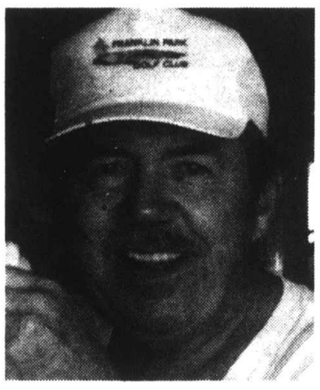
OBITUARIES

Francis X. Fournier



FRANCIS X. FOURNIER

A funeral Mass for Francis X. "Frank" Fournier of Squantum was celebrated Tuesday in St. Mary's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Fournier died Nov. 24.

Beloved husband of the late M. Lucille (Birrittieri) Fournier. Loving father of Frank A. Fournier, Steven J. Fournier and his wife Cheryl, Laura E. Hobin and her husband Ned, Edward J. Fournier and his wife Kelly, all of Quincy, and Susan M. Rowse and her husband Danny of North Easton. Cherished grandfather of Ashley and Thomas Fournier of Quincy, Jarad Rowse of North Easton and the late Amanda Jean Fournier. Great-grandfather of Skylar Marie. Dear brother of Thomas and his wife Joan of Hudson, FL, Joseph and his wife Mary of Cape Coral, FL and the late Arthur "Sonny" Fournier. Also survived by many loving nieces, nephews, cousins and friends.

Mr. Fournier loved the sea; as a young man he was the captain for Fournier Marine Tugs in East Boston. In 1960, he established the family business, Fournier Construction, where he was a proud teacher of many tradesmen throughout the years. He was a lifelong member of the Old Colony Yacht Club in Dorchester as well as a member of the Moose Club. Mr. Fournier enjoyed boating, reading, vacationing in his winter home in Tamarac, Fla., and golfing. He had a quick wit and a great sense of humor that will be missed by all who knew him. His passion was spending time with his grandkids and family.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy

Memorial donations may be made to Old Colony Hospice, 1 Credit Union Way, Randolph, MA 02368.

Joseph F. Burm, Jr., 87

A funeral Mass for Joseph F. Burm, Jr., 87, of Quincy, beloved husband of the late Helene L. (Tucker) Burm, was celebrated yesterday (Wednesday) in St. Joseph's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Burm died peacefully Nov. 27 at home, surrounded by his loving family.

He was born and raised in South Boston and lived in Quincy for 60 years. He was an electrician in the railroad industry for more than 40 years. He began his career with the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, then later worked for Penn Central and finally with Amtrak. Mr. Burm was a World War II veteran and proudly served as a sergeant in the U.S. Marine Corps in the China Theater where he received the China Service Medal.

He was a longtime member of St. Joseph's Parish in Quincy and was a Eucharistic minister. He was also a member of the IBEW Local 103 for 65 years, the Town River Yacht Club, the YMCA and a bowling league. Mr. Burm was devoted to his family and loved being "grampy" to his 14 grandchildren and great-granddaughter.

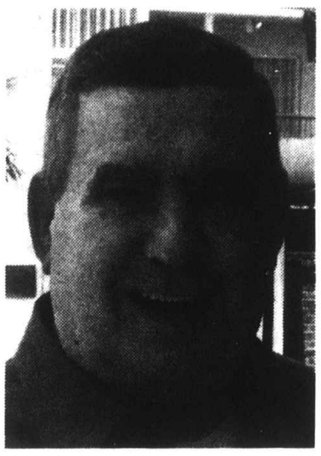
Devoted father of Helene M. Pierce of CA, Joseph W. Burm of Norwell, Susan Burm of Quincy, John J. Burm, Jeffrey D. Burm, both of Hingham, Jerald Burm of Randolph, Jeremy B. Burm of Hingham, the late John Jude Burm and the late James A. Burm. Brother of Barbara Hart of Franklin, Gerard Burm of Braintree and the late Richard Burm, Jeanne Rauseo and Ella Burm.

Funeral arrangements were made by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Interment with Military Honors at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Simon of Cyrene Society, P.O. Box 54, South Boston, MA 02127 or to Grow Associates, Inc., 68 Mazzeo Drive, Randolph, MA 02368.

Edward F. Lawlor, Sr., 81



EDWARD F. LAWLOR, SR.

A funeral Mass for Edward F. Lawlor, Sr., 81, of Quincy will be celebrated Saturday at 9 a.m. in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mr. Lawlor died peacefully Nov. 28 at South Shore Hospital, surrounded by his loving family.

He was born in Boston, raised and educated in St. Patrick's Parish in Roxbury and later attended Newbury College on the GI Bill. He had lived in Quincy for more than 55 years.

Mr. Lawlor was employed by the Goodman Knitting Company in Brockton for 25 years as a warehouse manager and had been retired many years. Previously, he had worked for the former Sandler Shoe Company of Boston. He was proud to have served in the U.S. Army in the late 1950s.

Mr. Lawlor was a legendary couponer, enjoyed playing the lottery, and he loved "good food." He was a family man, devoted to his "bride," his children and especially his grandchildren.

Beloved husband and best friend for 56 years to his cherished bride Mary G. (McDonald) Lawlor. Devoted father of James P. Lawlor and his wife Carol L. (Bailey) Lawlor of Weymouth, Marie A. Lawlor of Quincy, the late Edward F. Lawlor, Jr. and his wife Anita M. Horne Lawlor of Bellingham. Loving "Grampy" of Benjamin Lawlor and his wife Kristen, Michael Lawlor and his wife Angela, Rachel, Declan and Dillon Lawlor.

Dear son of the late John J. and Antoinette (Moison) Lawlor. One of nine siblings, he was the brother of Helena Burns of Belmont and predeceased by John, Lawrence, Richard, Gilbert, Paul, Robert Lawlor and Alice Barrett. He is also survived by many loving nieces, nephews and Godchildren.

Visiting hours are 4-8 p.m. tomorrow (Friday) at Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy. Funeral from the funeral home at 8 a.m. Saturday, prior to the Mass.

Casual attire is acceptable for those attending Mr. Lawlor's wake.

Interment services will be private.

Memorial donations may be made to benefit the healthcare expenses of Mr. Lawlor's grandnephew Cameron Liberatore, c/o https://www.gofundme.com/cameronliberatore.

Marion F. Foy, 97

A Mass of Christian Burial for Marion F. (St. John) Foy, 97, of Braintree and formerly Quincy was celebrated Monday in St. Francis of Assisi Church, Braintree.

Mrs. Foy died Nov. 24.

She was the former owner of the Susan Welch Nursing Home in Middleborough and administrator of the John Scott Nursing Home in Braintree.

Beloved wife of the late Jack Welch, the late George Pattison and the late Charles Foy. Daughter of the late Arthur and Florence St. John. Devoted mother of Carole Buker and her husband David of Braintree, John Welch and his wife Sally of Whitman, Stephen Welch and his wife Nancy of Scituate and the late Susan Welch. Cherished sister of the late Edna Logan, Rita Welch, Mary Montani, Arthur St. John, Ruth St. John and Fredrick St. John. Loving "Nana" of 12 grandchildren, 28 great-grandchildren, two great great-grandchildren and also survived by many nieces, nephews, in-laws, and friends.

Funeral arrangements were made by Alfred D. Thomas Funeral Home, Milton.

Interment at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) At this time you might want to resist that otherwise admirable Aries penchant for getting to the heart of a matter quickly. Keep in mind that a delicate situation calls for patience.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your aspects favor more diplomacy and fewer direct confrontations when dealing with a relationship problem. Avoiding hurt feelings can help in your search for the truth.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Positive aspects are strong this week. Although you might still have to deal with some problems caused by a recent period of turmoil, you are making progress, and that's what counts.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A family matter could benefit from your counsel. But don't come into it unless invited, and don't stay if you feel uneasy. Just remember to reassure one and all that you'll be there for them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) As the truth about an ongoing situation emerges, you could find that you were right to defer judgment before you had all the facts. Now would be a good time to move on to other matters.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your plans to take control of a personal situation because you feel you are best qualified could create resentment. Best to hear what everyone else involved in the matter has to say about it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Uncovering some surprising background facts about that ongoing personal matter could make you reconsider the extent of your involvement. A neutral family member offers advice.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Religious or spiritual themes start to dominate your aspect this week. This can serve as a counterweight to the mounting effects of the season's growing commercialization.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Taking on that recent challenge impressed a lot of important decision-makers. Meanwhile, proceed with your holiday plans, and don't forget to include you-know-who in them.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Disagreeing with an opinion you can't accept could be dicey, and your motives might be questioned. Best to wait to mount a challenge until you have support for your position.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Getting involved in helping others in this increasingly hectic period not only makes the generous Aquarian feel good, but you could also gain a more substantive benefit from your actions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The Piscean way of thinking clearly and objectively helps you resolve a complex situation without creating any ill will. Don't be surprised if your counsel is requested on another matter.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of persuading people to look at the positive possibilities that make up any choices they might face.

‘A Miraculous Transformation’

Ceremony Celebrates Reopening Of McIntyre Government Center

By SCOTT JACKSON

A standing-room-only crowd of more than 300 residents and city, state and federal officials filled the Great Hall inside the newly restored James R. McIntyre Center Saturday during a ceremony to celebrate the re-opening of the 171-year-old historic building four years after it closed to the public.

“We are here rededicating what is our heritage, our history and truly a gift for future generations,” Mayor Thomas Koch said.

The McIntyre Government Center, also known as Old City Hall, first opened in 1844 and is thought to be the oldest municipal building still in use nationwide. The building, made from Quincy granite and designed by the same man who built the Bunker Hill Monument, Solomon Willard, had been renovated previously in 1901 and 1921, when offices were added to building's second and third floors.

The newly restored Great Hall encompasses much of the second floor, as it would have before the 1921 renovation work, with a balcony on the third floor providing additional seating. The Great Hall will serve as the chamber for the City Council.

The first floor of the building, which will open to the public in January, is divided between exhibit space and a second meeting room for the city's boards and commissions. For Saturday's dedication, panels detailing the history of Quincy and the McIntyre Government Center were added along with various historic artifacts, such as the cedar tree where Thomas Morton landed in Merrymount in 1625. Portraits of Quincy's former mayors, beginning with the first - Charles Porter who was elected on Dec. 4, 1888 – line the wall of the meeting room.

"It's pretty humbling to be up here and think about the men and women who have served in this building over the years," Koch said at Saturday's ceremony. "The first mayor, Charles Porter, was a veteran and hero of the Civil War. Charles Francis Adams III went on to become the secretary of the Navy under Herbert Hoover. It's pretty incredible, the folks who walked through here."

The mayor noted the McIntyre Government Center is one of many historic buildings in Quincy Center, along with the United First Parish Church, the Crane Library, the Coddington Building, Adams Academy, Bethany Congregational Church and the Granite Trust Building.

"We are truly, truly blessed with some architectural gems," Koch said.

The restoration of the building took two years and cost $12 million. A portion of the project cost, about $500,000 a year, is being paid from community preservation funds.

Holmes & Edwards was chosen in 2010 to complete a study of conditions inside the aging building. The deficiencies found during that study resulted in the closure of the building in August 2011. From there, Holmes & Edwards worked with city officials to plan and oversee the restoration work, which began in 2013.

James Edwards, president of the architectural firm as well as the president of the Quincy Historical Society, thanked a number of people for their contributions to the

Residential Tax Bills Rising $296 On Average

Council Votes 6-1 To Approve Koch's Proposed Tax Rates • Average Home Value Up 7.7%

By SCOTT JACKSON

Residential property owners will see their tax bills increase by an average of nearly $300 next year, the largest such increase in the city since 2009.

The City. Council on Monday night approved the 2016 tax rates introduced by Mayor Thomas Koch's administration in a pair of 6-1 votes after holding a public hearing on property taxes, which no residents spoke at. The owner of an average single-family home, valued at $367,500, will pay $5,277 in property taxes in 2016, which is an increase of $296 (5.94 percent) over this year. In 2015, the average single-family home was valued at $341,158 with a $4,981 property tax bill.

The increase next year is the largest since 2009, when the average property tax bill for a single-family home increased $530 over the previous year. The average bill decreased by $2 in 2010 and $1 in 2011 before increasing $105 in 2012, $120 in 2013, $160 in 2014 and $224 in 2015.

The tax rate for residential properties approved Monday night is $14.36 per thousand dollars of assessed value, down from the 2015 rate of $14.60. The average value of single-family homes citywide increased by 7.7 percent, which means property owners will still see their taxes increase.

The rate for commercial, industrial and personal property (CIPP) is $29.37 for 2016, down from $30.26 in 2015. The assessed value of commercial property values in the city remained flat.

The total tax levy for 2016 – the amount of property taxes collected – is $201.7 million, up from $197.8 million in 2015, an increase of 2 percent. Mark Cavanagh, the city's director of municipal finance, noted that is the fourth lowest increase in the total levy over the past 20 years.

The council voted 7-0 to use $3 million in free cash to help keep the levy down.

The levy limit for this year, the maximum amount the city could collect without asking voters to approve an override, is $225.1 million, giving the city an excess levy capacity of $23.4 million. The excess levy capacity in 2015 was $19.9 million. Communities statewide have an average excess levy capacity of $1.2 million, according to administration officials, and many cities tax nearly to the limit.

"Boston has a $1.8 billion levy limit – about nine times bigger than Quincy," Cavanagh said. "Their excess levy limit is about $190,000. They go right to the max and most cities do, but we don't."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci cast both dissenting votes related to the tax rates and Councillors Doug Gutro and Brian McNamee were both absent.

Palmucci said the property tax increases seen this year and in recent years have been caused by cuts to local aid allocated in the state budget and not reckless spending on the city's part. Residential property owners in the city are being squeezed out by that additional burden, he stated.

"People are paying more. People's wallets are suffering…I get to speak to a lot of our seniors and it's rare in those conversations that they don't say they are struggling financially," Palmucci said.

"They're hurting. These folks are getting squeezed. Quincy folks are increasingly unable to afford Quincy. Increasing property values sounds great if you're selling your home but if you want to stay in it, live in and raise your family in it, then increasing property values means only thing: More money out of your pocket and less money for everything else."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said he appreciated the sentiment raised by Palmucci, but the council had no choice but to approve the tax rates.

"We have a Hobson's choice here: We either vote

Planner: 4,000 More Housing Units Needed

By SCOTT JACKSON

Some 4,000 new units of housing – both market rate and affordable – need to be constructed in Quincy over the next five years to keep up with soaring demand, according to a draft of the city's housing production plan.

Ralph Willmer, a principal planner with the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, provided the Planning Board with an update on the new housing production plan at the board's meeting on Dec. 3. The plan will be finalized in early 2016 before it goes to both the Planning Board and City Council for local approval and then to the state's Department of Housing and Community Development for final approval.

Housing production plans such as the one being finalized for Quincy are made to help communities statewide deal with housing issues foreseen over the next five years, Willmer explained. The plans also addresses the need for affordable housing in communities – housing for individuals making less than 80 percent of the area's median income – and meeting the 10 percent threshold included in Chapter 40B of state law.

Quincy's housing production plan for the next five years is based on MAPC projections showing more than 8,000 additional households living in the city by 2030.

"The population of the city is growing and it is getting more diverse," Willmer said. "Projections by MAPC, and we have all sorts of data sources to help us with these projections, show the population will increase and there will be a little bit more than 8,000 more households between now and 2030."

Half of those households will be non-family households, such as single individuals or people living with roommates, Willmer added.

To help meet that growing demand, 4,000 new housing units are needed over the course of the next five years.

"Demand shows there will be a need for about 4,000 more housing units by 2020, both affordable and market rate units, to meet the needs that are projected," Willmer said. "The city has a fairly high rate of low-income households and cost burdened households that would qualify for any affordable housing units that are developed."

IN APPRECIATION OF THE PAST

When anyone is fortunate enough to inherit old diamond jewelry, he or she may wonder whether to recut the diamond or leave it as is. This consideration should take into account the technological limitations of its day, which may have an impact on the diamond's brilliance. In some cases, these older diamonds are recut to today's standards, after diamonds with old-mine cuts (rounded square) and old-European cuts (round with 58 facets) are evaluated in comparison with modern-cut stones. Value is determined by estimating the color, clarity, and weight that the gemstone would retain if cut to modern proportions. However, many people are choosing not to recut old diamonds and to simply appreciate them for their Old World charm.

The diamond collection at Rogers Jewelry contains virtually any shape and size imaginable. We maintain, along with three other jewelers, a permanent presence in the diamond centers of the world. This established relationship affords us the ability to bring you all the qualities, sizes, and shapes at value prices. If we don't have it in stock we will get it, usually within 72 hours with no obligation on the customer's part. For more information, please call 617-773-3636. We are located at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

ERECTED
JAMES R. McINTYRE
GOVERNMENT CENTER

McINTYRE

And the first reviews from many of the more than 300 guests gathered in the building's signature room – the Great Hall – for the one-hour celebration ceremony were unequivocal. Stunning, magnificent, beautiful. Those were just some of the adjectives used to describe the 171-year-old building after a four-year, $12 million restoration.

The top-to-bottom, inside and out, total rehab and first significant overhaul and update since the Town Hall building first opened in 1844 is much more than cosmetic. Sure, there's polished cherry wood accents, plush deep red and gold carpeting and period-accurate colored walls (the green wall paint is called Georgian Green) throughout the Great Hall. There's also a new third-floor balcony as well as museum space and smaller meeting rooms in the first floor.

But just as impressive and perhaps more important is the state-of-art improvements that have now prepared this building to serve the city's citizens for generations to come.

There's new HVAC, electrical, plumbing, and a fire suppression system. And let's not underestimate the fire system. During the restoration project the building was nearly lost during a major fire. Without the quick and professional response from nearly every Quincy firefighter on duty when the fire struck, the building's roof would have caved in. That would have been the end to that building and a giant piece of the city's history gone with it.

There's also an elevator just inside the new public and handicap accessible entrance located between the McIntyre Center and the glass City Hall annex.

If there were ever a perfect match between modern technology and updated architect married with the grand Quincy granite exterior designed by famed architect Solomon Willard, well, this is it.

Everyone who worked night and day for nearly four years to completely restore this building deserves praise and gratitude. Some of those individuals were thanked during Saturday's ceremony.

One person singled out several times was Mayor Thomas Koch. Perhaps architect James Edwards said it best when he thanked Koch for his "wisdom and political courage" in steering the project forward from conception to realization. The mayor has taken some heat for the project's multi-million dollar price tag from some doubters who called the expense a waste of money.

The cost of project was not a price tag nor was it a waste of funds. It was an investment in the building's future and its ability to serve the city for years to come.

The building is something the city – and all its residents – should be proud of.

And it may be the best $12 million the city's ever spent. If you don't agree, then take the time to go through the building and see for yourself. The building should be open to the public sometime after the first of the year.

And here's a little context as far as what the building used to be like.

Windows that leaked. A roof that was failing. Mold and mildew in the basement. Heat and air conditioning that was as fickle at best – and that's when they kicked on at all.

Carpeting that looked more like it belonged in a fraternity house than a municipal building.

Wiring that dated back to the first Plan A form of government (1917-1949) or earlier in some spots.

The list of deplorable conditions goes on and on.

The mayor appeared a little embarrassed when some compliments were aimed his way at Saturday's ceremony. He had the final say before the Great Hall emptied and those attending toured the rest of the structure.

The hall doesn't feature any government offices, he noted. It's for the people of this city: today, tomorrow and for many years to come.

Final comment:

Thirty years ago last month the old Town/City Hall was dedicated in memory of the late James R. McIntyre – a beloved public official who served the city as a city councillor, mayor, state representative and senator before his sudden passing in 1984 at the all-too-young age of 53. His loss left a void in his family, with friends and this city. It's not a stretch to think that Mr. McIntyre had so much more to give and offer in public service and this city would be even a better place had he lived a full life.

A resolve passed by the City Council on June 17, 1985 and signed by then Mayor Francis McCauley designated the hall as the "James R. McIntyre Government Center." The designation was dedicated Nov. 3, 1985 and was attended by members of Mr. McIntyre's family including his wife, Sheila, two daughters Sheila and Liz and son, Charles.

Part of the resolve renaming the building in McIntyre's honor stated "James R. McIntyre's life personifies the highest commitment to the ideals and attributes of government and public service, and

"James R. McIntyre effectively improved and indelibly enriched the course and integrity of his City, the Commonwealth and his Country, and

"The City of Quincy's motto: 'It Remains,' denotes permanence, embodies James R. McIntyre's spirit, commitment, and contributions to government."

It was a tremendous honor and well deserved but unfortunately, the name has not stuck.

The city has other buildings and streets named for beloved public officials. And those memorials have endured as part of the city's lexicon.

But not the McIntyre Government Center. Many still call it Old City Hall.

We hope the restoration spurs a new reminder to refer to the building as the McIntyre Center.

It would also help eliminate any confusion between the granite building and the glass annex. The latter is City Hall which houses many municipal departments including the mayor and city council offices as well as the city clerk.

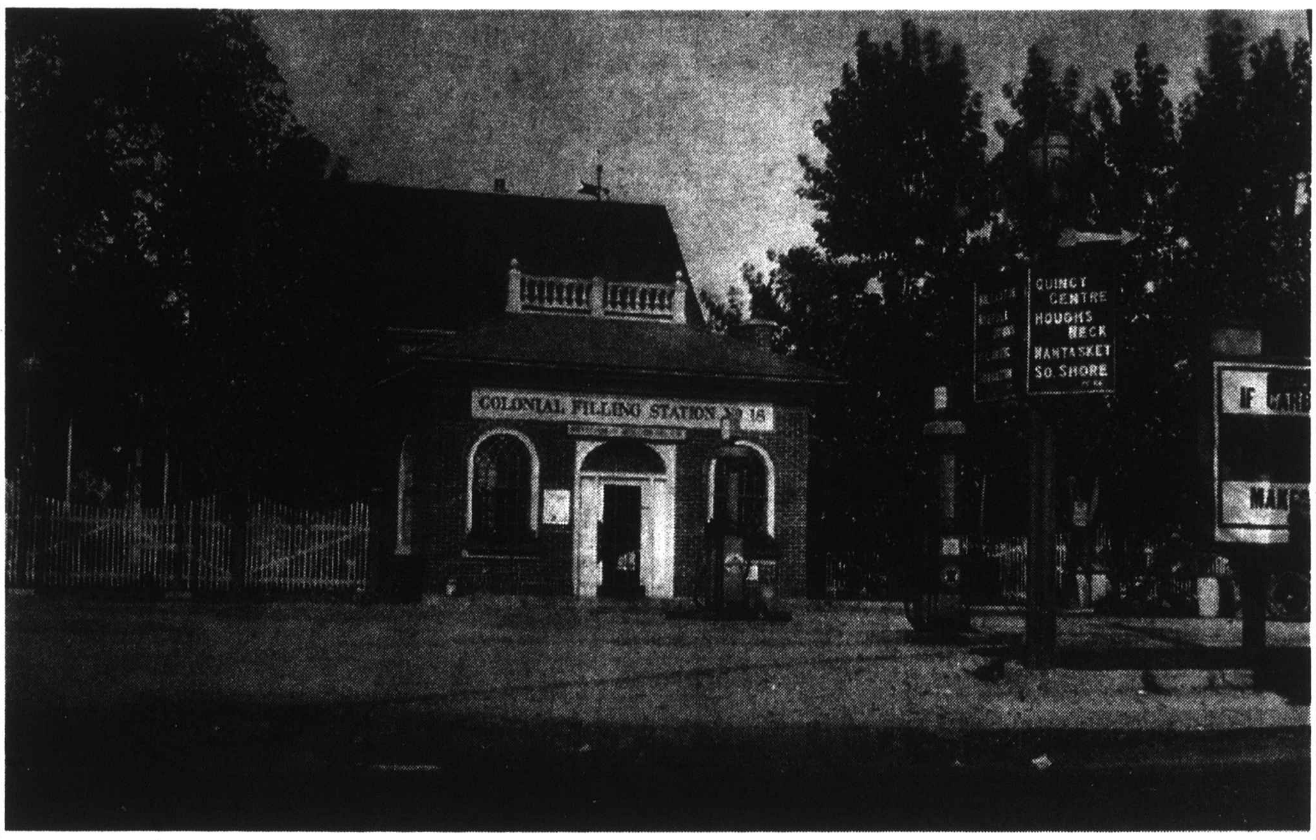
The granite building next to the glass building is and should be referred to as the James R. McIntyre Government Center.

Mr. McIntyre's memory deserves to be preserved and perpetuated just as some of the predecessors and successors have.

Here's hoping many of you will stop by and see for yourself the wonderful restoration work at 1305 Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

The James R. McIntyre Government Center is a sight to behold – and remember in name.

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS LATE 1920s postcard is a view of the Colonial Filling Station that was on the corner of Beale and Adams Streets in Lakin Square. This was number 18 in a chain of Colonial gas stations in greater Boston. There were three in Quincy. By 1940 this became an Esso station and remained as such until the South Boston Savings Bank branch was built diagonally across the intersection in the 1970s and they purchased this corner for extra parking space. It is now used for parking by the Villa Rosa Restaurant. At the time of this photo, Adams Street was part of Route 135 that connected Quincy to the Norfolk County seat at Dedham and on to Needham. This intersection was the gateway to Quincy for its western neighbors until the Route 128 divided highway was extended to just south of Quincy in the late 1950s. Note the old style directional wayfinding signs which were lit at night. Out of sight on the right was a large billboard welcoming visitors to Quincy: "the fastest growing city in Massachusetts" and encouraging them to see the historic sites especially the granite quarries. Restored McIntyre Center: A Souce Of Pride

I am writing this letter after just returning home from a tour of the James R. McIntyre Government Center in Quincy Square.

I left city hall this afternoon very proud to be a resident of our historic city. The restoration of old city hall is truly beautiful, with newly exposed granite walls, granite floors from demolished city buildings, and walls of windows overlooking our historic cemetery. The displays of artifacts are truly museum worthy and the accompanying narrative texts wonderfully informative.

The crowning touch is the Great Hall with its new windows where once offices were and the newly exposed gallery. I strongly encourage anyone who didn't take the opportunity to tour the building during the open house to walk through our historic landmark. I would be remiss if I didn't commend and thank Jim Edwards, the lead architect, and our elected officials for an exceptional job. It is a building of which we should all be proud.

As home owners in the city, many of us often complain about our taxes, but I feel very fortunate to live in a city which provides so many necessary services and places great value on its historic landmarks.

As I left city hall today and looked out on Quincy Square, I was filled with hope because I could see a very bright future for our wonderful city.

Wants Update On YMCA Parking Lot

Does anyone know what the status is of the parking lot at the YMCA?

I'm asking here, because the Y management is not responsive to members request for information and updates. Despite repeated requests that the Y post info on a bulletin board or include it in its newsletters, there has been no information on the parking situation for many months.

The daily chaos of parking at 9 a.m. Monday - Friday is a frustration that afflicts many, yet it appears the Y's management approach is to ignore it. Perhaps, they think, if they don't talk about it, no one else will.

They are wrong on that.

Perhaps, it is that after years of delays, the Y's management team has run out of excuses as to why the parking situation remains horrendous? If that is the case, I suggest they ask for pointers from the children in one of their pre-school classrooms. For there is nothing so inventive in excuses as a three-year-old who is asked how something was broken. For the parking situation remains "broken."

Cars are circling looking for spots, other cars are parked in ways that make it difficult to get out and members are frustrated.

So, I ask here…does anyone know when the parking lot at the Y will be fixed? Regular reports on this matter would be greatly appreciated.

Mourning The Loss Of A Teammate And Friend

I am feeling very sad today (Dec. 4) upon hearing the death of my friend, Jim Loscutoff.

Jim and I were teammates on the Boston Celtics and we became good friends which lasted a lifetime. He was the Athletic Director at Boston State and when Boston State closed, Jim called me and asked if I could get him into UMass which I successfully accomplished. Red Auerbach used to call Jungle Jim his enforcer as he protected Bill Russell and other teammates.

I have been friends with him for nearly 60 years and he will be sadly missed.

May he rest in peace.

Serving Quincy's Needs Of The Future

As I read in The Quincy Sun recently an issue has reportedly come up by several city councilors who represent different wards in and around the Quincy Center shopping/business district. I hope that like in a larger scale in Downtown Boston, that residential units in downtown districts can work. Instead of all the lights going out at 5 pm, life will continue long into the evening if folks actually live in the area and in turn will bring others out others from across the City of Quincy and nearby communities to shop and dine out along Quincy Center's Hancock Street stretch.

I believe the re-routing

Fore River Bridge Widening Sought To Help Shipyard

A new move is underway to widen the span of the Fore River Bridge to at least 300 feet to allow General Dynamics-Quincy Division to bid on contracts for supersized ships.

Mayor - Senator James R. McIntyre has filed a bill which would direct the state Department of Public Works to modify the present structure to "provide a horizontal opening of not less than 300 feet."

The present bridge, dating back to 1936, has a horizontal clearance of only 175 feet between abutments on the water line.

NEW HOUGHS NECK CENTER SPANS GENERATION GAP

In two short weeks of operation the Sgt. Lawrence Grehan Youth Center in Houghs Neck has built a major bridge across the generation gap. An improved relationship between youths and adults may be one of the major dividends emerging from the new center.

The center's ad hoc director, Fr. Eugene Boyle of Blessed Sacrament Church, recognizes that the center is not the final answer, but it is, he rates, an important step.

Arts & Entertainment

Christmas Benefit Concert Saturday, Sunday

Two years ago Highrock Church in Quincy held their first annual Christmas Benefit Concert. The vision of this young church was to celebrate the joy of the Christmas season through contemporary and gospel choral music and fine art, while raising funds and awareness for the challenging realities of homelessness in Boston and the South Shore.

The concert has raised nearly $10,000 for Home with Friends, an organization that seeks to walk families from homelessness into independence. One of the highlights of the event is art that is displayed and sold by artists from Common Art, a Boston area outreach to homeless artists. Last year the concert was attended by close to 400 people in two sold out shows.

The choir and artists are preparing for three shows on Saturday, Dec. 12 at 7 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 13 at 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. at the Covenant Church of Quincy, 315 Whitwell St. in Quincy. Information and tickets are available at www.highrockquincy.org/christmas.

Winter Concert Sunday

The Wollaston Congregational Church, 48 Winthrop Ave. will present a winter concert Sunday, Dec. 13 at 2 p.m.

Featured guest soloists from the Boston Conservatory of Music will be Courtney Miller, Mezzo Soprano who will perform Songs by Amy Beach; Simon Dyer, Bass-Baritone who will sing songs by Franz Schubert; and pianist Sally Vanderploeg.

Also performing in the concert will be local musicians Caroline Hughes, flute; Frances Guida, piano; and Nancy O'Conner, cello.

In addition to the musical selections, there will be seasonal poetry reading by Simon Ford, Connor Mui, and Rev. Fred Hayes.

A meet and greet with performers featuring refreshments and Christmas caroling will follow the concert.

The concert is free. The public is invited to attend

'The Same Heart' At Broad Meadows School

Film Screening Tonight Highlights Human Rights

Filmmaker Len Morris will screen his latest human rights documentary at Broad Meadows Middle School tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m.

This film features experts from Nobel Laureates to the grassroots' young activists of Quincy High and Broad Meadows Middle Schools.

The film, entitled "The Same Heart," documents the impacts of inequality on children around the world, while proposing a practical solution for raising the funds to meet their needs. It is narrated by journalist/activist, Charlayne Hunter-Gault.

Filmed in 11 countries including the U.S., "The Same Heart" features a global cast that includes Nobel Peace Laureates Archbishop Desmond Tutu, Kailash Satyarthi, Shirin Ebadi, Wangari Maathai, Mairead Maguire and Nobel economists Joseph Stiglitz and Paul Krugman along with ethicist Peter Singer and economist Dean Baker. Also featured in the film is the role local youth are playing to their campaign to end poverty and child labor.

Students from Quincy's Broad Meadows Middle School and Vermont's Thetford Acdemy are highlighted as is their ongoing global service learning project "Operation Day's Work-USA."

They join their voices with community activists and children from Kenya to Baltimore - part of a growing movement that puts the needs of children at the center of the world economy. By endorsing a global financial transactions tax, funds could be generated every year to save the lives of the over six million children who die each year from preventable causes, restoring their lives, educations and futures.

Partnering with Media Voices is the Harlem, New York-based record label, Motema Music, whose talented artists have provided a pro bono global soundtrack from Mali to Morocco to New Orleans, New York and beyond, enriching the emotional power of the film.

The Same Heart is the third film in a trilogy on children's human rights produced by Martha's Vineyard-based Galen Films, the production team behind Stolen Childhoods (2005), the first global survey of child labor, and Rescuing Emmanuel (2009), a deeply felt examination of the life and struggles of a Kenyan street boy.

In 2012, Len Morris received the Iqbal Masih Award from The U.S. Department of Labor for his work to end child labor. He is the recipient of the Walter Cronkite Award and Images and Voices of Hope Award. Len and Georgia's films have aired on HBO, TNT, AMC, PBS, ABC and NBC and have been released theatrically, translated into multiple languages, broadcast around the world and honored with numerous industry awards and an Independent Filmmaker Award from the American Film Institute.

Register O'Donnell On QATV Monday

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will appear as a guest on Joe Catalano's QATV show, 'Currently in Quincy,' on Monday, Dec. 14th at 11:30 a.m.

O'Donnell will discuss the City of Quincy and Norfolk County's year-to-date real estate statistics. The information will include but not be limited to current real estate sales, mortgage activities, and the number of foreclosure deed recordings.

O'Donnell will also talk about the Homestead Act. The law protects homeowners against the forced sale of their primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000.

Other topics covered by O'Donnell will include the Registry's consumer protection efforts on behalf of Norfolk County residents. O'Donnell will warn consumers about an ongoing deed scam where land owners are receiving notifications in the mail from an unscrupulous California company soliciting $83 from consumers to receive a copy of their deed. A copy can be obtained from the Registry for a usual fee of $2 to $3.

O'Donnell will also discuss the Registry's new Consumer Notification Service. Under the new program, Norfolk County consumers can sign up free of charge and be notified by email when a land document has been recorded against their name.

O'Donnell will also go over the method of accessing home information through on-line research, as well as using the Registry's customer service center at 781-461-6101.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is a resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information.

Residents in need of assistance can contact the Registry of Deeds Customer Service Department via telephone at (781) 461-6101, or on the web at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Ice Skating Lessons Begin Jan. 6

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct an eight-week program of ice skating lessons with two classes on Wednesday afternoons at the Quincy Youth Arena.

The program, available to boys and girls age 6-14, teaches fundamentals of skating.

Registration begins today (Thursday.) Online registration can be done on the Department website, www.QuincyRec.com. Walk-in registration will take place at the main office at the Quincy Recreation Department located at One Merrymount Parkway beginning at 9 a.m. and will continue on weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. as long as openings exist.

The program will have two separate classes beginning at 3:10 and 4:05 p.m. on Wednesdays starting Jan. 6. Both classes offer the same levels of instruction and run for eight weeks.

The cost of the program is $70 for the eight-week session, which includes instruction and ice time. Participants need to provide their own skates, which may be figure or hockey skates with a single blade.

Registration is done on a first come first served basis. For more information call the Quincy Recreation Department at 617-376-1394, or online at QuincyRec.com.

Events Celebrate The Blue Hills

This month and next will feature several events hosted by different organizations as part of a celebration of the Blue Hills. All are free. They are listed in chronological order below.

Sunday, Dec. 27, 2 p.m.
Exploring the St. Moritz Winter Carnival

From 1929 to 1937 there was a winter carnival in the Blue Hills featuring speed skating, barrel jumping, figure skating, toboggoning and ski jumping.

Over 50,000 people attended some of these annual events. Using old photographs, Sally Owen and tour participants will search for the vestiges of these activities.

Meet at the Shea Rink parking lot, 651 Willard St. Rain date is Monday, Dec. 28, 2 p.m. For more information and rain date rescheduling, call 617/472-0799. Sponsored by the Quincy Park Dept. Environmental Treasures program.

Tuesday, Jan. 12, 7 p.m.
The Spectacular Blue Hills Past and Present

This presentation at the library will feature a short silent 1930s era movie of the St. Moritz Winter Carnival followed by an illustrated talk by Laura Beebe, Friends of the Blue Hills Board Member, highlighting the variety of opportunities for the public to enjoy the Blue Hills today.

Meet at the Thomas Crane Library Community Room, 40 Washington St. For more information, call 617/472-0799. Sponsored by the Friends of the Blue Hills, the Thomas Crane Library and the Quincy Park Dept. Environmental Treasures program.

GRADE FOUR STUDENTS at St. Agatha School recently hosted a bake sale to benefit cancer research. Principal Kyle Egan is shown with Grace and Ella Connolly, both of Quincy, who organized this special event that raised $1,253 which is a school record. Third grade students also hosted a bake sale to raise money for The Boston Children's Hospital and The Quincy Food Pantry.

'Christmas In Newport' Bus Tour

Brush Hill Transportation Company dba Brush Hill Tours and the Gray Line licensee for Boston and Cape Cod, is offering a seasonal "Christmas in Newport" tour.

The tour is available Sunday, Dec. 13; and Sunday, Dec. 20. All tours depart at 9:30 a.m., and complimentary pick-up and return is available from most Boston hotels and in Braintree, Randolph, and Quincy.

The tour feature stops at The Breakers, a 70-room mansion on 11 acres of oceanfront land, and Marble House, William K. Vanderbilt's summer home comprised of 500,000 cubic feet of white marble. Both houses are National Historic Landmarks and icons of the Gilded Age in America, and will be filled with thousands of poinsettias, fresh flowers, and evergreens, as well as several Christmas trees decorated to reflect individual room décor. Gingerbread replicas of many of Newport's mansions will also be displayed in the kitchen of The Breakers; a working garden-scale model of the Vanderbilt family's New York Central Railroad will be on display in the second floor loggia.

Time will also be allotted for individual lunch and shopping around the beautiful waterfront area. Before returning to Boston, the coach will travel along the 10-mile-long Ocean Drive, featuring spectacular views of additional mansions and coves.

All tours are available for groups.

Contact Brush Hill Transportation for more information.

WHAT'S COOKING
with
Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Shrimp With Tomato Sauce

By MARIE

Today's recipe is made from shrimp with tomato sauce and delicious any time. First of all, I found a way to make this entre´e even more flavorful by cooking the shrimp shells as well.

INGREDIENTS

1 pound medium shrimp
1 large can of tomatoes
2 tbsp. of fresh parsley
1 small onion chopped
2 cloves of garlic
2 tbsp. of olive oil

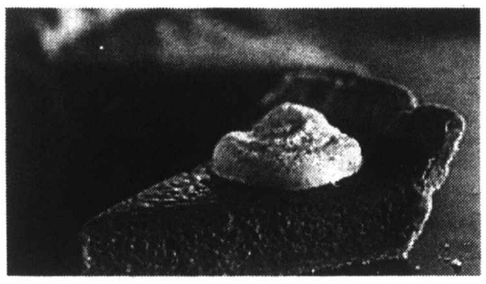
In the hot olive oil sauté the garlic and chopped onion and add the can of tomatoes and the shells from the shrimp, cook for 10 minutes or so and then drain mixture which will remove the shells into a bowl.

Place mixture back in the pan and add the shrimp and chopped parsley.

Cook until shrimp is done and sauce is bubbly. Pour over linguini or any favorite pasta or rice. Sprinkle with Parmesan or Romano cheese.

Creamy Pumpkin Coconut Pie

By SUZIE



Here is a dairy free and gluten free easy pie to please all your guests this holiday season.

CRUST: 1 cup vacuum packed peeled roasted unsalted chestnuts(vacuum packed work best)

3 tablespoons almond meal

2 tablespoons coconut sugar

Preheat oven to 375. Mist a 9 inch pie plate. In food processor pulse ingredients to a crumb like consistency.

Press into prepared misted or greased pan. Bake for about 10 minutes. Cool.

INGREDIENTS

1 15 oz can unsweetened organic pumpkin puree

2 eggs

½ cup canned full fat coconut milk

½ cup pure maple syrup

1 tablespoon brown rice flour

1/8 tsp sea salt

1 tsp pumpkin pie spice (or make your own using cinnamon, nutmeg, ginger, and cloves)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Mix everything together well until smooth and creamy. You can use hand mixer for best results.

Pour into pie crust and bake on lowest rack for about 45 minutes. Check center for firmness to check for doneness. Enjoy!

Friends Of Wollaston Beach Toy Drive, Dick Herbert Tribute

The Friends of Wollaston Beach will host its 10th Annual Holiday Party and Toy Drive on Tuesday, Dec. 15th from 7 to 10 p.m at the Hancock Tavern in Wollaston.

This year the event is being held in honor of recently passed FWB Vice President Richard "Dick" Herbert. Mr. Herbert was the group's vice president for most of the past 10 years.

Attendees are encouraged to bring a new, unwrapped toys for boys and girls ages 4-12.

"It was Dick's idea to hold an annual toy drive and over the years the gifts have gone to different local and regional causes," said FWB President Neil McCole. "Dick was very generous to the cause and this year we plan to honor Dick's memory by keeping the donations in Quincy to help local families in need."

The previous nine years the event was held at the Beachcomber. This year it moves to the Hancock Tavern starting at 7 p.m. with free pizza and soft drinks sponsored by FWB.

"We thank the McGettrick Family for their generosity over the years. Austin O'Malley of the Hancock Tavern has been very supportive of FWB over the years, so we are happy to bring this event to Wollaston Center and continue the festive tradition," McCole said.

The event is open to the public.

Anyone interested in learning more about FWB's mission and events for 2016 is encouraged to attend.

The group's formal annual meeting is planned for March 2016.

Serving Quincy's Needs Of The Future

of traffic around the Church of the Presidents can increase the flow of traffic in the entire area. The business and restaurant economies will improve perhaps bringing in more restaurants, function halls and other businesses.

However, I do agree with those district councillors who seem a bit apprehensive about focusing on high rise and high end residential units only.

Downtown Quincy must reflect the entire city. All kinds of housing is needed in Quincy to attract new folks, to keep current residents and to offer a quality of life bringing out the best in Quincy. Downtown Quincy need not become Charles River Park where if you lived there now, you'd be home and fantastically wealthy.

Quincy needs to be a city where its diversity is seen as a strength from one end of Quincy to the other.

Quincy's demographics have been constantly changing in the last 30 years and will continue to change due to the exciting location and all the potential this area can offer now and into the future. There are many communities bordering on Boston who wish they were as lucky as Quincy seems to be. Quincy needs to see this too.

Quincy is one of the oldest communities in Massachusetts and it has always been home to so many, from those who arrived here on the Mayflower, those who crossed the ocean in steerage and those seeking new beginnings today.

There is nothing wrong with bringing new people in today but we need to integrate folks together and not separate people into towers of wealth.

All of Quincy's neighborhoods are strong. Families know each other, work with each other and help each other. They make community. We should be the same kind of community in the downtown area known as Quincy Center.

This is not a liberal, conservative, Democratic or Republican issues, it is an issue of building a newer Quincy that looks to serve all. Elected officials should never forget their mission is to build Quincy up to serve the needs of its future.

Learn from the past and do what is right.

Stomach Ulcers: Causes, Treatments, Prevention

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Stomach ulcers are painful lesions that can be found in the stomach lining or small intestine.

Stomach ulcers are the most visible indication of peptic ulcer disease. They occur when the thick layer of mucus that protects your stomach from digestive juices is reduced, thus allowing the digestive acids to deteriorate the tissues lining the stomach. Stomach ulcers are easily cured, but they can become dangerous without proper treatment.

Stomach ulcers aren't inevitably caused by one single factor. The decrease in the stomach's mucus lining that leads to an ulcer is usually caused by one of the following:

- an infection with the bacterium Helicobacter pylori (H. pylori)
- long-term use of nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs), such as aspirin and ibuprofen
- excess acid (hyperacidity) in the stomach, which may be related to genetics, lifestyle (stress, smoking), and certain foods
- Zollinger-Ellison syndrome, a rare disease that makes the body produce excess stomach acid

Certain issues and behaviors can put you at higher risk for developing stomach ulcers including, smoking, frequent use of steroids (such as those for treating asthma), hypercalcemia (overproduction of calcium), family history of stomach ulcers, being over 50 years old and excessive consumption of alcohol.

RUTH JONES

Stomach ulcers can present with many varied symptoms. The severity of the symptoms depends on the severity of the ulcer. The most frequently encountered symptom is a burning sensation or pain in the area between your chest and belly button. Normally, the pain will be more intense when your stomach is empty and it can last from a few minutes to several hours. Other common symptoms include dull pain in the stomach, weight loss, not wanting to eat because of pain, nausea or vomiting, bloating, burping or acid reflux and pain that improves when you eat, drink, or take antacids.

Diagnosis and treatment will depend on your symptoms and the severity of your ulcer. To diagnose a stomach ulcer, your doctor will evaluate your medical history along with your symptoms and any prescription or over-the-counter medications that you may be taking.

To rule out H. pylori infection, a blood, stool, or breath test may be ordered. In a breath test, you'll be instructed to drink a clear liquid and breathe into a bag, which is then sealed. If H. pylori is present, the breath sample will contain higher-than-normal levels of carbon dioxide. Further tests and procedures used to diagnose stomach ulcers may include barium X-ray, endoscopy and an endoscopic biopsy.

Treatment will vary and is usually modified depending on the cause of your ulcer. Most ulcers can be treated with a prescription from your doctor, but in atypical cases, surgery may be required.

It's imperative to promptly treat an ulcer. Talk to your doctor to discuss a treatment plan. If you have an actively bleeding ulcer, this may necessitate you being hospitalized for intensive treatment with IV ulcer medications, and you may also require blood transfusions.

If your stomach ulcer is the result of H. pylori, you'll need antibiotics. For mild to moderate stomach ulcers, your doctor may usually prescribe the following medications:

- H2 blockers: to prevent your stomach from making too much acid
- proton pump inhibitors: blocks the cells that produce acid
- over-the-counter antacids: to help neutralize stomach acid
- cytoprotective agents: to protect the lining of the stomach and small intestine, such as Pepto-Bismol

Symptoms of an ulcer may subside promptly with treatment. Even if your symptoms disappear, you should continue to take medicine prescribed by your doctor. This is especially important for H. pylori infections to ensure that all bacteria are destroyed. Health care providers will also suggest that you avoid smoking, alcohol, and any medications or foods that can initiate symptoms.

In very rare cases, a problematic stomach ulcer may require surgical intervention. These include ulcers that continue to return, don't heal, bleed, tear the stomach or small intestine or stop food from flowing out of the stomach into the small intestine. Surgery may include, removal of the entire ulcer, taking tissue from another part of the intestines and sewing it over the ulcer site, tying off a bleeding artery, or cutting off nerve supply to the stomach to reduce the manufacturing of stomach acid.

Get treatment as soon as you believe that you might have a stomach ulcer. The longer an ulcer remains untreated, the more likely you are to develop complications. You should immediately seek medical treatment if you encounter any sudden, sharp pain that doesn't stop, black or bloody stools, bloody vomitus, and vomit that looks like coffee grounds. These could be clues that the ulcer has eroded through the stomach, or broken a blood vessel. Scar tissue development is also another possible complication causing tissue that prevents food from moving from the stomach into the small intestine. All of these scenarios require intensive therapy, typically in a hospital setting.

Prevention of stomach ulcers can encompass many things. To prevent the spread of bacteria and reduce risk of bacterial infection, wash your hands with soap and water on a regular basis. Ensure that all food is properly cleaned and cooked thoroughly.

To prevent ulcers caused by NSAIDs, stop using these medications (if possible) or limit their use. If you need to take NSAIDs, be sure to follow the recommended dosage and avoid alcohol while taking these medications. Particular lifestyle changes can also help prevent ulcers from forming.

Limiting alcohol consumption, avoiding tobacco products, and properly managing stress can all contribute to maintaining a healthy stomach lining and avoiding the onset of more dangerous consequences.

South Shore Mental Health's Minghui Johnson Honored

South Shore Mental Health's Vice President of Finance and Accounting Minghui Johnson was recently honored with the Association for Behavioral Healthcare's 2015 Excellence in Administration and Finance Award.

Presented during the agency's annual Salute to Excellence event at the Westin Waltham Hotel, the award recognized Johnson for exceptional management of finances and operations at South Shore Mental Health where she began working in 1999.

MINGHUI JOHNSON

"What sets Minghui apart is her passion for our clients," said Sherry Ellis, South Shore Mental Health's Vice President of Crisis and Rehabilitation. "She makes it a point to understand the personal way that her work affects both our staff and the clients we serve. It's not just about the numbers for Minghui. She knows the challenges our clients face, and she's committed to maintaining the fiscal health of our agency so that we can continue to aid our clients in the best ways possible."

During the event, which drew community-based behavioral healthcare professionals from across the state, Salute to Excellence awards were also presented in the categories of Mental Health Leadership, Peer Leadership, Emerging Leader, Exemplary Leader, Best Practices, Program Leadership, Lifetime Achievement, and Unsung Heroes.

Rogers New Chamber President

The Board of Directors of The Quincy Chamber of Commerce announces Maureen Rogers is the organization's new president.

She succeeds Dean Rizzo who announced he is stepping down earlier this year.

Rogers received her Master's in Public Administration from Northeastern University, Bachelor of Arts from Bridgewater State College, and is a graduate of Institute of Organization Management from the Universities of Delaware and Georgia.

Rogers' past professional experience includes positions as President of North Suburban Chamber where she was responsible for the full range of activities to ensure the Chamber's success in meeting its business advocacy, community development, membership services and special program goals and objectives.

She was the Executive Vice President for the Neponset Valley Chamber of Commerce, Norwood where she was responsible for programs and operations of the chamber as well as monitoring pending legislation and regulations that might affect the business community. She was Government Affairs Manager and chief lobbyist as well as Community Development Manager for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, Quincy where she was responsible for eight Business councils (business members representing issues of concerns within the town they work or live), annual trade shows, outings, seminars and board of director programs.

"She is a 29-year veteran in chamber business and will bring that expertise to this chamber," said Ed Fleming, Quincy Chamber Chairman of the Board and Partner with Fleming & Fleming P.C.

Rogers will come on board in the middle of January, 2016 and looks forward to increasing this chamber's visibility both at the local and state level as well as bringing new ideas and increased participation in the chamber's programs and committees.

The Quincy Chamber of Commerce is a 575-member non-profit business development organization. The mission of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce is to support economic growth through numerous business development and tourism initiatives in collaboration with the Chambers subsidiary organizations: Quincy 2000 Collaborative, Discover Quincy and the Quincy Center for Innovation. Visit www.thequincychamber.com for additional information.

Snow, Ice Deficit Paid Off Over Three Years

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city will take advantage of a state program allowing communities to pay back deficits caused by record-breaking snowfall last winter over the course of three years interest fee.

The City Council on Monday night approved Mayor Thomas Koch's recommendation to enter into the Department of Revenue snow and ice deficit amortization program.

Quincy spent $13.55 million on snow and ice removal during the winter of 2014-15; the city had allocated $1.7 million in the fiscal year 2015 budget for snow and ice removal, leaving it with a deficit of $11.79 million to pay off. City officials also anticipate receiving $667,425 in reimbursements from the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which further reduces the deficit to $11.12 million.

In previous years, the city would have been required to pay off that deficit all at once. Because of the severity of this winter's snowfall statewide, however, the Department of Revenue allowed communities to pay off the deficit over up to three years as long as one-third of the cost was paid off in the first year. Communities participating in the program are not charged interest.

Quincy will pay $3.7 million each year for three years under the amortization program.

The city is tapping two sources to make the first $3.7 million payment.

The council on Monday approved appropriating the $2.17 million in the city's inclement weather account toward the snow and ice deficit from last winter. That $2.17 million was transferred into the inclement weather fund in June and was the outstanding free cash left at the end of fiscal year 2015.

The remaining amount, $1.53 million, will be collected from this year's tax levy.

The council approved entering into the DOR amortization program and the appropriation of funds from the inclement weather account in a pair of 7-0 votes. Councillors Doug Gutro and Brian McNamee were absent from Monday's meeting.

Some 114 inches of snow fell in the city during the past winter, including 85 inches during the course of three weeks in late January and early February.

The unprecedented amount of snowfall during those three weeks forced the city to set up snow farms at the Fore River Shipyard, Crown Colony and Squantum Point Park. It cost $7 million to haul snow to those sites and $1.5 million was spent on operations inside them, such as stacking and pushing the snow. Plowing and salting city streets cost $2.2 million and preparation for snow removal, including the purchase of 13,000 tons of salt and 8,000 tons of sand as well as fuel costs and vehicle maintence totaled $1.3 million.

to approve the number we have before us or we don't set the tax rate and I don't think that is a desirable choice," he said.

Council President Joseph Finn said concerns about increasing property taxes should be raised in the spring, when the council reviews the proposed budget for the upcoming fiscal year.

City assessor Peter Moran said residential property owners would see tax relief once commercial property values begin to increase.

"The only way to alleviate the tax burden on the residential sector would be for the commercial sector to rebound. Typically in the economy it does follow the appreciation of the residential sector – the commercial sector will lag for a few years and start to grow with it," Moran said, adding that steps taken by the city – such as increasing the personal property tax exemption for businesses – would help stimulate commercial growth.

Moran also noted that 10 commercial properties came off the city's books this year, with residential developments being built in their place.

Some 43 percent of Quincy residents are considered cost burdened, according to Willmer, meaning they spend more than 30 percent of their income on rent or mortgage payments. One-quarter of those are severely burdened, with more than 50 percent of income going to rent or mortgages. Those numbers, however, are not necessarily tied to income and could include affluent individuals who purchased too much property, for example.

Aside from the need for additional and more diverse housing stock, Willmer said there is also a need for affordable and more accessible housing for an aging population.

"One of the things we're seeing here in Quincy and across the board in the commonwealth and nationwide is people 65 and older are representing a larger and larger percentage of the population," Willmer said. "We have to figure out how we're going to meet their needs."

The city also needs more multi-family housing to keep up with demand and more affordable housing to help cost burdened residents, Willmer added.

The housing production plan includes five major goals aimed at tackling the city's housing needs.

The first goal is the encouragement of opportunities to develop more diverse housing and additional affordable housing. To do that, the housing production plan recommends working to maintain existing federal and state funding sources like Community Development Block Grants and the HOME program, expand programs allowing seniors to age in place, consider areas where denser development would be appropriate and could be supported, and coordinate with state agencies to remove barriers to brownfield development, and review the city's zoning code, including the Inclusionary Zoning Ordinance, which covers affordable housing in the city, to see what changes can be made to encourage more affordable housing.

The second goal is the preservation of existing affordable housing units, which Willmer said the city has already moved to address. He said several hundred affordable units that were about to expire in the past year or upcoming years have been recertified. No affordable units in the city will expire until 2022 or 2023.

The third goal is to coordinate resources and stakeholders. That includes partnering with organizations in the community to advocate for and advance affordable housing developments, Willmer explained, and utilizing money in the Affordable Housing Trust fund to develop more units.

The fourth goal is to advance capacity promotion and education. To accomplish that, Willmer suggested holding regular meetings at city boards and commissions outlining the development process and coming up with educational programs for residents on affordable housing.

The final goal is to promote housing equity. Suggestions to accomplish that include working with minority residents to ensure language equity, continued services to reduce the homeless population, and providing homeowners and renters with information on renewable energy and energy efficiency.

Ayers: Study Repurposing Former Sewage Treatment Plant For Fish, Shellfish Farms

Quincy state legislator Bruce J. Ayers recently met with state officials to discuss his legislation, House Bill 621, "An Act instructing the Massachusetts Department of Fish & Game to study the feasibility of repurposing the former Moon Island Sewage Treatment Plant for the purposes of fish and shellfish farms."

The meeting included Commissioner George Peterson and Deputy Commissioner Mary-Lee King of the Mass Department of Fish & Game, as well as Deputy Director Daniel McKiernan and Regional Shellfish Supervisor Jeff Kennedy of the Division of Marine Fisheries.

Ayers' bill would require the Department of Fish & Game to study the feasibility of converting the former sewage vats on Moon Island in Boston Harbor into a fish and shellfish farm. Ayers is currently gathering background information and research to support his legislation.

The legislation states in part that this fish farm "will benefit marine life such as crabs, eel grass, shrimp, bluefish and striped bass,"as well as water quality in Boston Harbor and Quincy Bay.

Moon Island is owned by the city of Boston, and abuts the city of Quincy. There are currently four cut-granite vats on the island with a 50-million gallon capacity, unused for years after the sewage treatment plant was decommissioned in 1985.

Ayers said he hopes his bill is a step towards changing that.

"This legislation aims to take a proactive approach towards the future use of Moon Island. It allows us to utilize the island's resources in a way that will benefit the environment and improve our water quality, as well as offer educational benefits," Ayers stated.

Ayers also said that the island should be open to the general public. "I believe Moon Island isn't being used to its full potential. It could be an ideal spot for fishing, hiking, camping, biking, and other recreational activities," he said.

"It's important to look towards the future to ensure that we have the proper planning in place for the betterment of the environment and the community," Ayers said.

Ayers, whose legislative district encompasses nearby Squantum, also noted that a fish farm is just one of many positive ways the public could utilize the Harbor Islands.

"I think this bill starts a productive conversation on how the cities of Quincy and Boston, along with the state, can work together in collaboration to determine the most beneficial uses of these islands moving forward," he said.

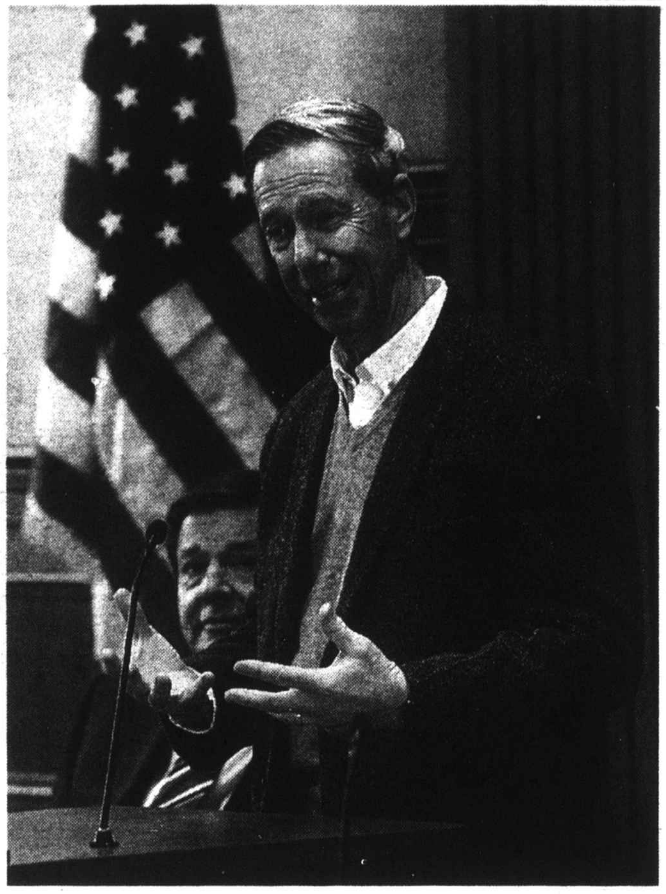
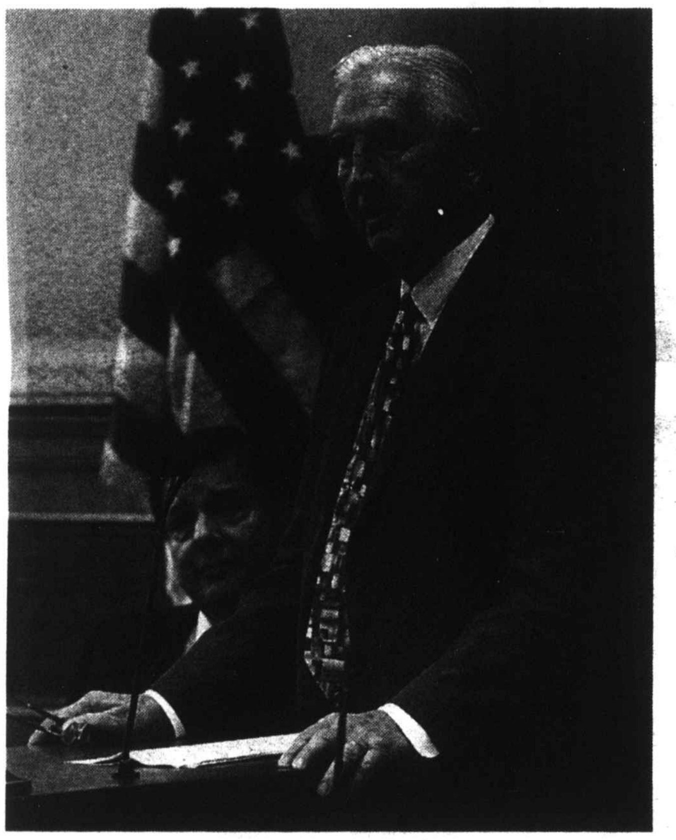
SATURDAY'S CELEBRATION of the James R. McIntyre Government Center reopening featured remarks from several speakers including Mayor Thomas Koch. "We are here rededicating what is our heritage, our history and truly a gift for future generations," Koch said to the more than 300 public officials and residents attending the ceremony and open house.



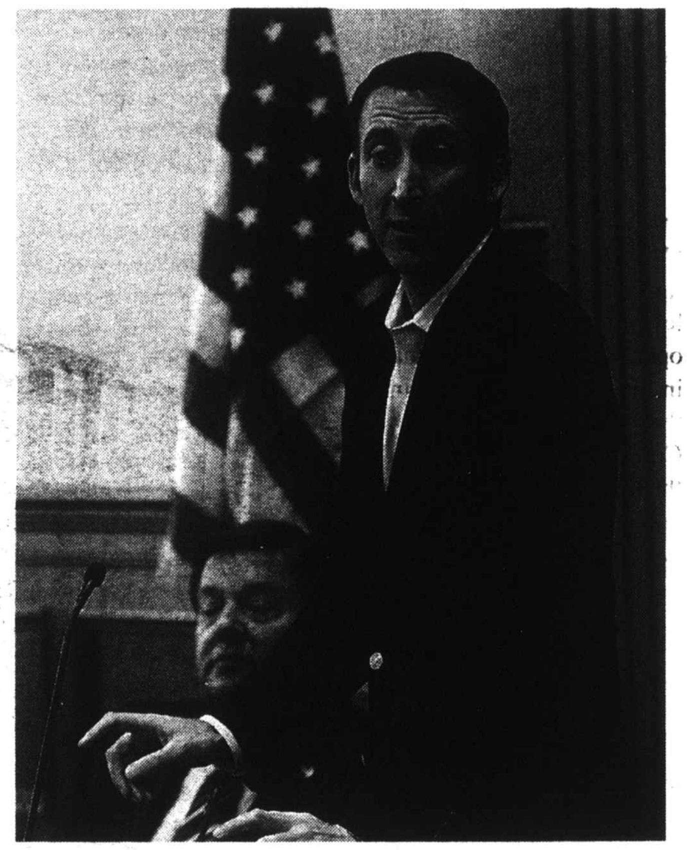
CONG. STEPHEN F. LYNCH: "When I see this beautiful building and this restoration…it just puts you in a context of the importance of the city of Quincy in the history of the United States and the importance of the work here that is done every day on behalf of the families of the city of Quincy."

CITY CLERK JOSEPH SHEA, chairman of the committee that oversaw the restoration, noted he began working for the city as executive secretary to Walter Hannon in 1971. "It was very exciting for me to come here in November of 1971 and I'm just as excited today all these years later. To spend all this time here and to see this result is a very exciting moment for me personally."



JAMES EDWARDS, president of the architectural firm Holmes & Edwards as well as the president of the Quincy Historical Society, said, "The people of Quincy deserve all the credit for maintaining this 170-year-old treasure. I hope each and every one of you today are proud of yourselves and the city for what has been accomplished."

JOSEPH FINN, president of the Quincy City Council: "We are here today to dedicate a hallowed space in many respects. What this does, is it really calls forth the almost sacred nature of our civic duty. This is the place where it happens."



COLEMAN BARRY, chairman of the Community Preservation Committee, noted the restoration of Old City Hall is one of more than 130 projects to receive community preservation funding since the city's residents approved adoption of the state's Community Preservation Act in 2008.

restoration project, including Koch, the City Council, the Community Preservation Committee, the Inspectional Services Department and the project team at Holmes & Edwards. He also thanked the people of Quincy, both past and present, for preserving the building.

"Last I would say thank you to the people of the city of Quincy, past and present. This is your building. You had the opportunity through the generations to tear it down, which was a strategy that was discussed at various steps along the way but never happened, thank goodness," Edwards said.

"The people of Quincy deserve all the credit for maintaining this 170-year-old treasure. I hope each and every one of you today are proud of yourselves and the city for what has been accomplished."

Council President Joseph Finn refered to the restored building as a hallowed space, which would call on city officials to both embrace the past and accept responsibility for the future.

"We are here today to dedicate a hallowed space in many respects. What this does, is it really calls forth the almost sacred nature of our civic duty. This is the place where it happens. Just the layout of the building and the fact that it reflects the past and the future in some ways, it really calls on us to both embrace the past and to accept the responsibility for the future," Finn said.

"As we continue to gather and others beyond us gather, hopefully it will always be in that spirit – that people will be able to move beyond their own petty ambitions and concerns of the present moment and think about the community and about generations to come. If any space at all calls for it, this certainly does."

City Clerk Joseph Shea, whose offices were previously located on the first floor of the McIntyre Government Center before it closed in 2011, said he was as excited to see the building restored as he was when he first went to work there in 1971. At the time, he was tasked by then Mayor James McIntyre – for whom the building would be dedicated in November 1985 – with overseeing Walter Hannon's transition into city hall.

"This is such an exciting weekend for me," Shea said. "In November of 1971, I was appointed executive secretary to Mayor Walter Hannon and Mayor McIntyre called me up – at the time I was working at the Registry of Deeds in Dedham – and asked me to come in a month or two early and work on the transition.

"It was very exciting for me to come here in November of 1971 and I'm just as excited today all these years later. To spend all this time here and to see this result is a very exciting moment for me personally."

Shea was chairman of the committee that oversaw the restoration work.

Sheila McIntyre, the wife of the late mayor and state senator, was one of the 300 people in attendance Saturday morning, joined by their children Charlie McIntyre and Liz Engelke. She had also attended a ceremony the previous evening along with numerous current and former city officials, who were each given pieces of rafters from the building with the words "it remains" inscribed on them. (Quincy's motto, "Manet," is Latin for "it remains.")

"It's very heart-warming. It's poignant," McIntyre said. "I just feel very, very proud of the history of Quincy and what has transpired here in this building. I still think of it as the Old City Hall; it's nice to know that it's officially the James R. McIntyre Government Center. That is certainly very touching to all of us in the family.

"It's going to carry on. In fact, the quote they put on the little pieces of wood that came from the rafters says 'it remains' and it does and it will continue to because of people like the present council and the present workers who carry on here day-to-day without expecting to be recognized but they are and they should be recognized by all the public really."

Coleman Barry, chairman of the Community Preservation Committee, noted the restoration of Old City Hall is one of more than 130 projects to receive community preservation funding since the city's residents approved

adoption of the state's Community Preservation Act in 2008.

“On behalf of the committee, I would just like to say how proud we are to have been able to play a role in restoring this wonderful building,” Barry said. “But even more importantly, we're excited to see how we can continue to leverage these community preservation funds to ensure Quincy remains one of the best places to live in the Commonwealth.”

U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch said the building had undergone a “miraculous transformation” from the last time he saw it during the restoration process. It will remind those who work there of the importance of their work, the congressman explained, likening it to the nation's capital in that regard.

“Coming here this morning, it reminded me of the story of Pierre L'Enfant, who was the architect of Washington, D.C.,” Lynch said. “He wanted to design Washington, D.C. – its grand boulevards, its monuments, its open spaces – in a way that, in his words, would remind those who work there – the Congress, the president – of the importance of their work and of the high ideals of the American people at the early stage.

“When I see this beautiful building and this restoration…it just puts you in a context of the importance of the city of Quincy in the history of the United States and the importance of the work here that is done every day on behalf of the families of the city of Quincy. I think

Helping Hands Stepping Up For Holiday Assistance

By SCOTT JACKSON

The holiday season is here and while for many it is a time to celebrate and be with loved ones, it is also a time to give back to those in need, and many local charities are asking the community to do just that.

Quincy's charities expect to help more needy individuals this holiday season than in years past. They assist individuals and families in a myriad of ways, providing food, clothing, toys, shelter, and other services to those in need. Those organizations are in need of help through monetary or in-kind donations. Many of them also rely on volunteers and need extra help this time of year.

Here is a list of some local organizations, what they need, and how the public can get involved and help out neighbors in need.

Quincy Community Action Programs
617-479-8181

Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) provided gifts to 750 children, from birth to age 14, in its Head Start and food pantry programs last year and anticipates doing the same this year, according to Susan Harrington, the organization's director of development and marketing.

Harrington said individuals can sign up to sponsor a child or family; businesses can also agree to set up "gift trees," allowing employees to choose children to sponsor. Those interested in doing so can contact her by email at sharrington@qcap.org.

QCAP also needs winter gear for children participating in the Head Start program, as well as their parents.

"We're really in need of gloves, mittens, hats, jackets, boots and underwear, not just for the kiddos but also for the adults," Harrington explained, noting parents often forego purchasing new winter items for themselves in order to provide for their children.

QCAP provided about 1,200 households with turkey dinners for Thanksgiving and will also be distributing meals for Christmas and other December holidays. Donations of non-perishable food items are always accepted by QCAP for their food pantries.

QCAP, like many organizations, is reliant on volunteers. They help out in a number of ways, such as assisting in the food pantries, picking up donated food from grocery stores and businesses, and customer service and data entry.

More information on the organization can be found online at qcap.org. Harrington said anyone looking to volunteer, donate or help out in other ways like organizing food drives can also email her at sharrington@qcap.org.

Quincy Crisis Center
282 Billings Rd.
617-847-6967

Each year the Quincy Crisis Center, part of the Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion, provides holiday meals for Quincy residents in need.

The QCC provided 846 people – including families, senior citizens and disabled residents – with Thanksgiving dinners and expect to provide Christmas dinners to between 250 and 300 households the Rev. David Wooster, the program's executive director, said.

Families will also receive an additional three to five days of food with their Christmas meals, because they often need help when children are home from school.

The Quincy Crisis Center also provides gifts to children under 16. Individuals and businesses in the community can sponsor a child to provide gifts to for the holidays. Each child receives new toys, a new book, a new article of clothing, and winter gear including a hat, mittens, and scarf.

"We try to have parents give us an idea of what the kids want," Wooster said. "Everybody gets a book, hat, gloves, clothes and toys and games."

Gifts not on a specific family's wish list can also be donated and volunteers will work to find a family in need to give it to.

The Quincy Crisis Center asks that donations be made by today (Thursday) but Wooster said they can be accepted up until Dec. 17.

Like many organizations, the Quincy Crisis Center is also in need of volunteers to help deliver meals, prepare food, and assist in the food pantry among other roles. Volunteers are particularly needed leading up to Christmas as food and gifts are distributed.

"We're pretty much always looking for volunteers," Wooster said.

The Quincy Crisis Center is located at 282 Billings Rd. More information can be found at sangercenter.org or by calling 617-847-6967.

The Salvation Army
6 Baxter St.
617-472-2345

The Salvation Army is offering its Christmas assistance program to children and families this year as it has in years past, providing families with food and children with toys.

More than 1,100 people benefited from the Christmas assistance program last year in the Quincy area, Captain Tim Ross said, and the group expects to serve just as many people this year with more people signing up daily.

The Salvation Army also visits area nursing homes, providing each resident with gifts this holiday season. Some 1,000 residents in total will be visited.

"We do visit all the area nursing homes," Ross said. "We give each resident a magazine and a Christmas gift."

The Salvation Army is in need of new toys, hats, gloves, scarves, and food items as well as monetary donations. Those looking to donate can do so at the Salvation Army's Quincy headquarters at 6 Baxter St. The organization can be contacted by phone at 617-472-2345 or by visiting salvationarmyma.org/quincy.

The organization's Red Kettle Campaign is underway this year and bell ringers can be seen at various locations in Quincy throughout the month of December and also collected donations during the city's Christmas parade. The Quincy Salvation Army raised $138,000 during its Red Kettle Campaign last year – besting Ross' goal of $130,000. This year, Ross hopes to raise at least $135,000.

Money raised through the kettle campaign benefits the programs the Salvation Army operates throughout the year.

"Eighty-two cents of every dollar raised goes back into the community to serve those in need, not just during the Christmas season but all year long," Ross said.

Interfaith Social Services
105 Adams St.
617-773-6203

Interfaith Social Services is expecting to provide assistance to more families this year than any other year, according to Executive Director Rick Doane.

Doane said ISS provided more than 1,000 households – some 2,500 people – with Thanksgiving dinners this November in Quincy and other South Shore communities it serves. The organization distributed 800 turkey dinners in 2014.

In years past, ISS has provided about 600 children with Christmas gifts through the Help for the Holidays program. The organization began signing families up for the program in October, and by the start of December more than 600 children had already been signed up.

"We know we'll have a record setting year," Doane said Dec. 3.

ISS has been able to keep up with that demand, he stated, because of the generosity of the Quincy community.

"The reason we've been able to keep is because of Quincy and all our community partners that step up to serve our clients," Doane said. "We always say we're blessed to live in a community that gives so many resources and time."

Donations of unwrapped children's presents and gift cards can be dropped off at the organizations offices at 105 Adams St. anytime it is open; for more information visit interfaithsocialservices.org or call 617-773-6203.

"We need donations of unwrapped toys. We need gift cards…you can't really give a 12-year-old a toy," Doane said.

Gift cards for movie theaters, iTunes or stores such as Target or GameStop are among those popular among the older children ISS serves.

Monetary donations and donations for the organization's food pantry – including both produce and non-perishable items – are always needed as well.

ISS, like many non-profits, is dependent on volunteers and is always looking for more assistance.

"We have a team of about 140 volunteers that come in every week. We couldn't operate without the help of our volunteers," Doane said. "We always need more volunteers."

DOVE
617-770-4065

DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) organizes an adopt-a-family program each year for the holidays. The program provides families in DOVE's emergency program or community based programs with items on their wish list. Each family's wish list contains up to 25 items total and includes clothing, household necessities like toiletries, and fun items for children.

"We provide assistance to clients and their families," DOVE Executive Director Sue Chandler said. "Families are invited to submit a list of clothing, practical items and fun items.

"Donors will adopt families and individuals."

More than 100 families received assistance from 125 members of the community last year, and DOVE anticipates serving a similar number this year.

The organizations needs necessities such as towels, bedding, pillows and blankets year round. DOVE also needs gift cards for stores like Target and Walmart or for grocery stores as well as MBTA Charlie Cards

"Those are things we make available throughout the course of the year," Chandler said.

The organization also is in need of supplies for its

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
A WIDER ROLE FOR DENTISTS

As dentists increasingly screen their patients for medical conditions such as heart disease and diabetes, many health professionals are calling for dentists to also conduct dental screenings for drug misuse. For many patients, a visit to the dentist is the only interaction they have with a medical professional. If these patients (and others) display dental and gingival (gum) symptoms that are consistent with illicit drug use, a visit to the dentist provides an opportunity for them to get the information and assistance they need to effectively address their problems. Dentists are well situated to make appropriate referrals to treatment centers once they have established a rapport with patients with drug problems and have determined patients' willingness to accept help.

We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where preventive dentistry may not be where we start with every patient, but it's where we would like to finish. Do you have any questions about any of the medications you take? Oral health is a long-term commitment we share with each patient. Please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist.

P.S. Methamphetamine users are subject to rampant tooth decay, accelerated tooth wear, unexplained advanced gum disease, missing multiple teeth, and overall rapid and severe detrimental dental effects.

Report: November Real Estate 'Robust'

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reported increased property sales and mortgage activity for the month of November 2015, but also noted that some statistics were driven by dramatic swings in average real estate price and mortgage indebtedness due to several major commercial sales across the county.

"The month of November saw a solid 14 percent increase in the number of land documents recorded compared to the same period in 2014," O'Donnell said. "In addition, the total number of deeds recorded increased 15 percent. Some 1,395 deeds were recorded in November compared to 1,208 in November 2014. This is an indication that the market in Norfolk County remains quite robust as we head to the end of the calendar year."

City Commemorates 74th Anniversary Of Pearl Harbor

Flag Raising, Wreath Laying Remember Dec. 7, 1941: 'A Day Of Infamy'

By SCOTT JACKSON

Veterans and city officials gathered Monday morning to remember the 2,400 American service members and civilians killed 74 years prior during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, which drew the United States into the Second World War.

Monday's ceremony was held at the World War II memorial at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, which bears the names of the 252 Quincy residents killed during the war. The names of the 39 Massachusetts servicemen killed during the surprise attack on the U.S. Navy base were read aloud, an American flag that flew over the USS Arizona Memorial in Pearl Harbor in 1981 was hoisted to half-staff during the remembrance, and a red, white and blue wreath was placed inside the memorial.

Robert Noble, an Army infantry veteran of World War II who was held prisoner by the Germans for 122 days during the war, was the guest speaker Monday. He was 15 years old and living in Dorchester on Dec. 7, 1941, when the Japanese attacked the naval base at Pearl Harbor.

"My uncle was walking down the street to catch a streetcar to his home in Quincy. He told us to go right home because the Japanese had attacked Pearl Harbor," Noble said. "We listened to the radio – no TV back then. The information was very sketchy. It wasn't until later, when newspaper extras came out with their pictures and the newsreels in the movie houses that we were fully aware of the significant damage and the loss of life that had occurred.

"We were buoyed by the president's speech the next day when he asked Congress to declare war between Japan and our country. I don't recall there was any despair. I only remember that people were mad."

Noble remembered driving in his father's car along Quincy Shore Drive with the vehicle's headlights partially painted black to reduce the light given out in order to prevent enemy submarines from seeing silhouettes of American ships and watching planes fly overhead on training runs to and from the air base at Squantum.

ble continued. "It provided many men and women to serve in the armed forces; those who did not return are memorialized on this platform.

"There was the Bethlehem Steel shipbuilding yard, which employed upwards of 30,000 men and women who built many quality warships; several of them are still afloat, although serving as museums. One in particular, the battleship Massachusetts, saw action around the world and is now moored at Battleship Cove in Fore River, Mass.

"The granite tower on Forbes Hill – a former water tower – was manned by volunteers who served as lookouts for possible enemy aircraft."

Noble's son, Robert Jr., a teacher at Quincy High, was among the 100 residents in attendance Monday, along with about 20 of his students.

Two other World War II veterans were present Monday: Tom Shepherd, who served in the Navy from 1942 to 1945 and Russell Erikson, who flew 33 missions in a B-24 Liberator over Germany from 1942 to 1945.

George Nicholson, an Air Force veteran of the Vietnam War and the city's director of veterans' services, said Dec. 7, 1941, was more than a day of infamy, as President Franklin Roosevelt put it; that day 74 years ago was the start of the modern era.

"That day generated production and manufacturing to support the war effort that was on a scale that was then unimaginable," Nicholson said.

"It sparked the advancements in science, technology and all of these things that are an integral part of our lives today. All of these areas began to advance at an unimaginable pace because of Pearl Harbor and those who died there. All of those areas continue to advance today at an equally unimaginable rate.

"Pearl Harbor changed the history of the world. Its memorial observance deserves much more than the humble recognition we can give it."

Only 20,000 to 25,000 World War II veterans reside in Massachusetts, Nicholson noted, and that number could fall to 5,000 or fewer in five years.

"Our veterans honor the memory of our departed comrades every year and we will always do that as long as we can – as long as the light lives among us," he said.

Quincy Catholic Academy Food Drive Benefits Interfaith Social Services

Quincy Catholic Academy (QCA) recently sponsored a Thanksgiving food drive to benefit the Pantry Shelf Food Program at Interfaith Social Services.

QCA students and families generously donated non-perishable items such as pasta, sauce, fruit juices, cereal, canned vegetables, canned fruit, tuna, and baked beans.

One of Greater Boston's largest food pantries, Interfaith Social Services' Pantry Shelf has been providing emergency food to families and individuals since 1975. Last year volunteers distributed over 750,000 pounds of food to hungry families, much of it donated by caring individuals, businesses, houses of worship, and other organizations.

The Pantry Shelf also operates various seasonal initiatives for the children of families who depend on their food pantry. In 2014, The Pantry Shelf assisted over 18,000 South Shore residents.

Fitting Tribute To McIntyre - A Remembrance

Editor's Note: The following column written by Henry Bosworth, late publisher and founder of The Quincy Sun, first appeared Thursday, Oct. 31, 1985 – a few days before old City Hall was dedicated to the late James R. McIntyre.

We feel this tribute is appropriate following the celebration of the restored McIntyre Center last Saturday.

Henry's words sum up the life of his close friend and his wish that future generations know the essence of James R. McIntyre for years to come.

Here is Henry's column in its entirety:

Old City Hall will get a new look and a new name Sunday.

At 2 p.m. ceremonies, the historic 141-year-old building will be officially dedicated the "James R. McIntyre Government Center."

A granite marker will be affixed to the outside front of the structure – Quincy's seat of government since 1844 – in his honor.

It will be placed at the top part of the second floor just below the words Town Hall.

An appropriate bronze plaque will also be unveiled at the street floor entrance for future generations to know who Jim McIntyre was.

For those of us who did know him, it is hard to think that someday there will be people in Quincy who won't. He played such a major role in his city's politics and government.

For many who really knew Jim McIntyre, and were close to him, the dedication will be a bittersweet experience.

They will be pleased to witness this rare honor to his memory. But it will be painful for them to remember that his life was so short.

McIntyre died March 7, 1984 of a heart attack in the recovery room at Massachusetts General Hospital after undergoing surgery unrelated to the attack. He was 53.

He was only 25 when he made his first run for office while still a law student in 1955 and was elected to the then Plan E City Council.

It was a spectacular start for a youngster. He was the third highest vote-getter behind two long-time popular political figures – Thomas Burgin and Amelio Della Chiesa.

He was elected state representative in 1958, state senator in 1964 and mayor in 1965, succeeding Della Chiesa.

He served as mayor and senator simultaneously until 1971, when he was named senator counsel, the post he held until his death.

The counsel job took him out of the political spotlight but not out of politics. He remained a dominant political figure – in the background.

Just about every young person thinking of running for political office sought his advice first. And veteran office holders sought his counsel, too.

Jim McIntyre had charisma by the pound and at his fighting weight, that was a lot of charisma.

He was as much at ease with a President as he was with a precinct level envelope stuffer.

He certainly was one of the brightest political stars in the city's history, and one of the most intelligent.

That intelligence was wrapped in good old common sense.

He moved with foresight and insight while others stumbled and fell over hindsight.

He was a good family man.

He liked people and he liked them. He knew most of them by first name. He was Jimmy or Jim to them.

He never lost the one big success ingredient: the common touch.

It is appropriate that old City Hall will now be the James R. McIntyre Government Center.

McIntyre loved that old building. Some of his happiest political years were spent there.

He was a history buff. He would tell you that John Quincy Adams II served as moderator at town meetings in the second floor hall when Quincy was a town and where years later McIntyre served as a City Councillor.

And, of course, another he could tell you from that illustrious family – Charles Francis Adams served as mayor and later became Secretary of the Navy under President Herbert Hoover.

Jim McIntyre could also tell you that the old City Hall was designed by famed architect Solomon Willard who received $280 for drawing the plans and supervising the construction.

He could tell you it cost exactly $19,115.93 to build.

And, probably that figured included 88 cents paid to a John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

There were will be a few tears at the Nov. 3 dedication. But there will be a lot more smiles as Jim McIntyre is fondly remembered by those who knew him.

More smiles because Jim McIntyre is really still here. And will be as long as there is a City Hall in Quincy.

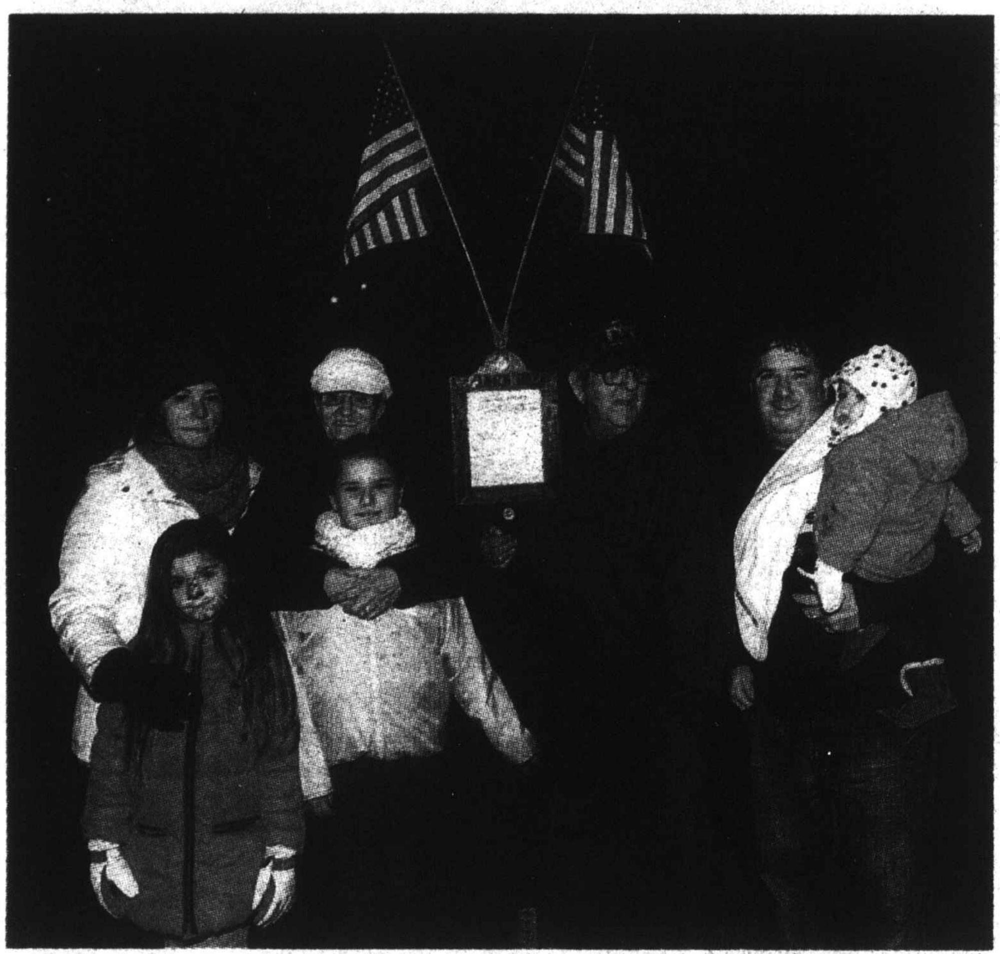
Tree Lighting At Flags For Veterans Island

QUINCY LADDER

SANTA CLAUS arrived on a Quincy Fire Truck at Saturday night's tree lighting ceremony at Flags for Veterans Island, School and Pleasant Streets, Fort Square, Quincy. He greeted children of all ages including three-year-old Tyler DiBona, son of School Committeeman and Councillor-elect Noel DiBona (second from left). With them is Paul Moody, commander, Sons of the American Legion Squadron 294, Morrisette Legion Post, coordinator of Flags for Veterans Island.



TREE LIGHTING ceremony at Flags for Veterans Island was dedicated in memory of Charles Towers, past commander of the Morrisette American Legion Post and member of Squadron 294, Sons of the American Legion. He was also a past state commander of the American Legion Department of Massachusetts. Mr. Towers, a Vietnam era veteran, died Sept. 11 this year. Members of his family gather at a memorial flag pole at Flags for Veterans Island after the tree lighting. Front from left: granddaughters Lillian Hayduk and Sophia Hayduk. Second row from left: daughter Danielle Hayduk, wife Jeannette Towers, brother Richard Towers, son-in-law Eric Hayduk and grand-daughter Brooke Hayduk. Flags for Veterans Island is lit up for the holidays with lights on a large tree as well as smaller tree and an oversized inflatable snowman.

Emily Bryson Earns Collegiate All-American Status

By JOE REARDON

Even when she was packing in the miles through the thick, uncomfortable heat and humidity on the streets of Quincy last summer, Emily Bryson was already daydreaming of November and the biggest stage of the collegiate cross country season.

The Brandeis College freshman and 2015 graduate of North Quincy High School wasn't overly confident of garnering All-American status at the NCAA Div. 3 championships at the University of Wisconsin, but once there, Bryson left nothing to chance. She had worked too hard and come too far to fall short.

"Coming into the season I knew I had a shot (at All-American), but I didn't want to get my hopes too high," said Bryson. "I knew it would be difficult because I was a freshman and was going up against a lot of upper classmen with more experience."

After securing her slot at nationals with a solid 13th-place finish in the qualifier at Connecticut College, Bryson wasn't going to be intimidated by any harrier, no matter what the grade. She situated herself around 40th place in the early going and moved up to 35th with just 200 meters left. From there Bryson kept nothing back as she kicked hard for the tape and threw herself across the finish line in 31st place in 21:44 over the 6K layout, earning the coveted status of All-American.

The achievement had been a goal of Bryson's since her freshman year after winning the city middle school championship and as she worked to become the best distance runner in North Quincy High history. That it took just one season to reach is what caught Bryson off guard. "I never thought it would happen so quickly," she said.

EMILY BRYSON, a freshman at Brandeis College, earned All-American status in cross country at the NCAA Div. 3 championships at the University of Wisconsin.

All-American honors capped what turned out to be the most productive freshman season in Brandeis cross country history for the hard-working Bryson.

As big an achievement as her final race of the season was, Bryson still points to the UAA meet on Oct. 31 as her best performance of the fall. Following her strategy to near perfection on the very familiar Franklin Park 6K layout, Bryson surged into the lead coming off Bear Cage Hill for the second time and used her momentum all the way to the tape to and outlean the University of Chicago's Khia Kurtenbach in a photo finish victory in 22:04.

Even Bryson, who has come to grow confident in her finishing speed, found the victory to be extra special. "That was a really surreal finish," she said. "We were at Franklin Park so we had so many people cheering for us. I knew the course very well and thought back to All-States (last year) when I came in fourth when I really thought I had a chance to win. I really wanted to win. I felt like I redeemed myself. I don't like to rely on it (her kick), but I make sure I have it at the end."

That victory, the first ever by a freshman in the UAA, was recognized across the country and earned Bryson the Div. 3 Runner Of The Week Award. The team also performed well, moving up from an eighth-place finish in 2014 to take fourth.

Brandeis head cross country and track coach Sinead Evans, herself an Irish Olympian in the 1500 in 1996 and 2000, saw a drive in Bryson in her high school races during the recruitment stage and believed it would transfer well at the collegiate level.

"She came in very conditioned from high school and hit the ground running," said Evans. "Emily's really easy to coach. She just goes out and does what you ask of her. She's very mentally tough. She's very talented and knows what she wants. I recruited her for a year and got to know her very well. There was nothing about her that surprised me. I knew the training would be a little different than Geoff's (Hennessy), but she adapted well."

Bryson's fall included a steady diet of near 50-mile weeks and tempo runs designed to make her more familiar and comfortable with race pace at the college level. This winter she'll be concentrating on qualifying for nationals in the 3000 with a handful of mile and 1000 races thrown into the mix. Bryson, who owns a personal best of 10:43 in the 2 mile, is looking to run a sub-10 over 3000 meters.

Evans believes Bryson has the talent, poise and determination to make a jump to the next level during the indoor season. "She had a tough patch (at nationals), but she fought right through it," said Evans. "It didn't faze her at all.

"I think this is just the tip of the iceberg. It's just one season building on the next. The groundwork went really well. We'll just keep chipping away and help her continue to grow."

Elks Free Throw Contest Competition Begins Dec. 19

The Quincy Recreation Department and the Quincy Lodge of Elks are again co-sponsoring the Elks National "Hoop Shoot" free throw contest.

The Quincy competition is the first step in a national contest for boys and girls ages 8-13. Contestants are assigned to three separate categories in both boys and girls divisions. Age groups are 8-9, 10-11, and 12-13. The contestant's age is determined by April 1, 2016.

Each participant is awarded points for successful free throws. The boys and girls in age group 8-9 will shoot from a line four feet in front of the regulation foul line.

The program will be supervised in neighbor gymnasiums by their Quincy Recreation Leaders assigned to their regular recreation programs in the area.

The program is free and contestants may participant even if not previously enrolled in the Recreation Program. Participants may choose any of the various times or sites to compete; however they may only compete in one Quincy qualifier.

"We are pleased that the Quincy Lodge of Elks has once again provided this program for the benefit of our participants," said Recreation Director Barry Welch. "This is the 44th year of this program. Many Quincy residents in have past have enjoyed the benefits of this activity at then local, regional and state level as well as the national championship.

"The Elks devote a great deal of attention to youth programs. Their commitment to our children helps make Quincy a better place to live. Last year, over 50,000 children took part nationwide."

The Quincy Lodge Hoop Shoot Chairman is Ed Miller, retired Athletic Director of Quincy Public Schools.

The first round of the Quincy Contest will be offered at the following gymnasiums at 10 a.m. on Saturday, Dec. 19: Atherton Hough, Atlantic Middle, Beechwood Knoll, Central Middle, Merrymount, Montclair, Point Webster Middle, Snug Harbor and Squantum.

The program will be conducted on Monday, Dec. 21st at 3 p.m. at the Marshall School and on Tuesday, Dec. 22nd at 6 p.m. at Atlantic Middle School.

For additional information, call the Quincy Recreation Department at 617-376-1394.

John Bonfiglioli Earns Eagle Scout Award

Installs New Osprey Nest At BM Marsh

By SCOTT JACKSON

Visitors to the Broad Meadows Marsh now have a chance to catch a glimpse of an osprey perched more than 10 feet off the ground in a new nest, installed by a Quincy High senior for his Eagle Scout project.

John Bonfiglioli recently received his Eagle Scout Award, scouting's highest honor, for completing the project in November 2014. In addition to the osprey nest, he also donated two pairs of binoculars and books on the raptor to Broad Meadows Middle School.

"I built an osprey nest and installed it in the marsh near Broad Meadows. Also, I donated some high-powered binoculars and books about ospreys to the sciences classes so they would have something to study," Bonfiglioli said in a recent interview.

A Merrymount resident, Bonfiglioli said he decided to build the osprey nest because he has long been interested in nature. But one does not simply install such a nest, and Bonfiglioli had to receive permission to do so – from city and Boy Scout officials – and raise funds for the project.

"First, I had to come up with the project. Then I had to plan it all out and had to go to the city – the Conservation Commission – to get it accepted. I also had to get it accepted by the Boston Minutemen Council," Bonfiglioli said.

"After that, I had to plan a fundraiser to raise money to buy the binoculars and the stuff for the osprey nest. I planned a 'hike-a-thon' from Houghs Neck near LaBrecque Field to the end of Wollaston Beach."

For the 'hike-a-thon,' Bonfiglioli and 16 other scouts got friends and family members to sponsor them, raising $800 for the project. That was more than enough to cover the purchase of the binoculars, books and supplies for the osprey nest – the wood for the pole and nest was donated but Bonfiglioli needed to purchase other items. The remaining amount was donated to the school.

Over the course of two days last November, Bonfiglioli and a team of volunteers installed the new nest.

"We did it in two separate days. One day, I went in with a few scouts to dig the hole. We had to walk through all the muck. Then the next day we actually installed it," he said.

In the 11 months since the nest was installed, Bonfiglioli said his neighbors has reported seeing ospreys perched atop the nest.

A member of Troop 6, which meets in the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, Bonfiglioli joined the scouts as a kindergartner.

"I've been in it since kindergarten," he said. "When I was in kindergarten my parents brought me down there and I saw it. It looked like it would be fun so I decided to sign up."

Bonfiglioli said he has "some doubts along the way," about sticking with the troop, but he is happy he did.

"It's a great program," he said.

One of his favorite memories was a trip to the U.S.

Military Academy at West Point.

"There was one trip a while back – years back – we went to West Point, because my Scoutmaster's brother-in-law worked there. He got us a tour, a more in depth tour. We got to see everything almost," Bonfiglioli recalled.

Bonfiglioli has completed other community service projects for the troop since joining. To achieve the rank of Life Scout – one below Eagle Scout – he delivered Thanksgiving dinners for the Quincy Crisis Center.

"There is a project you have to do for the rank below Eagle Scout, Life Scout. I helped out the [Quincy Crisis Center]. I helped them by delivering Thanksgiving meals to people," he said.

Bonfiglioli is now a senior at Quincy High, where he takes welding/metal fabrication classes. He hopes to pursue that, or a career in the burgeoning biotechnology industry, upon graduation.

"It's either be a welder or do something with the biotech industry," he responded when asked about his future plans. "Either Quincy College for biotech for their two-year program or UMass Boston for a four-year degree."

Local Restaurateur, Public Officials Announce Safe Holidays Program

A local restaurateur and public safety officials have announced a series of programs to promote safe celebrations this holiday season.

Leo Keka of Alba Restaurant in Quincy Center, Norfolk Dist. Atty. Michael W. Morrissey and Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan announced the programs at a press conference Dec. 4 at Alba.

The programs are:

FREE UBER, TAXI RIDES - Alba has instituted a progressive holiday-travel program in which the restaurant will pay for guests' Uber or taxi rides home if they've celebrated a little too much this December.

"We want our guests to celebrate in an environment of safety," said Keka. "Our guests can ask any server or host and we'll ensure they have safe and free transportation home."

SERVER TRAINING & DESIGNATED DRIVER PROGRAM - Morrissey recently re-launched the "Observe, Don't Overserve" program, which provides outreach and support to local restaurants.

This year his outreach includes TIPS safe-service training for hundreds of servers and a new designated-driver program: participating restaurants serve free soda to guests in cups that identify them as designated drivers.

"Drunken driving deaths and injuries are among the most preventable harms we see," said Morrissey.

Restaurants interested in participating in the program can contact the district attorney's office at 781-830-4917781-830-4917.

COMMUNITY LAW ENFORCEMENT - Chief Keenan said that safe holiday travel is the responsibility of all citizens and that his officers will help ensure the streets are secure for everyone.

"The men and women of the Quincy Police Department hope that everyone drives respectfully this holiday season and we applaud Mr. Keka and District Attorney Morrissey for working to ensure people have safe-travel alternatives available to them this year," said Chief Keenan.

Sheriff's Program Rescues 92-Year-Old Woman

A 92-year-old woman who had fallen in her home was rescued by Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti's "Are You OK?" program, which summoned help for her after she was initially unable to reach her phone.

When emergency medical personnel arrived at the woman's Avon home on Nov. 19, they found her on the floor. Fortunately she did not break any bones, but she said she was grateful to have the Norfolk Sheriff's Office program working for her in her time of need.

"We are grateful this woman was not badly hurt," Sheriff Bellotti said. "And we are glad we could reassure her that help was on the way after our 'Are You OK?' officer contacted her.

"We are urging any Norfolk County resident who might benefit from this free-of-charge program to enroll with us," Sheriff Bellotti said. "This program works remarkably well, and we have the capacity to help so many more people."

Sheriff Bellotti introduced his "Are You OK?" program into Norfolk County in 2001. Since then, some 2,500 seniors have benefitted from it, with 120 of them receiving emergency medical help.

"Even if you don't need us to call an ambulance, the peace of mind that comes from knowing we are checking in with you each and every day is invaluable," Sheriff Bellotti said. "And that peace of mind is felt not only by the seniors enrolled in the program, but also their loved ones who are concerned for their well-being."

Every morning, 365 days a year, an officer from the Norfolk Sheriff's Office places a call to each person enrolled in the program at a mutually agreed upon time. If the enrollee does not answer the call or otherwise indicates they may be in trouble, the officer can summon help immediately.

"This allows our senior population to maintain their independence without sacrificing their security," Sheriff Bellotti said. "So the program pays dividends even if they never actually need emergency help."

Sheriff Bellotti runs the program in collaboration with Fallon Ambulance Service, which volunteered to host the program at its Quincy headquarters. Fallon also provides manpower to the program when the Norfolk Sheriff's Office personnel need a day off.

To sign up for "Are You OK?" call the Norfolk Sheriff's Office at 1-866-900-7685 (RUOK) or visit www.norfolksheriff.com and click on the Community Programs heading. It takes five minutes to enroll.

Jeannette Currie New CIO At BID Hospital - Milton

Jeannette Currie of Quincy has joined the Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton Senior Administrative Team as Chief Information Officer (CIO).

In her new position, Currie will oversee all aspects of information technology (IT) at the hospital, including a two-year project to implement a fully integrated, cloud-hosted, web-based electronic medical record. She will also direct the hospital's Information Services and Telecommunications Departments.

JEANNETTE CURRIE

Since joining BID-Milton, Currie has been focused on performing a comprehensive review of the hospital's current IT systems, resources, and infrastructure. One of her first accomplishments was formalizing the Information Security and Privacy Committee, which was created to better focus on increasing security through information security policy management, comprehensive IS risk management, and IS security projects.

She will also serve as Enterprise Clinical Integration Architect for the Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center Healthcare System, responsible for planning and enabling the strategy and roadmap for implementation of clinical exchange activities across the system, including health information exchanges, and participation in state, regional and national data sharing projects.

"Jeannette possesses a wealth of healthcare information technology experience, and is a great addition to the senior leadership team at BID-Milton," said hospital CEO and President Peter Healy. "She will provide invaluable support to both our hospital as CIO and to the Beth Israel Deaconess community hospital network in our efforts to further integrate the clinical information sharing that is vital to advancing the delivery of safe care to our patients."

A graduate of the University of Massachusetts Amherst, Currie was previously executive director of Information Systems at South Shore Hospital. She also served as assistant director of Information Systems at Mount Auburn Hospital and Information Systems Manager at Caregroup.

Many Generations Honor 'Wally' At Recent Hurley's Boat Rental Reunion

A Hurley's Boat Rental Reunion recently took place at the Hofbrau Café.

It was attended by a great group of people, some who flew in from as far as St. John, USVI and Ft. Lauderdale, FL.

Many generations of workers came to honor Walter J. Hurley, owner and operator of the former Hurley's Boat Rental in Houghs Neck. Wally was presented with a plaque honoring him with many thanks and appreciation for the opportunities and memories he gave to so many. His true love for the ocean and work ethic was shared by so many that he employed over the years.

Hurley's opened in 1955 and closed in 1997, operating for 42 years. Some of the workers that attended the 25th Anniversary party in 1980 were at the reunion.

Wally started his business in 1955 with 10 boats and when he closed in 1997 he had 102. All his boats, or skiffs as they are called, were hand crafted by Wally and his crew.

All the Hurley skiffs were painted the same and had white sides, red bottoms with a light blue inside. This was the signature colors of a Hurley skiff.

Over the years, he had four full time employees, Bucky Shaw, Arthur Davies, Jimmy Kenney and Mike Grasso. Bucky Shaw attended the reunion and he worked at Hurley's for the longest, 35 years. Wally also had several part-time employees from many generations during the years, some of whom he still has contact with today.

During the late 70's and early 80's buses of fishermen came from New York and New Jersey to fish for flounder in "The Flounder Capital of the World," in Houghs Neck, Quincy. There were also many local guys who came to work on the docks fileting fish for 10 cents a fish as the fisherman came off the boats from a long day of fishing.

As told by Wally, a record day, back then, was $210 or 2,100 fish for one guy. In 1970 Walter constructed the building that is still there today and is now the home of the Houghs Neck Maritime Center.

Wally was a licensed Master Digger from 1950-1955 and a Licensed Captain who ran the Ferry to Peddock's Island for 12 years. He's a Lifetime Member of Quincy Yacht Club and Town River Yacht Club and still enjoys boating and fishing. He recently finished building his last boat, a skiff with his four grandchildren's names on the side.

Wally and his wife Joyce still reside in their beachside home in Quincy. The event was memorable and heartwarming, and all made possible with the people who came to honor Wally and see some old friends, along with the generosity of Mike Novak and Phat Chef Catering from the Hofbrau, Beth Veneto from Ginger Betty's Bakery, Kristen Grady Photography and organizers Kathy Petrilli and Dave Kraunelis.

that is a wonderful dynamic to be accomplished through this restoration."

Secretary of the Commonwealth William Galvin said the restoration of the McIntyre Government Center underscores the significances of self-government and citizenship participation in local government.

"One of the great traditions, I think, not only in Massachusetts but in all of New England is the history of our local government whether you want to talk about little town meetings in small towns or open town meetings or boards of selectmen or city councillors or alderman, whatever it might be, we have a wonderful history for centuries of people who chose to serve their fellow citizens in local office," Galvin said.

"We have a great history of making sure services are delivered locally through cities and towns, but also that those decisions are made locally...By making [this] a place of beauty and work as well, you are saying to everyone how important that role of self-government it is, how important the tradition of citizen participation is. What you're doing here is a wonderful thing. Not just a historic thing, but a great civic thing."

Galvin, whose office oversees the state archives, presented blueprints for the renovations completed inside the building in 1921 to the mayor so they can be displayed in the exhibit space on the first floor.

"When some future generation come along they'll look at your renovation and their renovations and decide whose was best," Galvin quipped.

ANTIQUE CLOCK hanging over the main entrance to the Great Hall is the oldest item in the chamber, Mayor Thomas Koch told those gathered at Saturday's opening celebration. It was built in the 1880s as a wind-up clock and electrified in the 1920s. It was completely refurbished before being installed back in the James R. McIntyre Government Center.

GENDER DIFFERENCES IN SPINES

New research casts a light on the differences between boys' and girls' vertebrae (the small bones that make up the spine), which are present at birth. When researchers used magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) to measure newborns' vertebrae, they found that the females' cross-sectional dimensions were 10.6 percent smaller, on average, than the boys' dimensions. Humans are the only mammals in which these differences are seen. Thought to arise from complex interactions of sex steroids, growth hormone, and insulin-like growth factor, the differences are likely to have developed to allow females to walk and maintain their center of gravity while pregnant. Full understanding of women's spinal structure helps chiropractors better treat their pregnant female patients.

We help newborns, infants, teenagers, adults and seniors. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we will try to help you understand your choices about chiropractic and let you make an informed choice. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Chiropractic works! Call us at 617.472.4220 and start feeling better. We offer computerized spinal scans.

P.S. While females' spines generally exhibit greater flexibility than men's spines, women's propensity for accumulating less bone mass places them at higher risk for scoliosis and osteoporosis.

Koch, Phelan Spent $300K In Final Weeks Of Mayoral Campaign

By SCOTT JACKSON

The two candidates who faced each other in this year's mayoral election spent more than $300,000 total in October and the first part of November in an election year when spending on the race to serve as the city's chief executive totaled just under $1 million, according to campaign finance reports filed with the state.

Incumbent Mayor Thomas Koch, who defeated former Mayor William Phelan 12,425 votes (55.97 percent) to 9,615 (43.31 percent) in the Nov. 3, entered October with $111,828 in the bank, according to reports filed with the Massachusetts Office of Campaign and Political Finance. He raised $128,049 throughout the month of October and $19,373 in the first half of November. Forty individuals, including six Quincy residents, made $1,000 contributions – the most allowed under state law – during that 46-day period. Koch also received $2,500 from Sheet Metal Workers Local Union #17 of Dorchester during that time.

Koch spent $182,275 in October and $19,373 in the first half of November.

Phelan began October with $5,435 on hand. During the month of October, he raised $69,063 in addition to $3,285 during the first half of November. Nineteen individuals made donations of $1,000, including three from Quincy. Phelan also received two donations totaling $1,700 from Sprinkler Fitters & Apprentices Local Union 550 of Boston as well as $5,000 from the Annapolis, Md., based United Association of Journeymen and Apprentices of the Pipe Fitting Industry.

Phelan spent $41,680 in October and $14,920 in the first half of November.

All together, the four candidates who ran for mayor this year – Koch, Phelan and the two dispatched in the Sept. 24 preliminary election – combined to spend $999,260.

Koch entered the year with $121,083 in the bank. Through Nov. 30 he raised $559,641 and spent $680,692, leaving him with $33 on hand at the end of last month.

Phelan began the year with $97 in his campaign account. He raised $173,436 through Nov. 30 and spent $173,320 during the same time frame. He ended November with $1,213 in the bank.

Councillor Doug Gutro, who finished third in preliminary voting, had $31,154 in the bank to start the year. Through Nov. 30, he raised 65,161 and spent 90,430. Gutro, who is leaving his seat as an at-large city councillor next month, had $5,885 in his campaign account at the end of November.

School Committee member Anne Mahoney, who finished fourth in the preliminary, began the year with $15,196 on hand in her campaign account. She raised $52,909 through Nov. 30 and spent $55,178. Mahoney, who is halfway through a four-year term on the school board and won't be leaving her seat, had $12,927 in her campaign account at the end of last month.

Get Your Retirement Soaring

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Wright Brothers Day, observed on Dec. 17, marks the day in 1903 that two adventurous brothers in Kitty Hawk, North Carolina took to the air for the first time. It was a modern miracle at the time and a catalyst for the age of intercontinental travel.

Over a hundred years later, it's commonplace for people to fly across the country. Most of us don't consider all the preparation and patience it took to achieve this modern feat of flight.

Luckily, planning your financial future isn't as daunting as pioneering modern aviation. Social Security has secure and easy-to-use online resources that can ensure your retirement soars above the clouds. The sooner you start planning for retirement, the better prepared you'll be. Just like building a reliable airplane, you'll need finely tuned parts that will work together for you to take flight.

Social Security
Online Services ★ Convenient ★ Secure ★
www.socialsecurity.gov

Think of your retirement strategy as a flight plan that propels you higher. We have many resources at www.socialsecurity.gov/planners/retire that help you find the age at which you may first become entitled to unreduced retirement benefits, estimate your life expectancy, and calculate your estimated benefits. These tools explain how much money you will need and for how long — something you can adjust through personal savings, pensions, and other benefits.

You can also get personalized benefit estimates using the Retirement Estimator at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator. The Estimator shows different scenarios, like how future wage changes or alternate retirement dates will affect your future benefits. Benefit amounts may differ from the estimates provided because:

- Your earnings may increase or decrease in the future.
- After you start receiving benefits, they may be adjusted for cost-of-living increases.
- Your estimated benefits are based on current law. The law governing benefit amounts may change because, by 2034, the payroll taxes collected under current law will be enough to pay only about 79 cents for each dollar of scheduled benefits.
- Your benefit amount may be affected by military service, railroad employment or pensions earned through work on which you did not pay Social Security tax.

As you can see, your flight plan to retirement may change over your lifetime. It's important you understand that no matter where life takes you, the long journey to retirement is one of your most important trips. With every right decision, you're making your retirement flight plan a success that will carry you through the heights of your golden years.

It's never too early to start planning. Whether you are nearly ready to retire or if you're just getting off the ground in your career, I recommend you create your own my Social Security account so you can also learn about all the future benefits available to you. Harrington Retires - Koch Makes Appointments

Fatseas Planning Director; McBirney Chief Of Staff

Planning Director Dennis Harrington has filed for retirement, and Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday that his chief aide responsible for Quincy Center redevelopment over the last eight years will take over the position permanently.

James Fatseas, a former Merrill Lynch executive who as Mayor Koch's Chief of Staff led coordination of development downtown and across the City, will permanently take over the position he has held on an interim basis since the summer.

"I wish to thank Dennis for his years of service to our City as both Planning Director and a City Councilor and wish him well in his retirement," Koch said in a statement released Tuesday afternoon. "Jim brings tremendous management experience from the private sector and has been at the center of our work downtown since the beginning of our Administration. He's going to continue to be a great asset to the City moving forward."

Koch continued:

"We have one of the most talented and dedicated staffs of professional planners and community development specialists anywhere in Massachusetts, with their work recognized nationally on a regular basis. I know Jim is looking forward to continuing the work he's already started leading this terrific group."

Lisa McBirney, the former Chief Operating Officer of the Edward M. Kennedy Institute for the United States Senate and a longtime senior executive in the financial services industry, will succeed Fatseas as the Mayor's Chief of Staff.

"Lisa's private sector experience coupled with a great knowledge of the workings of government at all levels make her a perfect fit for the office. We have a lot of work to do, and I am thrilled to have someone with Lisa's talent, knowledge and passion for our community in this role. She's going to be terrific."

A Quincy native and resident with an MBA from Simmons College, McBirney was a Senior Vice President and Director at Aeltus Investment Management (now ING/VOYA), and Senior Vice President of Institutional Investments at Fred Alger Management.

She also served as Finance Director for Senator Edward M. Kennedy; managed the Congressional Campaign for former Congressman Barney Frank; and worked for then-U.S. Senator John F. Kerry. She also worked as a consultant to the late Congresswoman Geraldine Ferraro, Senator Dianne Feinstein, Senator Barbara Boxer and former Senator Carol Mosely Braun and was a senior advisor to Victoria Reggie Kennedy.

Most recently, she managed Mayor Koch's successful campaign for re-election this fall.

Both appointments are effective immediately.

Cities Sign Regional Compact To Facilitate Problem Solving

Mayor Thomas Koch joined mayors from Boston Braintree, Somerville, Quincy and the city managers of Cambridge and Chelsea to sign a Greater Boston Regional Economic Compact that will facilitate regional problem solving among the municipalities.

The municipal executives and their staffs will meet to strategize and solve common issues in the areas of housing, transportation, sustainability, and economic development that would benefit from a regional response.

As part of the compact, each participating city will commit funds to hire a full-time staff member to work with all participants and help develop a strategy for economic growth. In addition, a Regional Compact coordinator will be hired to develop a regional economic development strategy.

The Compact commits each participating City to five principles:

- Commitment: The leaders of each community will demonstrate their commitment to developing a regional economic strategy by meeting at least every other month and establishing a formal structure for the group;
- Leadership: These meetings will serve as a forum for participants to discuss regional economic development and related critical regional issues including, but not limited to housing, transportation, economic development and sustainability;
- Follow Through: Participants recognize that success in leveraging regional economic opportunities and solving regional economic challenges requires persistent follow through. They will therefore regularly review progress made and challenges encountered;
- Support: Participants agree to explore the appointment of a staff member to serve as a project manager for the compact, recognizing the need to coordinate and manage the several topic areas;
- Inclusion: Participants will welcome and encourage other communities in Greater Boston to support the effort.

Aside from geographical proximity, the six participating cities and towns have chosen to join the compact because of their common identities and set of challenges. Last May, the mayors of Boston, Cambridge, Quincy, Somerville and Braintree to announce the formation of the Life Sciences Corridor. The corridor was created to promote the robust life sciences sector along the MBTA red line in the Greater Boston region.

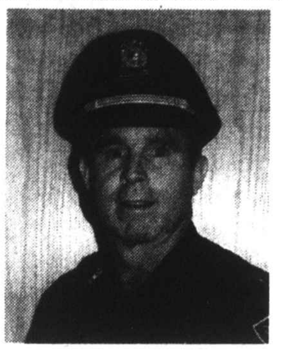
A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON



LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, November 29, 2015, at approximately 2:45 P.M., Officer Paul Jackson along with several other units were dispatched to the area of 220 Common Street for a road rage incident involving a gun. The suspect vehicle was described as a white vehicle that fled towards Adams Street.

Officer Jackson responded to the call scene and met with a male and a female victim. The couple were very excited and the female immediately showed the Officer her cell phone video of another male wearing a red short sleeve t-shirt and Khaki pants standing next to the driver's door of a white Honda Civic. The video showed the license plate of the suspect vehicle. Officer Jackson learned from QPD Communications that the owner lived in Quincy. The Officer then showed the victims the driver's license photo of the suspect and they confirmed that it was the same man.

The female victim provided her account of what occurred. She said that they ate at a restaurant on Franklin Street and when they went out to the sidewalk, the male victim commented that it was very smoky. Suddenly, the suspect who was sitting in his car parked behind the victim's started to yell at them. He was asking if they had a problem with him and swore at them. The victims, attempting to avoid the suspect, decided to walk around the corner to Bradford Park. They stayed at the park for a short time and then went back to their vehicle, hoping to avoid the suspect. As they were getting into their car, the suspect came out of the restaurant and started to yell at them again.

As the female victim drove away, the suspect got into his car and started following them. The victim/driver said that the suspect immediately began tailgating her while swerving side to side. The victim/driver was afraid to go to her house, so she stopped her car in front of 220 Common Street where the suspect then pulled in front of the victim's vehicle, cutting them off. The suspect angrily got out of his car and went to the female victim's driver side door and tried to open it. The male victim, defending the female victim, exited the passenger side and confronted the suspect, who then went back to his car. The suspect then opened the car door and reached down towards the floor area, emerging with what the male victim described as a green handgun. The suspect then came at the male victim with the gun in both hands, threatening to kill the victims.

At this point, the female victim exited her car and started video taping the events on her cell phone camera. Officer Jackson upon hearing this statement, interrupted the female victim at this point to inquire why she would exit her car when she saw the suspect approaching with a gun. She said that she was not sure but just reacted because she was fearful that someone was about to be shot.

The male victim gave basically the same account but did add that the suspect cocked the gun and held it in both his hands in front of him and yelled out, "I'll blow your head off." He concluded by stating that he believed that the suspect was going to shoot both of them. He said that the suspect, upon seeing the female victim videoing, returned to his car and yelled out, "I have your information" and drove off.

Officer Jackson interviewed a witness, who lives in a residence where the vehicles stopped. He said that he heard a commotion outside so he went out onto his balcony where he saw two vehicles stopped. He confirmed the victim's accounts and saw the suspect with what he described as a semi automatic 9mm or 40. caliber handgun. He saw the suspect cock the gun, hold it in both hands in front of him and make the threat, "I'll blow your head off." Officer Jackson updated Officers responding to the suspect's address that there was definitely a gun involved and that the suspect was to be placed under arrest if located.

Numerous Police Officers responded to the suspect's address, where they found the suspect vehicle parked in the driveway. As the Officers set up a perimeter, the suspect came out of the building and was immediately detained by Officers Clark, Wood and Parisi. Officer Lanergan gave the suspect his Miranda Rights and the suspect immediately began talking. He said, "I was trying to sell them a pellet gun. I figured I better come out to talk to you guys." The suspect denied there was a road rage incident, that he pulled a gun on anyone or made any threats. The suspect then gave permission for the Officers to check out the pellet gun in his room. Officer Lanergan recovered the handgun, which was green and black. The gun, with a .45 label was a pellet gun. The suspect, a 21 year old Quincy resident and still wearing the clothes described by the victims, was placed under arrest and charged with, "Armed Assault with Intent to Murder (2 counts). Nice Work!

Some recommendations regarding this type of incident:

-If you have to walk away from your car initially due to intimidation or fear, call "911."

-If you are subject to a road rage incident or being followed, call "911."

-If you do not have a cell phone, pull into a public place like a fire station, gas station, etc. where there are plenty of witnesses and have someone call for you.

-If in a residential area, use the car horn to gain attention.

-Pull a fire alarm if available. The Police respond to fires too.

-Pulling out a video camera may result in swift action against you to either stop you from getting footage or taking the cell phone from you.

-When in doubt, call "911."

"AS SEEN ON TV" COPPER PRODUCTS: Many people suffering from various muscle pains are attracted to so called "new" products that promise to eliminate the cause of the problem. The words, "Total relief" are often used to lure vulnerable customers seeking relief. One company, Tommie Copper infomercials, uses TV spots, YouTube videos, print ads, and brochures, showing people wearing the company's copper-infused compression garments that claim to relieve severe pain and inflammation, such as chronic joint pain, or pain caused by diseases like multiple sclerosis, arthritis, and fibromyalgia. The Federal Trade Commission recently took action against Tommie Copper and its founder because they didn't have the science to back up those claims. According to the FTC's complaint, Tommie Copper ads also touted the sleeves as "pain relief without a pill." Testimonials claimed that Tommie Copper compression wear was as good as or better than drugs or surgery, with people even claiming to go from needing surgery to "not going near the surgeon's knife" after using Tommie Copper products. The FTC announced that Tommie Copper and founder Thomas Kallish agreed to settle the charges levied against them by the FTC. The order requires the company and Kallish to only make claims they can support with solid scientific research. Before you try a new health product or service that promises amazing results, talk to your doctor or other healthcare professional. The FTC has brought cases against companies whose ads falsely claimed that a product will treat a serious disease or can replace surgery. As always, "Google" the product with the words, "review" or "scam" behind it to see what others are saying. (Excerpts from FTC)

OBITUARIES

Bik Lin Mamak

Ma Mak Bik Lin died peacefully on Monday, November 30, surrounded by her loving family.

She was a dedicated mother to Linda and Yuk Bor and her three younger siblings. She passed on her legacy to her five grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

She was a rambunctious, energetic, loud, stubborn, and feisty woman. She was also kind, generous, and a loving person.

Everyone who didn't know her saw an image of a tiny lady walking around with a cane, but those who were close would always tell her to slow down, for she was always power walking with her cane.

She would always be cooking up a meal and then call her grand kids to come pick up the food or just go over to eat. She had an obsession about feeding everyone. She would overfill dinner plates even when you are done eating and would never let you go home without taking bags filled of food on your way out.

BIK LIN MAMAK

For someone as tiny as her, no one would know how energetic and spirited she was. She and her friends would call each other to play mahjong. If it weren't mahjong, she would be out buying groceries or just hanging out at her friend's place. You would never see her at home doing nothing; she would be out an about regardless what the weather is like.

She was a devoted and very loving person. Her absence would surely be missed by all of her loved ones.

Arrangements were made by Lydon Chapel for Funerals, 644 Hancock St., Quincy.

Charles P. Logue, 71

A funeral Mass for Charles P. "Chuck" Logue, 71, of Quincy was celebrated Monday in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Patricia A. O'Shea, 73

A funeral Mass for Patricia A. O'Shea, 73, of Quincy was celebrated yesterday (Wednesday) at in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Ms. O'Shea died Dec. 4 surrounded by her loving family.

She was raised in South Boston and lived in Quincy for the past 37 years. She was a graduate of St. Augustine's High School. Having volunteered as a teen at Marion Manor in South Boston, Ms. O'Shea found her calling and entered into the order of the Carmelite Sisters of the Aged and Infirmed upon graduation. Her religious name was Sr. M. Therese of All Saints and she was last stationed at the very same Marion Manor. After many years, illness had her requesting a leave of absence from which she never returned. She began working for Gillette at the Prudential Building and retired from there after 30 years.

Also known as "Patsy," she was the loving daughter of the late Ron and Anne O'Shea. Devoted sister to Ronald "Ron" O'Shea and his wife Annette of Dedham as well as the late Elizabeth "Betty" Shanahan of Rockland and the late Alice "Dolly" O'Malley of Quincy. She was the loyal aunt of her caretaker Denise O'Malley Connors and surrogate grandmother to her great nephews Jeffrey and Jared Sullivan. She is also survived by many other loving nieces and nephews.

PATRICIA A. O'SHEA

Ms. O'Shea had a strong devotion to God and God's work of love and kindness to all. She spread her loving care and joy to all who met her. She loved life, music and dance – always dancing. She had a beautiful smile and it was not unusual to see her wiping tears from her eyes in laughter.

She became a travel bug starting with her trips back to her parent's homeland, Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, as a young girl. Ms. O'Shea continued to satisfy that bug with trips to Acapulco, Mexico, and throughout the U.S. and then perfected it on many trips with groups from Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy, visiting the Holy Lands in Israel twice, Rome, Our Lady of Fatima Shrine in Portugal and Our Lady of Medjugorje site in the former Yugoslavia.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Interment at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Compassionate Care Hospice Foundation, 248 East Chestnut Hill Road, Suite 4, Newark, NJ 19713.

Janis A. Riordan, 79

A funeral Mass for Janis A. (Powers) Riordan, 79, of Holbrook and formerly Quincy was celebrated Dec. 4 at St. Joseph's Church, Holbrook.

Mrs. Riordan died Nov. 29.

Born, raised, and educated in Boston, she was a resident of Quincy for 50 years and Holbrook for five years. She worked in the cafeteria at Fontbonne Academy. Mrs. Riordan enjoyed her trips to Atlantic City and Foxwoods, but more than anything, she loved her grandchildren and followed all their activities.

Beloved wife of the late William Riordan. Loving mother of Timothy Riordan and his fiancée Kelly DeSouza of Holbrook. Devoted sister of Janet Moulton of Pembroke and the late Robert, Joseph and Philip Powers and Claire Parenti. Dear grandmother of Patrick, Benjamin and Megan. Also survived by her many cherished nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by Hurley Funeral Home, Franklin.

The City will respond to SOQ's within 60 days from the date of receipt of said SOQ's.

The project involves the construction of a new Sterling Middle School located on the current site of the existing Sterling Middle School, and to be approximately 95,155 SF. Anticipated duration of the project is 18-24 months. Estimated construction cost is $39.7 million.

Project team includes the City of Quincy, architecture firm Ai3 Architects, LLC. and the Project Management firm, Joslin Lesser + Associates.

The specific description of the CM at Risk scope of services, preliminary concept designs, key factors important to the final selection, and the evaluation procedure and criteria are contained in the RFQ and are incorporated herein by reference.

Whether an individual firm or a joint venture, proposers must be certified in General Building Construction by DCAM for a single project limit in the amount of the estimated construction cost set forth above or greater and must also be within the aggregate limits of its DCAM Certificate of Eligibility Form.

This project will be subject to the minimum wage rates set under the Massachusetts Prevailing Wage Laws.

The City reserves the right to reject any and all SOQ's and to waive any informalities in the RFQ process if it is in the best interest of the City to do so.

Father Bill's and MainSpring
617-376-2255

Father Bill's and Mainspring's Holiday for Hope program matches individual and corporate donors with families in need, providing them with gifts for the holidays and essential items.

More than 130 families, including those staying at two family shelters – the Evelyn House in Stoughton and the Conway House in Middleborough – and families at scattered apartment sites throughout the South Shore will receive gifts from the program this year, according to Lucille Cassis, FBMS's chief development officer.

Families that cannot be matched with specific donors receive gifts from the FBMS distribution center in Brockton.

"We help any family in need in our portfolio just to make sure children have something to open on Christmas morning," Cassis said.

Father Bill's & MainSpring has an Amazon wish list that includes that go to families the organization serves, which is accessible at bit.ly/FBMSholiday2015.

A separate wish list of holiday items for families and individuals can also be found at the organization's website, helpfbms.org. It includes clothing for babies, infants, children and adults; twin-, full- and queen-sized comforter sets; pots and pans; winter gear; bath sets and razors; and toys.

Gift cards are always in demand as well, particularly for large retailers such as Walmart or Target, pharmacies like CVS or Walgreens, or for grocery stores. MBTA Charlie Cards or Brockton Area Transit (BAT) Cards are also much needed.

FBMS is also in need of volunteers during the holidays and throughout the year.

"We always need volunteers," Cassis said. "We need help in the kitchen. We need help serving food. We need people to sort donations at various times."

Father Bill's & MainSpring's development office can be contacted at 617-376-2255.

Germantown Neighborhood Center
336 Palmer St.
617-376-1384

Through its holiday assistance program, the Germantown Neighborhood Center donates winter coats, clothes, pajamas, and gifts to hundreds of children in Quincy, referred to the organization by organizations such as the Manet Community Health Center, Quincy Public Schools, and the Quincy Commission on the Family.

Each family is also provided with a week's worth of groceries, helping families provide food to the children over winter break when school is closed.

More information on the holiday assistance program can be found online at ssymca.org/Germantown or by calling 617-376-1384. Donations of non-perishable food items, toiletries, and cleaning supplies can also be made at the neighborhood center's food pantry, located at 336 Palmer St. Monetary donations are accepted as well.

Quincy Animal Shelter
56 Broad St.
617-376-1349

Pet owners will have a chance to bring their furry companions to meet Santa Claus and take pictures with him during the annual Santa Paws event this weekend.

For $20, each family receives a four-by-six photo card of their pets with Santa as well as a CD with the photo on it that can be shared with friends and family. All proceeds benefit the Quincy Shelter. Santa Paws will be held 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday at Unleashed in the Hingham Shipyard and from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday at Pet Supplies Plus, 625 Southern Artery, Quincy. Santa Paws was previously held at those same locations on Dec. 5 and 6.

"Santa Paws is a blast," said Bre-anne Harris, president of the Quincy Animal Shelter's board of directors. "It is an absolute good time."

The Santa Paws event raised about $4,000 for the shelter last year and Harris is hoping to increase that number this year.

The shelter also has a wish list of items it needs on its website, quincyanimalshelter.org. The wish list includes gift cards in any amount to Petco, Pet Supplies Plus, Walmart or Stop & Shop; cleaning supplies, such as paper towels, bleach and dishwasher detergent; toys and food for cats and dogs; new litter boxes; and postage stamps. Donations are accepted in person at the shelter during adoption hours, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturdays and 6 to 8 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Cash donations are also accepted.

Information on volunteering at the shelter is also available on the website.

The shelter is located at 56 Broad St. and can be contacted at 617-376-1349.

November Real Estate 'Robust'

real estate transactions increased, the total volume of commercial and residential sales in Norfolk County fell 32 percent coming in at $644 million. Also, the average sale price of commercial and residential property fell 41 percent to $750,673.

"A valid question is how we can have solid increases in transaction numbers, but at the same time show significant decreases in total volume and average sale price," O'Donnell said. "The primary answer was a property transaction that took place in Weymouth in November 2014, the sale of the Fore River Energy Center for $265 million," noted the Register.

The mortgage market for the month of November 2015 showed both increases in recordings and a significant increase in total mortgage indebtedness.

"The total number of mortgages recorded in November 2015 rose 11 percent to 2,325 compared to the same time in 2014. This tells us that a combination of low interest rates and a strong economy in eastern Massachusetts are resulting in consumers willing to borrow money to pay for critical expenditures such as housing and education costs," O'Donnell said.

November 2015 also saw an enormous 196 percent increase in total mortgage indebtedness coming in at approximately $2.38 billion. "This increase is explained by three separate $550 million commercial mortgages that were recorded against property in Weymouth, Walpole and Plainville," O'Donnell said.

In November, Homestead recordings increased by 11 percent.

"A Homestead provides limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000. Details on the Homestead Act can be found on our website, www.norfolkdeeds.org. I urge homeowners to consider this vital protection," O'Donnell said.

A total of 24 foreclosure deeds were recorded last month compared to 15 filings in November 2014, a 60 percent increase.

"Lending institutions continue to work at clearing a backlog of mortgages stemming from the economic 2008 downturn," the Register said. "More troubling is the increase in Notice to Foreclose Mortgage, the first step in the foreclosure process. A total of 86 Notice to Foreclose Mortgage recordings were filed in November compared to 63 in November 2014. This is a clear indication that while our economy is strong, many people continue to face economic challenges."

The Registry of Deeds continues to work with Quincy Community Action Programs and Neighbor Works Southern Mass to help homeowners who have received a Notice to Foreclose Mortgage. Another option for homeowners facing challenges meeting their monthly mortgage payments is to contact the Attorney General's HomeCorps program."

"Reviewing the Norfolk County real estate statistics for the month of November 2015, I am struck by the solid increases in real estate sales and mortgage activity," O'Donnell said. "This is clear evidence that the overall real estate market in Norfolk County remains on the right path.

"While there is no reason that we cannot continue on this path, there are a few variables that need to be considered: A rumored interest rate increase by the Federal Reserve has the potential to reduce consumer confidence. I am optimistic the overall health of our economy in eastern Massachusetts will allow us to weather any negative actions."

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is a resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information.

Residents in need of assistance can contact the Registry of Deeds Customer Service Department via telephone at (781) 461-6101, or on the web at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Ask Barbara Graceffa:
'Secretary Of The Interior'

BARBARA GRACEFFA

I want to refurbish an old china cabinet. Because it has a few scratches that I'll need to fill, I'm open to ideas on how to completely spruce up this piece. Austin

After the repair and prep work, you can paint or stain the piece. Paint the inside walls and shelves a different color or achieve a similar look with wallpaper on the back walls. Consider removing the doors and maybe even the drawers for open storage or placement of attractive baskets. You can also swap the knobs and pulls for something new or vintage-looking.

I have lots of old family photos that I would like to display but don't have the wall space. I welcome your creative ideas. Iris

Scan them and create one or more photobooks online or put them in a digital frame so the photos rotate. Speaking of rotating, place a large stack of them in a basket or attractive bowl on your coffee table and swap them out for new ones every month or so.

You might hang a wire "clothesline" system near the top of your walls or spanning a large doorway from one room to another to display back-to-back photos. You can always put photographs under glass on your bureau, buffet, or coffee table, too.

I have a collection of figurines that are all the same size. How can I make the display more interesting? Holly

The solution is to use lifts and ledges to vary the heights - and you can create your own from things around the house.

A simple stack of books with the same color cover works well as will small gift boxes wrapped in brown Kraft paper or one or two small-print wrapping papers. In fact, you can recycle gelatin boxes or cut down other food boxes to size.

Or use a few small mirrors, doilies, or dinner napkins under a few of your collectables. If you have any small pieces of related art or landscapes, add them for more interest. Or break up the collection into several smaller displays scattered around your public rooms.

Do you have a decorating problem needing a professional solution? Send your questions to Secretary of the Interior at barbara@sec-interior.com.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although taking advice isn't always easy for the headstrong Sheep, you might want to consider what someone you respect says about an upcoming decision.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A new offer is tempting, but don't be bullied into a quick decision. Rely on your keen Bovine business sense to alert you to anything that might be questionable.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your Gemini Twin nature rallies to help you deal with this week's hectic schedules, both in your personal and professional lives. One caution: Watch your diet.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Avoid rushing to make up for time lost on a stalled workplace operation. Best to set up a schedule and pace yourself. Welcome the help of colleagues.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Despite those glittering holiday distractions you love so well, be sure to keep your feline senses set on high to alert you to anything that might require fast action.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Making an effort to restore fraying relationships proves to be more successful than you dared hope. The holidays also bring new friends into your life.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Private and professional matters compete for your attention. Be honest in your assessment of which should get more of it, and for how long.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A seemingly endless list of must-do tasks is best handled by tackling them one by one, and taking energy-restoring timeouts between each job.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A vexing relationship seems destined to deteriorate no matter what each side tries to do. A third party's advice just might prove helpful.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Reach out to ease any tensions caused by home or workplace pressures before they threaten the relationship-building progress you've made.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You often go out of your way to show kindness to others. So, don't be surprised if other people want to do something nice for you this week.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) People in your life respect your Piscean wisdom, so don't hesitate to speak up about a matter that you feel isn't being handled quite the way it should be.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your personal warmth helps you make friendships, and your sense of fair play helps you keep them.

Quincy Catholic Academy recently held a full-day "Junior Achievement Day," provided by Junior Achievement of Northern New England.

Trained volunteers from State Street Corporation and Deutsche Bank spent the entire day at QCA teaching students in Kindergarten to Grade 8 the basics of business, financial literacy and free enterprise, to inspire and prepare them to succeed in the global economy.

By using colorful, hands-on games and engaging discussions, JA volunteers taught students the basic concepts about money such as wants versus needs, earning and spending, credit management, taxes, voting, and owning their economic success.

Working together in pairs, volunteers delivered JA's five elementary, turn-key lessons, designed to work with the State Curriculum Standards and Common Core Standards.

"What an incredible experience for our students!" said Principal Cathy Cameron. "We are grateful to Junior Achievement and their wonderful volunteers to give QCA this opportunity. Our students learned important lessons that they will remember years to come."

For the 2014-2015 school year, Junior Achievement of Northern New England (JANNE) implemented 1,560 programs throughout 254 schools and after-school sites, reaching over 38,000 youth through the efforts of 2,289 trained volunteers.

Serving students in nine Massachusetts counties and the entire state of New Hampshire, JANNE focuses on impacting "at risk" youth, and reaching optimal students within its territory. All programs are provided at no cost to school and organizations.

Lisa Johnson Earns Certified Property Manager Designation

Lisa Johnson, director of Property Management for The Grossman Companies, Inc., based in Quincy, recently received her Certified Property Manager designation. This marks Johnson's 20th year in the commercial real estate industry.

Johnson and her PM team manage some 30 commercial properties totaling over two million square feet in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. She attributes her organizational acumen to her military experience, as an assistant to the Commanding General of the U.S. Army's Southern Command, and two years at the Pentagon.

For many years Johnson volunteered in the local Meals on Wheels program, bringing hot meals and friendly visits to seniors. She was also active with the PTA at Quincy's Woodward School.

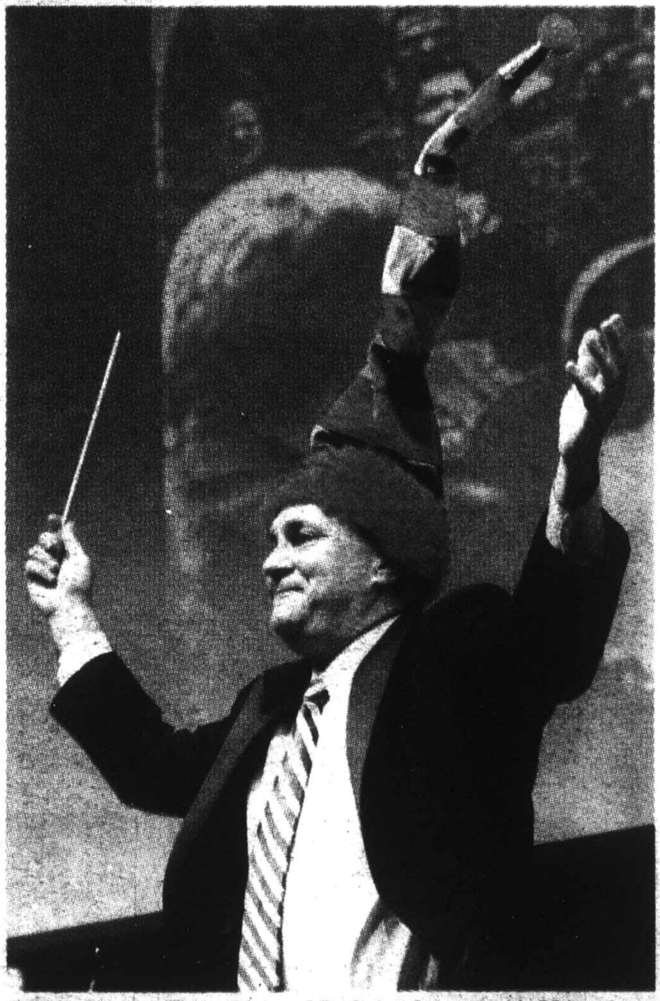
'Tis The Season ... Symphony & Song

SINGERS FROM THE Combined High School Choral Group were among the performers at the recent 'Tis the Season . . . Symphony and Song! at Quincy High School's Lloyd Hill Performing Arts Center. The 15th annual concert also featured the Quincy Symphony Orchestra led by Music Director and Conductor Yoichi Udagawa (top right.) Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

RICH KENNEALLY, tenor saxophone, was among Nine Merry Minstrels (Quincy Public School teachers/adminstrators) who also performed at "Tis the Season" presented by the Quincy School-Community Partnership and Granite City Electric Supply Company.

ABIGAIL COUGHLIN, a fifth grade student at the Squantum School, sang a beautiful rendition of The Star Spangled Banner to kick off the 'Tis the Season' concert.



SCHOOL SUPT. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro reprised his role as a guest conductor and wore a myriad of holiday hats leading the Quincy Choral Society in "Sleigh Ride." The concert was attended by more than 300 people. More photos on Pages 18 and 19.

Help Sought In Search For Fatal Hit And Run Driver

The Quincy Police Department and Norfolk County prosecutors are appealing for the public's help in identifying the driver in a hit-and-run collision after the elderly Quincy woman struck by the vehicle died Sunday afternoon.

AKIU NGO, 78, of Quincy, was struck by a hit-and-run driver on Dec. 3 and died Sunday at Boston Medical Center. Police and prosecutors are asking the public for help identifying the driver who struck her.

Akiu Ngo died around 4 p.m. Sunday at Boston Medical Center, according to Quincy Police Capt. John Dougan. Ngo, 78, was rushed to Boston Medical Center with life-threatening injuries after she was struck by the vehicle on Dec. 3.

The hit and run occurred at approximately 4:45 p.m. on Dec. 3 at the intersection of Burgin Parkway and Dimmock Street. Dougan said the Police Department received multiple calls that an elderly woman was struck while attempting to push a small cart across Burgin Parkway.

Witnesses told police the driver of the vehicle, who was described as a white man in his 50s, exited his vehicle after the collision and checked it briefly for damage before re-entering the vehicle and fleeing southbound on Burgin Parkway.

The driver of the vehicle involved in the collision has not been located as of Tuesday morning, according to Dougan. He said the vehicle in the hit-and-run was described as a boxy black station wagon, possibly a Volvo. The vehicle may have damage to its front end and hood.

Committee To Consider Narcan In Schools

By SCOTT JACKSON

A proposal before the School Committee would provide school nurses and athletic trainers with Narcan, the drug used to reverse overdoses caused by heroin and other opioids.

The proposal, introduced by committee member Paul Bregoli, was introduced at the school board's Dec. 9 meeting. It was referred to the policy subcommittee, which will meet Jan. 6 to review the proposal.

Bregoli said he and Kathryn Hubley, the current vice chairwoman of the School Committee, drafted the proposal after discussions with Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey about upcoming training sessions at which school nurses will learn how to administer Narcan, a trade name for the drug naloxone. Nurses from Quincy's schools are scheduled to attend the training session, Bregoli explained, and it will allow those nurses to train other school personnel on how to use Narcan.

Bregoli said Narcan is already in more than 130 school districts statewide.

"It would be a good idea if Quincy jumped on board," he said. "It's better to be safe than sorry."

There have been more than 140 opioid overdoses in Norfolk County this year, Bregoli added.

"It's not going away and it's good to be proactive," he stated.

Quincy police officers began carrying the nasal spray in October 2010; the department was among the first nationwide to train and equip each of its officers with Narcan.

Police Searching For 2nd Suspect In Home Invasion

Revere Man Arrested, Held On $100,000 Bail

By SCOTT JACKSON

The second suspect in a home invasion that took place a week ago in a residential neighborhood just outside Quincy Center remained at-large as of Tuesday.

One suspect, 22-year-old Kevin Murphy of Revere, was arrested following a foot pursuit after officers responded to the scene of the home invasion on Presidents Lane around 3:40 p.m. on Dec. 8.

Investigators are still trying to identify and locate a second suspect. He was described as a tall white male, possibly Hispanic, wearing a black ski mask, black puffy jacket and possibly boots. Quincy Police Capt. John Dougan said investigators are continuing to work on leads in the case and anyone with information is asked to contact the department at 617-479-1212.

Murphy was arraigned Dec. 9 on charges of home invasion, armed assault in a dwelling, kidnapping, firearm use in a felony, carrying a dangerous weapon, receiving stolen property, and aggravated assault and battery. He pleaded not guilty and was held on $100,000 cash bail.

Officers responded to a call for a breaking and entering in progress around 3:40 p.m. Dec. 8 at the single-family home on Presidents Lane. A female caller inside the house said two males were inside the home.

When officers arrived, they observed a male party fleeing from the back of the home and a foot pursuit ensued. Murphy was located and arrested in the 200 block of Presidents Lane and officers found a firearm in the vicinity where he was arrested.

Two people, a mother and her teenage stepdaughter, were inside the house at the time of the home invasion. Police said the suspects tied up the mother, who is pregnant, on the first floor of the home while the stepdaughter was able to hide upstairs and call 9-1-1. Both occupants of the home were taken to a hospital for evaluation, but neither sustained any known injuries, according to Dougan.

Prosecutors at the arraignment said the mother was lying in bed that afternoon when an intruder in a black ski mask brandishing a gun told her to go downstairs.

Once downstairs, the suspects demanded to know the location of money in the house. The victim directed them to a first floor bedroom containing a paper bag with $40,000 cash inside. Prosecutors said the woman's husband runs a bakery and it was not unusual for him to have such a large amount of cash in the house.

A SUITABLE SETTING
Not only should a diamond ring's setting show the gemstone to its best advantage, but it should also hold the diamond securely and protect it from bumps and snags. While classic four- and six-prong settings may hold the diamond aloft like the flame on the Statue of Liberty, they may be too vulnerable for active women. If so, a sturdier setting may offer the diamond better protection. For instance, a bezel setting features a metal rim that completely surrounds the diamond and buffers it from hard knocks that might chip or dislodge the gemstone. Equally secure is the gypsy setting in which the diamond is recessed into the ring band, a favorite setting for men's diamond rings.
The key considerations when selecting a setting are lifestyle, design preferences, and cost. Most jewelers offer a variety of settings and can recommend variations of their most popular settings. Unraveling A Local Mystery

A local mystery has been solved.

Mystery you ask?

What mystery?

While the public was unaware of this mystery for dozens of years, thanks to the city's park director, a new member of the Quincy Cemetery Board of Managers and other researchers, a historical inaccuracy has been discovered at a small city cemetery.

Uncovering the mystery has also revealed a fascinating chapter in the city's history.

But first, the mystery.

The setting takes place at the National Sailors Home Cemetery in Wollaston off Fenno Street in the Beechwood Knoll section. The cemetery is the last remnant of the National Sailors Home in Quincy. The remains of at least 119 Civil War veterans are buried there.

The home was located on nearly seven acres on land in Wollaston. It operated as a farm for 66 years from 1866 until 1931. According to a granite marker near the cemetery entrance, the home was established primarily for veteran sailors and marines. The home also provided refuge for former soldiers.

"These survivors of our most deadly war lived and worked together and eventually were laid to rest together in the soil they once tilled," the marker states.

For many years, some of the graves at the cemetery were unmarked or had a simple wooden cross. Today, white marble monuments identify the dead.

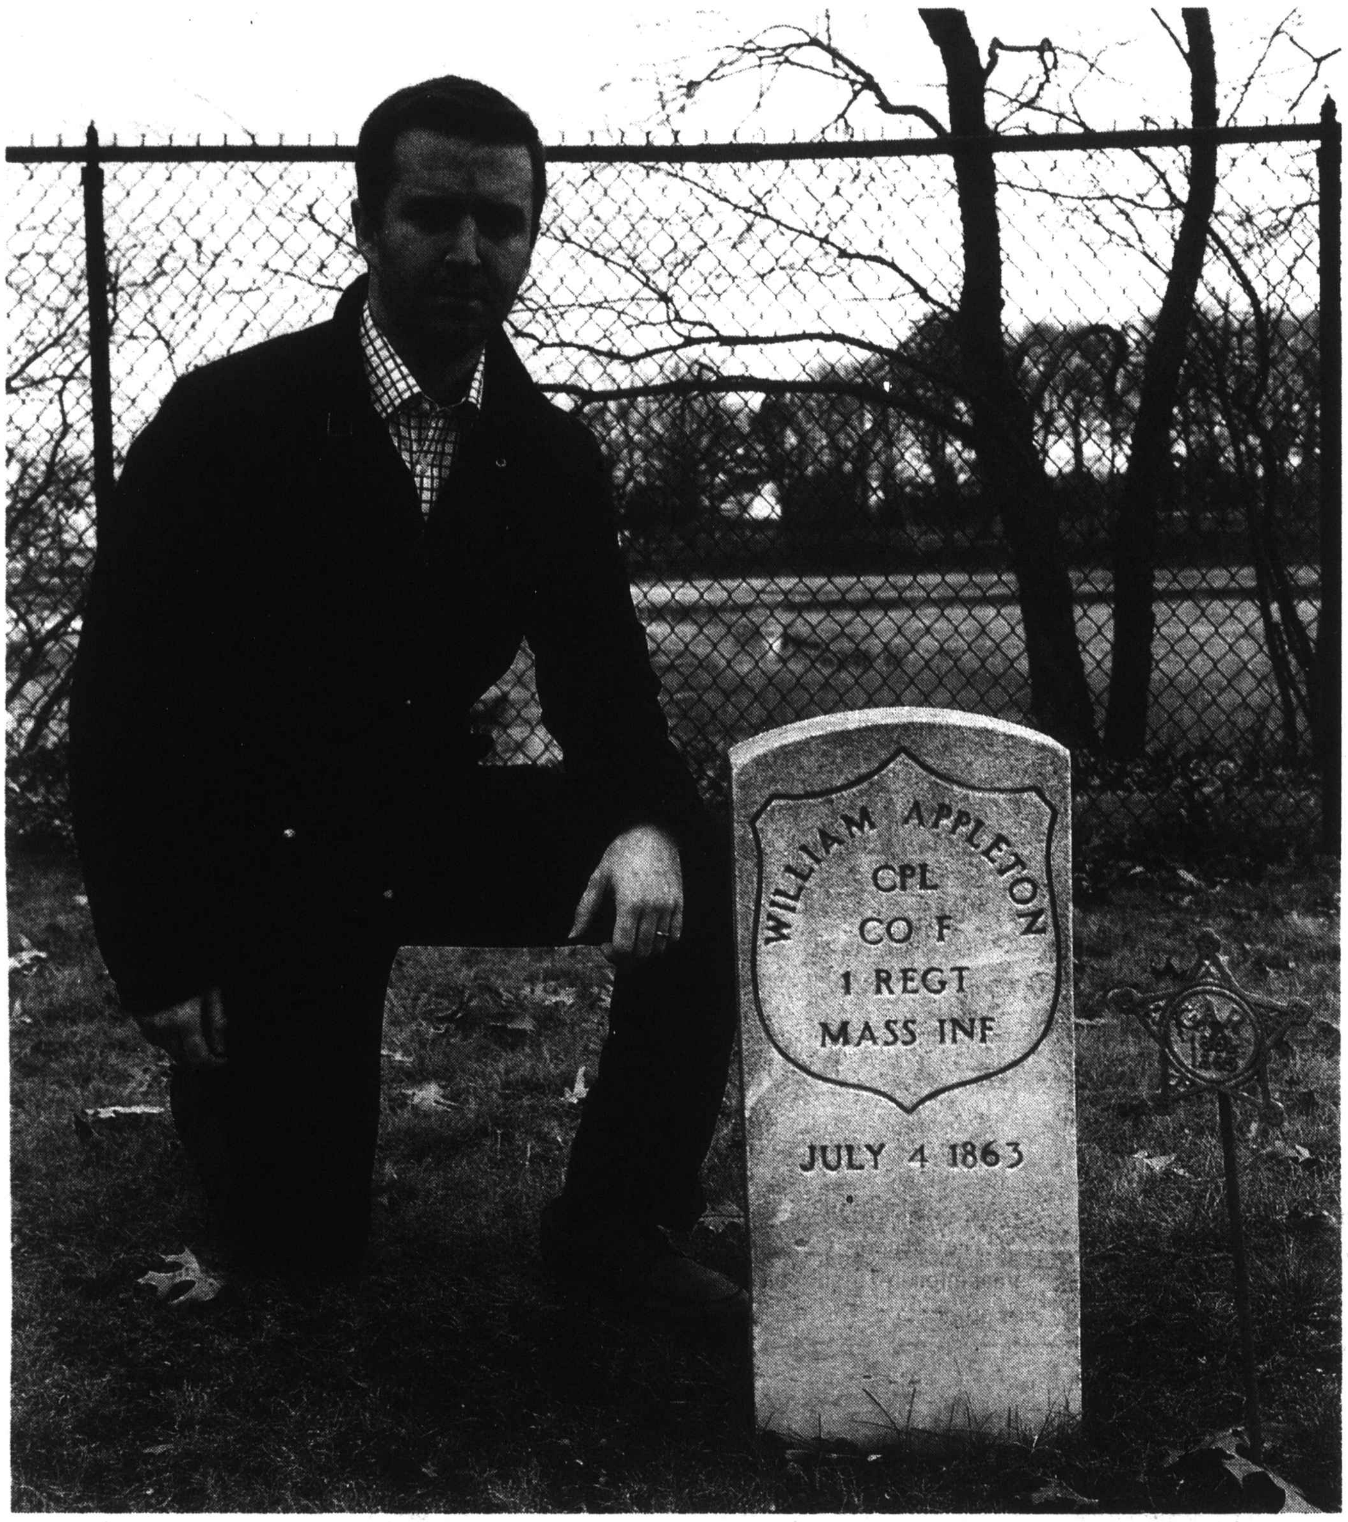
One day not too long ago, Chris Cassani – the director of the Quincy Park Department, and his wife and kids – walked through the cemetery. The Park Department, in conjunction with the Cemetery Board of Managers, is working on a project to create a Google map of the cemetery similar to what the Planning Department did with Hancock Cemetery in Quincy Center. The research project is being led by Denis Gearin, a recently appointed member of the Quincy Cemetery Board of Managers.

The Google Map would allow visitors to the Sailors Home Cemetery to look up the name on a headstone and learn more about the life of the deceased.

While Cassani was at the cemetery, one particular gravestone stood out.

Etched in this white marble headstone is the name William Appleton. The stone also notes he was a corporal for the Union Army, Massachusetts Regiment, during the Civil War. Date of death – July 4, 1863 – one day after the three-day Battle of Gettysburg ended. More than 7,800 soldiers from the Union and Confederacy were killed in battle making it the bloodiest battle of the Civil War.

Gearin, who lives near the cemetery, began doing some research.



QUINCY PARK DIRECTOR Chris Cassani kneels next to a marble monument at the Sailors Home Cemetery in Wollaston at the gravesite of William Appleton. Through some recent research efforts, city officials have determined that the William Appleton buried here was not a Union Soldier who died during the Civil War as the monument indicates but rather another man by the same name who had lived in Quincy and was murdered in a street shooting 138 years ago. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

"As he got going with his research, he noted it was odd that someone who died in 1863 is buried in a cemetery that would not have been in existence until 1867," Cassani said. "So, Dennis started to do some more research on the idea that the William Appleton who died at Gettysburg on July 4, 1863 – the day after the battle ended – is not actually buried here.

"It prompted him to do some research on how did this headstone get here and who is buried here," Cassani added.

After doing some research, Gearin found that the original cemetery had either unmarked graves or wooden crosses on it. He also learned that some other local citizens, including Chuck Phelan, the former Ward 5 councillor and current director of IT for the city along with David Allen Lambert and Elizabeth Payne had also done some research on the cemetery.

"Most of the people who are buried there have been identified but no one ever discovered or at least made it public that the headstone for William Appleton who

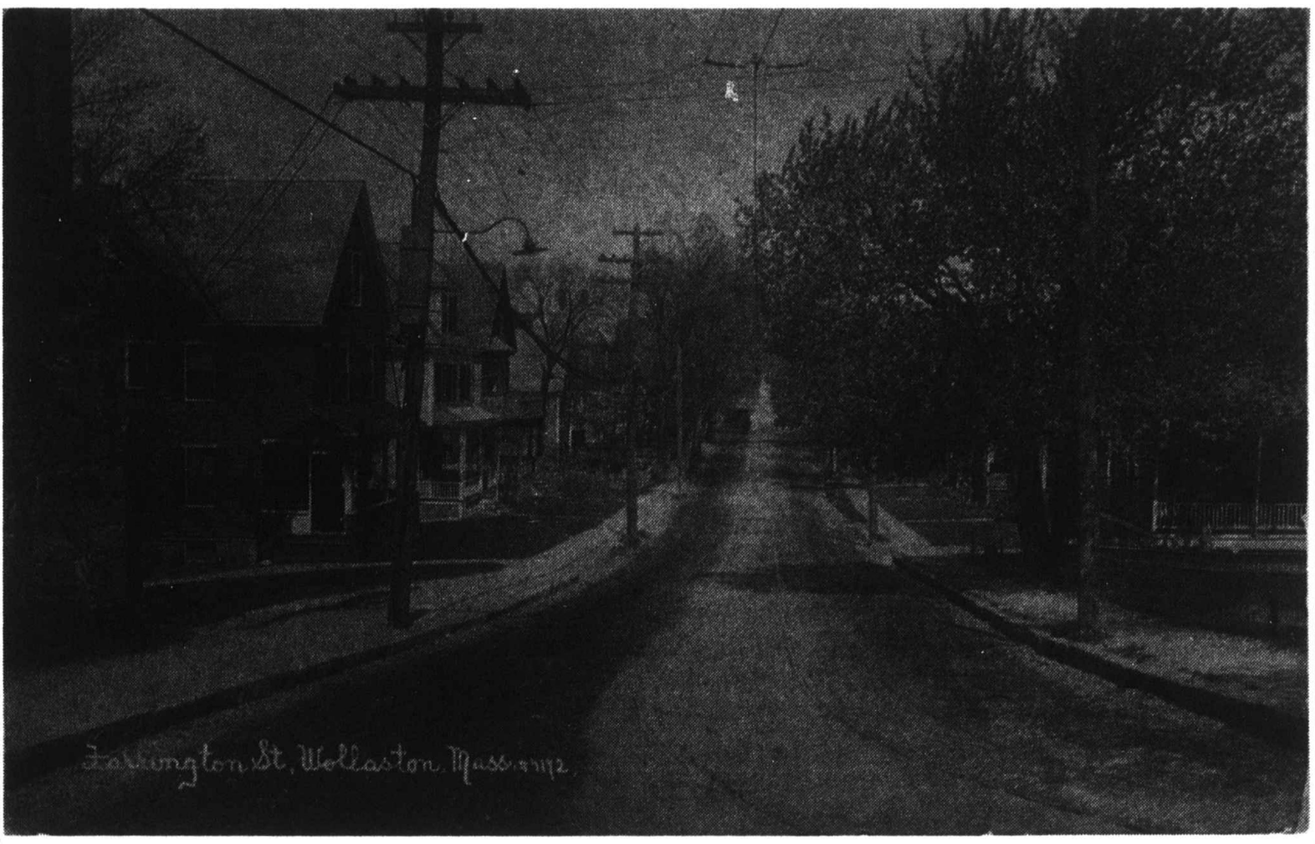
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1920s real photo postcard view of Farrington Street in Wollaston. This view looking north is from Beale Street with the Wollaston Unitarian Church just visible on the left. In 1958 the Wollaston Unitarian Society merged with the First Parish Church in Quincy Square and this church became St. Catherine's; today, it is residential condominiums. The trolley tracks in the foreground turned off Beale Street on the right corner and ran the length of Farrington from Beale Street to West Squantum Street. This was part of the west-of-the-railroad trolley loop that ran from the Adams Academy in Quincy Square to Barry's Corner in Atlantic. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Interactive Whiteboards For 84 Classrooms

By SCOTT JACKSON

Interactive whiteboards and short throw projectors will be installed in 84 classrooms in schools across the city next month.

The school department will purchase the new equipment using $250,000 in excessive funds. The school system received the funds after a state grant that paid for 38 kindergarten aides was partially restored; the money to pay the aides was funded out of Quincy's general fund this year in anticipation of losing the grant, leaving the schools with a one-time windfall once the grant was partially restored.

The School Committee unanimously approved the appropriation for the new technology.

The new items will be installed in 58 elementary classrooms – at least five classrooms at each of the city's 11 elementary schools will receive them, according to Laura Owens, assistant to School Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro. A total of 16 classrooms at Atlantic, Broad Meadows and Point Webster Middle Schools will receive the interactive whiteboards and projectors and 10 classrooms at North Quincy High will be outfitted with the new equipment.

Interactive whiteboards and projectors were installed at the two newest schools in the city – Central Middle School and Quincy High – during their construction; several classrooms at each school will receive replacement items.

No new interactive whiteboards will be installed at Sterling Middle School, because the city has already started planning a replacement for that building; the new school's classrooms will be outfitted the technology. In the interim, Owens said portable interactive whiteboards and projectors used at other schools would be moved to Sterling.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 2, 1897, American author Stephen Crane survives the sinking of The Commodore off the coast of Florida. He will turn the harrowing adventure into his classic short story "The Open Boat."

• On Dec. 29, 1915, the French National Assembly formally cedes the land that holds the British war cemeteries to Great Britain, ensuring that even as World War I was being fought, its most sacred monuments would be forever protected.

• On Dec. 30, 1922, in post-revolutionary Russia, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR, also known as the Soviet Union) is established, comprising a confederation of Russia, Belorussia, Ukraine and the future republics of Georgia, Azerbaijan and Armenia.

• On Jan. 3, 1938, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, an adult victim of polio, founds the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, later renamed the March of Dimes Foundation. The virus, which affects the central nervous system, flourished in contaminated food and water and was easily transmitted.

• On Dec. 28, 1954, Oscar-winning actor Denzel Washington is born in Mount Vernon, N.Y. In 2002, for his performance as a corrupt cop in "Training Day," Washington became the first black man to win the Best Actor Academy Award since Sidney Poitier in 1964.

• On Jan. 1, 1973, Roseann Quinn, a 27-year-old New York teacher, visits Tweed's Bar in Manhattan and is picked up by her soon-to-be killer. The incident inspired the cautionary novel "Looking for Mr. Goodbar," later made into a movie starring Diane Keaton.

• On Dec. 31, 1999, the United States hands over control of the Panama Canal, putting the strategic waterway into Panamanian hands for the first time. A ship heading from New York to San Francisco can save about 7,800 miles by taking the Panama Canal rather than sailing around South America.

City Loses Interest In Voting Machines

No apparent interest in the immediate purchase of voting machines for Quincy was registered by the city council after Mrs. Hattie May Thomas, city clerk, had given the councillors facts she had obtained about the gadgets during the course of an investigation, which she had made at the request of the council.

It would cost approximately $120,000 to place these machines in each of the city's 32 precinct-polling places, it was estimated, as each machine costs $1,300 and each polling place would need three.

They are expensive to handle, store and maintain, the city clerk said, and would eliminate only one election officer in each precinct. They need a highly skilled person to keep in working order, Mrs. Thomas noted.

NAZI DRIVE STILL UNCHECKED; GERMAN ASSUALT PUSHES AHEAD TO BELGIUM AND LUXEMBURG

Local attention was focused on the heaviest German Counteroffensive of the western campaign coordinated with a savage V-bomb barrage, rolled unchecked through the American First Army lines to a depth of several miles, punching through into Belgium and Luxemburg at three or more points along a fluid 70-mile battlefront.

Late field dispatches indicated the Americans were riding the German blow and putting up increasingly stiff resistance as the initial shock of the attack passed. (Editor's note: This military action between Dec. 17, 1944 and late January 1945 became known as "The Battle of the Bulge.")

Quincy Native Authors New Book On Adams, Jefferson

'Agony And Eloquence' On Sale Feb. 2

Quincy native Daniel Mallock has written a new book entitled Agony and Eloquence: John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, and a World of Revolution, a story of the greatest friendship in American history and of the revolutionary times in which it came together, fell apart, and was ultimately renewed.

The book, published by Skyhorse Publishing, will be on sale beginning Feb. 2.

In the wake of George Washington's retirement, longtime friends Thomas Jefferson and John Adams came to represent the opposing political forces vying to shape America's future. Adams's victory in the 1796 presidential election brought Jefferson into the administration as an unlikely and deeply conflicted vice president. The bloody Republican revolution in France finally brought their political differences to a fever pitch.

In a thorough take on this fascinating period, Mallock outlines how a young America's major players, their relationships, and the events around them run eerily parallel to revolutionary developments in France.

Many important and fascinating people appear in the book, including: Thomas Paine, Abigail Adams, James Madison, John Quincy Adams, Tobias Lear, Samuel Adams, Maximilien Robespierre, Alexander Hamilton, Georges Danton, Louis Antoine de Saint-Just, Marquis de Lafayette and John Marshall.

These major characters are brought to life by Mallock's insightful analysis and clear and lively writing.

Agony and Eloquence is a thoroughly researched and tautly written modern history, weaving Jefferson and Adams's actual correspondence with Mallock's gripping narrative style.

Mallock grew up within walking distance of Peacefield, the Quincy home of John and Abigail Adams. He was a member of the Civil War Round Table of Greater Boston and the Quincy Historical Society. Mallock attended Ripon College and Brandeis University and has published articles in North and South. He lives in Nashville, Tennessee, with his family and several cats.

Quincy College Transfer Week

Quincy College is hosting an entire week dedicated to making the transfer process to Quincy College easier.

Beginning Monday and continuing through Friday, Dec. 18, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, Quincy College will be hosting walk-in consultations with advisers during which students can review transfer credits, explore financial aid eligibility, and get help completing FAFSA paperwork to support their acceptance to Quincy College.

Transfer Week will be held in the Admissions Office on the Quincy Campus, Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock Street, Room 412 and at the Front Reception Area on the Plymouth Campus at 36 Cordage Park.

With Quincy Quick, the accelerated acceptance and transfer program, students can apply to the college and register for classes during Transfer Week or anytime online and start the Winter Flex program in December or the Spring Semester in January 2016.

"Quincy College values all students and recognizes the support needed when applying for college," said Tom Pham, Admissions Support, Quincy College. "Oftentimes, this fall on the shoulders of students. Transfer students especially need guidance and support when navigating the admissions process. Whether applying for a certificate program or simply auditing a class, we look forward to answering any and all questions prospective students may have."

Students will be able to get a real feel for the Quincy College community and apply online or in-person for one of 35 Associate programs or 21 Certificate programs. Interested students should contact Trish Hall at thall@quincycollege.edu to register for Transfer Week. Additionally, students should bring a sealed transcript, FAFSA paperwork, and questions.

Registry Food Drive Continues Through Dec. 31

Saying that the demand this year appears greater than ever, Norfolk County Register of Deeds William O'Donnell announces the Registry's Annual Holiday Food Drive will continue to run through Dec. 31.

"Here in Norfolk County," O'Donnell said, "some of our less fortunate neighbors continue to face economic hardship. We know this because we see each month the Notice to Foreclose Mortgage recordings that take place. Furthermore, at a statewide level, Project Bread noted that 1 out of every 10 households in Massachusetts is food insecure.

"The Greater Boston Food Band has distributed more food product the week before Thanksgiving than ever before, including produce. The signs are visibly out there that people need help."

Local pantry officials agree food donations, especially as we head into the winter and holiday months, are critical to their operations.

"The holiday season is the busiest time of year. For the past 40 years, we have relied on the generosity of our local communities to donate food and help neighbors in need," said Rick Doane, Executive Director of Interfaith Social Services of Quincy. "Unfortunately, the issue of hunger does not stop at any border."

O'Donnell noted nonperishable food items such as rice, canned vegetables and soups, spaghetti, tomato sauce and paste are quite popular. Toiletries and paper products are also greatly appreciated.

These and other items can be brought directly to the Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., through Thursday, Dec.31.

A donation bin has been set up in the Registry building lobby which is open to the public Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Those who wish to donate but are unable to travel to the Registry can do so by donating food supplies at their local pantries across Norfolk County.

"Dropping off a food donation at the Registry or a local food pantry could make the difference in a family's holiday. Working together, we can make a huge difference this holiday season," O'Donnell said.

For a list of local food pantries, visit the Registry of Deeds website at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is a resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information.

Residents in need of assistance can contact the Registry of Deeds Customer Service Center via telephone at (781) 461-6101, or on the web at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

New Food Court Addition At Common Market Restaurants

The Common Market Restaurants announces the addition of a new eatery within the Village Common Food Court at 110 Willard St., Quincy.

In addition to The Fish n' Chicken, the Pasta Caffe, The Healthy Kitchen and the Yogurt Bar, guests can now enjoy Creation, a one-of-a-kind pizza and salad experience.

Customers can create their own personalized Neapolitan style pizza, cooked in an 800-degree stone oven or design their own hand tossed salad from a wide assortment of ingredients. There is also a list of "signature items" already designed for the undecided customer.

"This concept is similar to Chipotle, but it's for salads and pizzas," said Greg McDonald, family member and an owner of The Common Market Restaurant Group. "The customer can get great food in a fast and casual environment.

"We're excited about our new imported stone oven from Italy, which is the first-of-its-kind in New England," McDonald said. "Our pizzas cook in two minutes and our salads have innovative house made dressings," he added.

Creation is open daily from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. For more information, call 617-472-9464 or visit www.commonmarketrestaurants.com.

Quincy Republicans Celebrate Successes At Christmas Party

The Quincy Republican City Committee recently celebrated the holiday season, plus recent successes, during its annual Christmas party Dec. 8 at the Best Western Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St., North Quincy.

"Our ranks have grown considerably, we hosted two successful local candidates' debates and we helped elect friend of Quincy Charlie Baker the governor of Massachusetts, returning the state to strong, fiscally sound and compassionate GOP leadership," said Quincy Republican City Committee chairwoman Christine Cedrone.

Fifty percent of Quincy voters supported Baker in the 2014 election, to just 45 percent for his Democrat challenger.

Voters of all backgrounds have applauded Baker's leadership: a recent survey by Morning Consult declared Baker the most popular governor in the country, with 74 percent of Bay State voters giving him a favorable grade.

"The same survey showed that the six most popular governors in the nation are Republicans," said Cedrone. "It's more evidence that the GOP's message of fiscal discipline while empowering local citizens and local communities is resonating across the nation."

Stuffed Calamari

By MARIE

On Christmas Eve it is a tradition in many families to gather together and enjoy several types of fish specialties. I am going to make stuffed Calamari (Squid) and will serve it over favorite pasta.

Calamari can be made ahead of time and then heated the day they are going to be used.

Ingredients for Stuffed Calamari

6 to 8 Calamari, (preferably cleaned) or the amount you will need (three to four inches long because the small ones are too difficult to stuff)

Filling:

Combine:

1 cup of Panko bread crumbs or two slices of soaked bread

1 egg

½ teaspoons basil

½ cup

1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Enough water to moisten the mixture.

2 tablespoons of tomato sauce.

Rinse out squid (Try to buy the ones already cleaned) and stuff each one about ¾ full and secure with a sturdy toothpick putting the toothpick on the top so the filling will have a chance to expand. After these are filled set them aside.

For a Quick Marina Sauce:

Heat 2 tablespoons of olive oil and add one small chopped onion and a clove of garlic. Add 1 can of crushed tomatoes and a tablespoon of parsley. Cook for about 15 minutes and then very slowly so as not to break the squid, place them in the sauce one by one and simmer also slowly for about 30 minutes. When you turn them you have to be very careful as they break easily. Sometimes you will undoubtedly find two or three have broken open but they can still be eaten.

After they are cooked and the toothpicks are removed, they can be served over a favorite spaghetti or rice.

P.S. ¼ cup of chopped spinach may also be added.

Herbed Quinoa Stuffing With Squash, Cranberries And Roasted Chestnuts

Here is a recipe that I prepared when I was on WBZ as the "nutrition expert" some years ago. I still make it every holiday but I also make it on cold days.

Rather than a stuffing loaded with bread, how about a stuffing that uses quinoa as the main ingredient? Tastes so good, you wont miss the classic bread stuffing. Adds fiber and protein, as well as some important nutrition, and much easier to digest.

Serve it any time with some roasted chicken and a nice salad.

Herbed Quinoa Stuffing With Squash, Cranberries And Roasted Chestnuts

Ingredients

One bag or box of quinoa (16 ounce box)

6 cups organic chicken broth

2/3 cup dried cranberries soaked in boiling water for 15 minutes (apple juice infused, not sweetened with sugar)

1/4 cup liquid from soaked cranberries

3 Tablespoons olive oil

1 package chopped butternut squash

1 cup diced onion

2 large stalks celery

1 cup chopped carrots

1 cup chopped roasted chestnuts (Jarred ones are best)

3 Tablespoons combined chopped fresh sage, chopped fresh thyme, and chopped fresh rosemary or marjoram)

About 2 -3 teaspoons Redmonds Real salt or Trocamare /Herbamare seasoned sea salt

Pepper

2 Tablespoons pasture butter

Sprigs of rosemary for garnish

1/4 cup fresh chopped parsley

1 tsp real maple syrup

Directions

Cook the quinoa in the broth according to package directions. Cover and set aside. While quinoa is cooking, roast the squash until slightly browned and soft. Season with some salt and pepper, and toss in 1 teaspoon real maple syrup.

In a saute pan, saute onions, celery, and carrots until lightly browned and softened, about 10 minutes. Add the fresh herbs and soaked cranberries and cook another few minutes. Add the 1/4 cup juice from the soaked cranberries and the chestnuts. Combine all of this with the squash and quinoa in pot and stir until combined. Mixture will be a bit mushy, and this is perfect. Taste for seasonings. May need a bit more sea salt.

Place in greased casserole pan (I separate this recipe into 2 pans, freeze one and have the other for the big day! but you may need both) Top with a Tablespoon of pasture butter on each pan. If using one pan, use both Tablespoons. (Pasture butter is a healthy form of butter made from cows that are grass fed.

Excellent health benefits and many experts agree in small amounts, is a wonderfully healthy alternative to inferior oils and margarines.)

Bake at 350 covered with foil for about 40 minutes until sizzling and a good consistency. Serve hot. Great reheated also! Can be made in advance and frozen, if needed.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL students listen to Professor Jennifer Butte-Dahl from the University of Washington-Seattle at Harvard University.

QHS Students Participate In Harvard's Program For International Education

Over 60 Quincy High School students had the privilege of working with Harvard's Program for International Education (HPIE) over the past two months. Undergraduates from Harvard visited selected classes to share their global curriculum titled, Our Human Planet. Students learned both the history and current issues of global concerns.

The culmination of HPIE is a full-day field trip to Harvard's campus where students collaborate and negotiate a solution to a particular international crisis. Students were challenged to address the current Syrian refugee crisis by working in groups representing the key players: the U.S., the E.U., Greece, Turkey, Lebanon, the Gulf States, and the United Nations High Commission for Refugees (UNHRC).

After experiencing the challenges of finding a solution, students were treated to a discussion by Professor Jennifer Butte-Dahl of the University of Washington-Seattle who has worked extensively in the Middle East for both the U.S. government and private affiliates. Fluent in Arabic she admitted that she had not really understood the plight of the Syrian refugees until her time in the Greek island of Lesbos where refugees made their entry into the European Union.

Professor Butte-Dahl arranged a live Skype visit with Syrian refugee teenager, Amr, who recently made the journey from Syria to Sweden where his family has been relocated. Students had the opportunity to see Amr and to ask him questions about his journey, his settlement in Sweden and his hopes for the future.

Professor Butte-Dahl also works with Shelter Box, a British based non-profit organization that responds to crises with tents and temporary necessities. She shared with students how they can help which includes six components: learn, inform, advocate, donate, fundraise and volunteer.

Administration Opposes Changes To Affordable Housing Ordinance

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch's administration is opposed to amending the city's affordable housing ordinance to require downtown redevelopers to comply with its terms, according to the city's planning director.

A proposal currently pending before the City Council would amend the Inclusionary Zoning Ordinance – Section 7.1 of the zoning code – by striking a portion of the text that states the provisions of the IZO, which sets the regulations for affordable housing, do not apply to urban renewal uses. Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci introduced the proposed amendment at the council's Sept. 28 meeting.

Planning Director James Fatseas said the mayoral administration is opposed to making the change to the IZO at this time because the exemption provides relief to downtown developers. In the future, as development advances in Quincy Center, the position of the administration could change.

"It is the administration's position currently that 'the provisions of Sections 7.1, should not apply to urban renewal uses,' should not be stricken (from the zoning code). We feel that that affords a developer an opportunity to receive some relief if in fact these properties are in the downtown redevelopment district," Fatseas said.

"At a future date it could be considered and could be acceptable, but at this time we feel very clearly it is premature as the downtown redevelopment is truly still in an embryonic state."

Fatseas was speaking at the Dec. 9 meeting of the Planning Board. The board was slated to issue an advisory opinion on Palmucci's amendment, but board members opted not to do so because of uncertainty over whether or not a full public hearing before the board was required.

Quincy's Inclusionary Zoning Ordinance currently applies to all residential projects in the city that require a special permit, variance or site plan review from any board or commission and include 10 or more residential units, except downtown redevelopments undertaken as urban renewal projects.

Under the zoning code, 10 percent of units in applicable projects must be made

Police Lt. Suspended Six Months Without Pay

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch has suspended Quincy Police Lt. Thomas Corliss six months without pay and reassigned him from his position as a commander of the Special Operations Unit following an internal investigation into allegations regarding private details the lieutenant worked.

Police Chief Paul Keenan said in a statement that an internal investigation found 21 instances of Corliss working city time overlapping with private details and/or other city time. The investigation further revealed Corliss took nine vacation days that were not recorded in department attendance records.

The value of those incidents, according to Keenan, was $11,000.

Koch handed down Corliss' discipline Dec. 10. In addition to the half-year suspension and reassignment, the lieutenant will also be barred from working any detail for a year and will forfeit 20 vacation days. The mayor said the punishment in this case sends the message that the behavior involved will not be tolerated.

"I have great faith and trust in the police chief and that certainly applies to my acceptance of his recommendation in this matter," Koch said in a statement. "Through discipline of this severity, the chief has made it abundantly clear – and I agree with him -- that behavior of this kind simply will not be tolerated in the Quincy Police Department in any way, shape or form."

Corliss has accepted the discipline and will not appeal, according to Keenan; the lieutenant also signed a "last chance agreement," meaning any further infractions could result in termination.

Corliss earned about $147,000 in base pay last year.

Quincy Fire Department Opioid Recovery Resource Guide

By MIKE SLADE
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

The opioid crisis in Metro Boston communities has reached epidemic proportions.

When a person overdoses on opioids, the Quincy Fire Department often will arrive on scene to the patient unresponsive with a weak pulse and agonal breathing. Quincy Fire will immediately provide rescue breathing and Narcan to the patient in order to keep the patient alive while the administered Narcan works to reverse the effects of the opioids.

Last week, Chief Joseph Barron issued a general order which stated the following:

"The Quincy Fire Department has entered into a coordinating effort with the Massachusetts Bar Association, A New Way Recovery Center Quincy, and Our Place Recovery Clubhouse Quincy, in an effort to confront and help eradicate opioid overdoses within the City of Quincy. In furtherance of this mission, an opioid resource guide has been created to help educate those in the grips of opioid addiction, as well as family members, as to the resources for help in Quincy."

The Quincy Fire Department's Opioid Recovery Resource guide is now carried in the medical bag of all engine companies throughout the City of Quincy and given out at all medical calls involving suspected opioid overdoses. The opioid recovery resource guide highlights the following resources for those who are seeking help with recovery from opioid addiction:

A NEW WAY RECOVERY CENTER

A New Way Recovery Center is a safe place for everyone in recovery to go for support, community connections, resources, sober activities, and to help and support others in recovery. It is a community with a goal of supporting one another and having a place in which we all belong. Everyone affiliated with A New Way is in recovery. They are here because they are proud of their recovery and are committed to supporting a strong recovery community.

Not sure you're an alcoholic or addict?

Just come to a meeting - see if you can relate to anything… there are no requirements for membership, other than the desire to recover. Our Place Recovery Clubhouse is a venue for meetings of Alcoholics Anonymous and other 12-step based recovery programs. Our Place Recovery is a volunteer-run organization that exists to give back, providing individuals and groups interested in sobriety a place to gather, work and recover. Most meetings that take place at the clubhouse are listed in the meeting list book, and are open to all who would like to attend.

Our Place Recovery is committed to creating communities where addicts and individuals in recovery can support one another as they explore and live a recovery-centered life.

If anyone is in danger of serious harm due to opioid abuse, please dial 911 and you will have caring emergency personnel on scene within three minutes. For those who have tried seeking help but have ended up unsuccessful in getting treatment, please be advised of the following:

Massachusetts General Laws Chapter 123, Section 35 permits the courts to involuntarily commit someone whose alcohol or drug use puts themselves or others at risk. Such a commitment can lead to an inpatient substance abuse treatment for a period of up to 90 days.

The Massachusetts Bar Association's President Robert Harnais has announced a pilot project in Norfolk County, where citizens can call pro-bono lawyers to assist them with regard to Section 35 Petitions. For assistance or questions, please call 1-844-843-6221, or email at Helpus@MassBar.org

The Quincy Fire Department is dedicated to serving the citizens of Quincy. If you should have any questions or concerns whatsoever, please do not hesitate to call the Fire Prevention Bureau at 617-376-1015

Quincy Emergency Planning Committee Fully Certified

City Eligible For Additional Training, Equipment Grants

By SCOTT JACKSON

State officials have granted full certification to Quincy's Local Emergency Planning Committee, a move that makes the city eligible for additional grants.

The Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency recently granted to committee full certification, which is effective for five years.

"By obtaining this full certification, it makes us eligible for more grants from MEMA than we would have been other wise and it recognizes all the work we do," said Fire Chief Joseph Barron, who is the committee's chairman.

There are three different stages of certification granted by MEMA to local emergency planning committees, start-up, provision, and full. Quincy's local committee had held provisional certification since Barron became fire chief seven-and-a-half years ago but it had never been fully certified.

The committee is required to meet at least twice each year, Barron said. As part of the requirement for full certification, officials from a dozen different categories of community groups and city departments must attend. Those include representatives from the Fire and Police Departments; the Department of Public Works; the Health Department; the Municipal Finance Department; local print and broadcast media, in this case Quincy Access Television; hospitals and nursing homes; and other businesses operating in the city, such as those that handle hazardous materials.

Barron said the committee meets to discuss how to respond to various issues in the city and Quincy's critical infrastructure – schools, healthcare facilities and other industrial buildings – as well as the training undertaken by the various departments for emergency situations.

At its most recent meeting on Dec. 10, Barron said Chris DiBona, the director of clinical performance for Brewster Ambulance, provided an update on ambulance service in the city.

"Everybody who attended was very pleased. Response times to incidents from Brewster are down and the many assets they've brought into the city are responsible for that," Barron said.

"I particularly thank them for providing a drone at two recent fire incidents (Captain's Cove Marina and 307-311 Newport Ave.)… It's very beneficial when you have a fire in a full block to have eyes on all four sides of the building, which an incident commander can't do on his own."

Doug Forbes, a local coordinator for MEMA, also attended that meeting. In a statement, he said the committee has made Quincy a stronger and safer city.

QUINCY LOCAL EMERGENCY Planning Committee has received full certification by the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency. The certification makes the city eligible for additional grants for equipment and training. Here, Fire Chief Joseph Barron (left), the chairman of the committee, accepts the certificate from Doug Forbes, a local coordinator for the state agency. Photo Courtesy Quincy Fire Department

"I would like to commend Fire Chief Joseph Barron, Fire Captain Richard Bryan and all the members of the Quincy Local Emergency Planning Committee for their hard work and dedication," Forbes said.

"Thanks to their efforts, the city of Quincy is a much stronger and safer place in which to live and work. The State Emergency Response Commission has unanimously approved the Quincy Local Emergency Planning Committee's application for full certification."

In addition to Bryan, Barron also credited Mary Phelan for her work in getting the Quincy Local Emergency Planning Committee up to full certification. Phelan is Barron's secretary in the Emergency Management Office.

Barron said the new MEMA grants the city is eligible for as a result of the full certification are primarily for training and equipment. Other city departments, besides the Fire and Police Departments, may also be eligible for those grants.

Alzheimer's Disease - The Long Goodbye

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

RUTH JONES

Alzheimer's disease is an irreversible, ongoing brain disorder that slowly destroys memory and thinking skills and the ability to conduct even the simplest tasks. It is currently ranked as the sixth leading cause of death in the United States, but estimates denote that it may rank third as cause of death for older people. Alzheimer's is the most common cause of dementia among older adults.

It seems that damage to the brain starts a decade or more before memory and other cognitive problems appear. During this stage of Alzheimer's, people seem to be symptom-free, but toxic changes are happening in the brain. Abnormal deposits of proteins form amyloid plaques and tangles throughout the brain, and neurons (nerve cells) that stop functioning, lose connections with other neurons, and die. The damage initially appears in the hippocampus, the part of the brain that forms memories. As more neurons die, additional parts of the brain are affected, and they begin to shrink. By the final stage of Alzheimer's, damage is extensive, and brain tissue has shrunk drastically.

Memory problems are one of the initial signs of cognitive impairment related to Alzheimer's disease, though symptoms vary from person to person. For many, decline in non-memory aspects of cognition, such as word-finding, impaired reasoning or judgment and vision/spatial issues may signal the very early stages of Alzheimer's disease. In mild Alzheimer's disease, memory loss and other cognitive difficulties usually progress. Problems can include roaming and getting lost, difficulty handling money, repeating questions, taking longer to complete normal daily tasks, and personality and behavior changes. People are often diagnosed in this stage.

In the moderate stage, damage occurs in areas of the brain that regulate language, reasoning, sensory processing, and conscious thought. Memory loss and confusion deteriorate, and people may have problems recognizing family and friends. They may be incapable of learning new things, carrying out multistep tasks such as getting dressed, or coping with new situations. Additionally, people at this stage can experience hallucinations, delusions, and paranoia and may behave impulsively.

People with severe Alzheimer's cannot communicate and are completely dependent on others for their care. Near the end, the person may be bedridden as the body shuts down.

Early-onset Alzheimer's occurs in people age 30 to 60 and represents less than 5 percent of all people with Alzheimer's. Most cases are caused by an inherited change in one of three genes, resulting in a type known as early-onset familial Alzheimer's disease, or FAD. For others, the disease appears to develop without any definitive cause, much as it does for people with late-onset disease. Most people with Down syndrome develop Alzheimer's, possibly because people with Down syndrome have an extra copy of chromosome 21, which contains the gene that generates harmful amyloid.

The majority of Alzheimer's cases have the late-onset form of the disease, in which symptoms become apparent in their mid-60s. Late-onset Alzheimer's arises from a complex series of brain variations that occur over decades. The causes probably include a combination of genetic, environmental, and lifestyle factors. Scientists are conducting studies to learn more about plaques, tangles, and other biological features of Alzheimer's disease. They are also exploring the very earliest steps in the disease process by studying changes in the brain and body fluids that can be detected years before Alzheimer's symptoms appear. One of the mysteries of Alzheimer's disease is why it largely strikes older adults. Scientists are learning how age-related changes in the brain may injure neurons and contribute to Alzheimer's damage.

Research suggests that numerous factors beyond genetics may play a role in the development and course of Alzheimer's disease. Over the past 30 years, research has linked moderate and severe traumatic brain injury to a greater risk of developing Alzheimer's disease years after the original head injury. There is immense interest in the relationship between cognitive decline and vascular conditions such as heart disease, stroke, and high blood pressure, as well as metabolic conditions such as diabetes and obesity. A nutritious diet, physical activity, social engagement, and mentally stimulating pursuits have all been linked to helping people stay healthy as they age and these factors might also help reduce the risk of cognitive decline and Alzheimer's disease. Clinical trials are testing some of these possibilities.

To diagnose Alzheimer's doctors may:

- Ask the person and a family member or friend questions about overall health, past medical problems, ability to carry out daily activities, and changes in behavior and personality
- Conduct tests of memory, problem solving, attention, counting, and language
- Carry out standard medical tests, such as blood and urine tests, to identify other possible causes of the problem
- Perform brain scans, such as computed tomography (CT), magnetic resonance imaging (MRI), or positron emission tomography (PET), to rule out other possible causes for symptoms

These tests may be done at intervals to give doctors information about memory and other cognitive functions are changing over time. Alzheimer's disease can be definitely diagnosed only after death, by associating clinical measures with an examination of brain tissue in an autopsy.

People who have concerns with their memory or thinking should talk to their doctor to find out whether their symptoms are due to Alzheimer's or other causes, such as stroke, tumor, Parkinson's disease, sleep disturbances, side effects of medication, an infection, or a non-Alzheimer's dementia. Some of these conditions may be treatable and reversible. If the diagnosis is Alzheimer's initiating treatment early in the disease process may help preserve daily functioning for some time, even though the underlying disease process cannot be halted or reversed. An early diagnosis also helps families plan for the future by organizing financial and legal matters, addressing potential safety issues, learning about living arrangements, and developing support networks.

Bruce Kantor's Mantra:

If It's Tuesday, It's Java Time At Eventide

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

KANTOR AND JAVA regularly visit the Eventide Nursing Home on Adams Street in Quincy on Tuesdays. Greeting the rescued greyhound here is resident Cecile LeClair.

When 67-year-old Bruce Kantor retired from his 30 year career as a social worker with DSS/DCF, his wife felt it important that he have a 'retirement identity,' so Kantor set about putting his precious pet, Java, into service as a therapy dog.

Java is a 9-year-old greyhound who was rescued by the Greyhound Friends, Inc., at the end of his Wonderland racing career, when he was three years old. Kantor has been Java's owner for the past six years and deemed him a perfect dog to provide pet therapy.

"This dog is so mellow and gentle and good with everybody, so I looked into it, and found that one needs to be certified, so we went through an agency called Dog B.O.N.E.S." This agency provides workshops and classroom sessions as well as matching facilities who would like to receive visits with the right pets and handlers.

On Tuesdays, Kantor and Java regularly visit the Eventide Nursing Home on Adams Street. They also visit the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center, as well as South Shore Hospital and other area schools. Java even gets to listen to children read to him in local libraries.

It may be surprising to learn that pets as therapeutic partners were initially used as far back as the 18th century and also were employed by the American Red Cross in military convalescent care following World War II. The nurturing and emotional support dogs offer are a valued approach in physical and psychosocial areas.

For example, pet therapy has contributed to a decrease in anxiety or loneliness, and to an increase in self-esteem and willingness to "join in." Some hospital and nursing home patients exhibit an increased interest in exercising or interacting with others, re-energizing social skills and independent movement.

Kantor said, "As a social worker I always felt fulfilled working with people, and with Java, whether it's the pediatric unit at SSH, and seeing the joy he brings to those kids or whether it's at an assisted living program or at live-reading in libraries, putting smiles on people's faces makes my heart smile. It's wonderful."

Kantor claims his visits to Eventide and helping others is "in his blood" and although retired, he wished to continue to serve the community, "doing something for people," and he felt that greyhounds for pet therapy were a perfect choice, as they are mellow, well-behaved, crate-trained dogs who require little care compared to some more demanding breeds.

"Java is the second greyhound we've had, I've had dogs all my life and greyhounds, which are one of the oldest breeds – there are drawings of greyhounds with pharaohs – are the easiest maintenance dog you could ever have…he doesn't bark…the only time I heard him bark was if he was ever in the backyard and wanted to come in."

Experts say that pet therapy positively affects social, emotional and cognitive functions. Kantor can attest to that, first hand. "For instance, some kids start out afraid of dogs, and after Java has been there a couple of times, they get excited to see him. And some folks in hospitals who are stuck in their beds for hours and are perhaps in pain, after three or four minutes, they are able to forget bad things that are going around and are able to smile. Petting a dog can lower blood pressure and create relaxation in a patient."

Kantor also cited instances of where agitated children are calmed when petting Java, and some special needs children who are not mobile being motivated to get out of their chairs and walk up and down the corridor holding Java's leash.

"I have seen lots of kids who are shy, whom the teacher says doesn't say two words, and when Java comes in the child talks unbelievably, or when we are at the library and kids start reading to him, and showing him pictures, it takes away all the stigma… talking and reading to a dog is non-threatening."

Soon-to-be 104 year-old Kay McIntire, a three-year-resident of Eventide and confessed animal lover said, "I enjoy Java's visits so much—he's very friendly and he likes me to kiss him!"

QPS Receives Grant For Farm To School Program

By SCOTT JACKSON

A federal grant of nearly $73,000 will help expand the Quincy Public Schools Farm to School Program, allowing for the purchase of more locally grown food and the expansion of nutrition-based programs into the curriculum citywide.

Kevin Concannon, undersecretary for food, nutrition, and consumer services for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, announced the grant inside the Presidents Café at Quincy High School on Dec. 2. Concannon joined school administrators on tour of the school following the announcement, visiting the culinary program's kitchen, a rooftop greenhouse where herbs and vegetables are grown for the culinary program, and the school cafeteria.

"We love to see the fact that more and more schools across the U.S. have adopted various aspects of what we broadly characterize as Farm to School," Concannon said. "Part of that effort is supporting school food service directors, like your own here, to give them more encouragement and ability to source locally grown foods. They can't do it for the whole menu but they can for parts of that."

The program also helps teach students where their food comes from, in part by planting gardens at schools – like the greenhouse at Quincy High and other gardens at city schools – and also through the curriculum. Concannon recalled working in Iowa as the state's health and human services secretary and asking students where their food came from, only to be told it came from the local supermarket.

"[It's a] way of connecting students to the lifecycle," Concannon said of the Farm to School initiative. "It gets incorporated into the science classes, to the earth science [classes]. It's a way of teaching students sustainable practices."

Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said the Farm to School initiative has provided students with hands-on experiences related to growing and harvesting food, provided after-school activities and added to the health and wellness program on top of allowing for the purchase of locally grown food.

"This implementation allows so many great things within the Quincy Public Schools," the superintendent said.

"It brings really our STEM program – science, technology, engineering and math – to a different level with really relevant hands-on experiences of planting, growing, harvesting and of course sharing.

"Support of our Quincy Public Schools health and wellness program, increasing student and staff awareness of nutrition and so many healthy choice opportunities.

"Enhancing our curriculum after the bell when we look at summer STEM programming at school sites supported by so many great partnerships with local organizations."

All city schools will have a garden, like the greenhouse at Quincy High, by 2020 under the Farm to School program, DeCristofaro noted.

QUINCY Public Schools recently received a federal grant of nearly $73,000 toward its Farm to School program, which will allow for the purchase of more locally grown food and the expansion of nutrition-based programs into the curriculum citywide. Joint Convention Jan. 11 To Fill Vacant School Seat

By SCOTT JACKSON

A joint convention of the City Council and School Committee to fill a vacant seat on the school board will be held Monday, Jan. 11 at 6:30 p.m. in the Great Hall of the James R. McIntyre Government Center (old City Hall), 1306 Hancock St.

The joint convention is being held to fill the School Committee seat being vacated by Noel DiBona, who was elected to an at-large council seat last month. DiBona will leave his seat on the school board before being sworn into the council during inaugural ceremonies set for Jan. 4.

The resident appointed to the seat will serve out the remaining two years on DiBona's term. The seat will be one of three up for grabs in the 2017 municipal election.

Any resident of the city is eligible to nominate themselves for the School Committee seat during the convention.

The 15 members of the City Council and the School Committee, including Mayor Thomas Koch who is the chairman of the latter as part of his duties as mayor, will each be able to vote for their preferred candidate. Koch will also serve as chairman of the joint convention.

Emily Lebo, a former member of the School Committee, has expressed interest in the vacant seat. Lebo, a longtime school administrator in Quincy and later Boston, was elected to the committee in 2009 and unsuccessfully ran for re-election in 2013, losing her seat to DiBona. She launched a write-in campaign for one of three seats available in this year's election, finishing fourth behind incumbents Paul Bregoli and Kathryn Hubley and newcomer James DeAmicis, who became the youngest resident to win municipal office in city history at age 19.

Anti-Child Labor Film Screened At BM School

Documentary Filmmaker/Activist Len Morris Returns To City To Celebrate Human Rights Day

DOCUMENTARY FILMMAKER and activist Len Morris came to Quincy Dec. 10 to screen his latest anti-child labor film "The Same Heart." Here Len shares a moment with "Same Heart" wearing student members of the "Operation Day's Work" USA Club at Broad Meadows Middle School.

BROAD MEADOWS MIDDLE School students give a standing ovation to documentary filmmaker and activist Len Morris at the conclusion of his film "The Same Heart." The documentary is the third in a trilogy of anti-child labor/anti-poverty films produced by Morris and his production company Galen Films.

Documentary filmmaker and activist Len Morris came to Quincy Dec. 10 to screen his latest anti-child labor film "The Same Heart."

Morris also came here to celebrate Human Rights Day and to celebrate his long standing connection with the Broad Meadows Middle School student activists dating back to the 1990s.

Around 90 people attended the screening which was held inside the Broad Meadows Middle School auditorium. The Quincy screening is only the third time Len Morris has screened this 2015 documentary movie.

Most recently in 2012, Morris's charity "The Kenyan School House Project," was voted by Quincy student members of Operation Day's Work-USA, to be ODW's Charity of the Year. Morris's "Kenyan School House" educates and protects former child laborers who once were forced to pick cocoa beans and coffee beans in the fields of Kenya.

Before and after the screening of "The Same Heart," Morris took time to catch up with ODW members and to make plans for future collaborations.

Ilkim Gumus, a grade 7 student who attended the screening wrote this reflection: "I do believe Len Morris was glad he came to Broad Meadows because during his post screening Q+A, he cried which proves how dedicated he is and how much of his heart he poured into his films."

"The Same Heart" is a documentary film, the third in a trilogy of anti-child labor/anti-poverty films produced by Morris and his production company Galen Films. Meryl Streep narrated the first film and Charlayne Hunter-Gault narrates "The Same Heart."

"The Same Heart" contains footage of poverty's devastating effects on children but also contains possible global solutions to ending poverty. The film contains solutions offered by economic experts and features interviews with 7 Nobel Prize laureates, two of whom are Nobel Laureates in Economics. Others interviewed and appearing in the film range from the super rich like Bill Gates, Warren Buffet, to grassroots activists including an appearance with Quincy and Vermont members of ODW-USA.

A global tax of one penny per $100 on stock transactions is proposed as one possible way to establish a sustainable, anti-poverty fund which would for example be used to provide free vaccinations and free universal education to children currently unable to afford them. This is called "The Robin Hood Tax." The film explains why it is needed and emphasizes that the richest, top one percent of the planet's population does not pay its fair share of taxes.

In the film, Warren Buffet states: "The wealth of the top 1 percent has quintupled over the past 10 years while wages for the other 99 percent have not."

Abigail Drinkwater, grade 7 member of ODW reflected post screening: "Before I saw The Same Heart, I had no idea that there was so much extreme poverty, even here in the USA. When I thought about poverty before, I didn't think of the United States.

"I thought of places such as: Zimbabwe; India and other places around the world. This movie has changed my definition of poverty. When I saw the faces and heard the stories of children in poverty, it really made me want to help more. When I got into my mom's car after the movie, I said, 'Wow.' I was trying to find words to tell my mom about Len who goes out with a camera and creates such a message he can send to his film's audiences."

Besides making films, Morris is an activist, actively lobbying members of the U.S. Congress to urge them to propose bills in Congress that would establish "The Robin Hood Tax" in the US.

In fact, Morris was testifying at a Congressional Hearing in Washington, D.C., the morning of his Quincy screening of "The Same Heart." After his Congressional testimony, Morris immediately flew to Boston, then hustled over to the Broad Meadows Middle School auditorium in time for the screening.

Despite the serious content of "The Same Heart," students left the screening hopeful and even more determined to be active participants in the fight to end global poverty.

Emily Kraunelis, grade 7 reflected: "The film absolutely changed me. It made me open my eyes and realize that some truly awful things are going on in this world, but it's heartwarming to see that there are people like Len Morris who can be the light that guides less fortunate people out of the darkness."

Grace Akkara, grade 7 ODW member reflected after the screening, "I'll remember what Len told us in the cafeteria. He said the way to make a difference is with determination and faith. I talked to my mother after the film about how grateful I am. The film helped me realize that I may not have everything, but the things that I do have are worth more than I need. I have a chance. The kids in Len's film should have that same chance, but millions don't."

Basra Hassan, grade 7 added: "The film changed me because it made me think how lucky I am and how blessed I am. What surprised me the most was when Len talked to us about the making of the movie and how he was chased off and threatened while filming in some dangerous locations."

Anna Weng, grade 7 wrote about the screening: "I never knew that children could have so much hope and faith even when they're living in poverty. Len Morris told us that while filming those children for this movie his life was threatened. I thought to myself in that dark auditorium would I have done all that if I could?"

Mariejo Ajavon, grade 7, added: "Until I watched the film I never knew what Food Stamps were, and I had never heard of the proposed 'Robin Hood tax.'"

Annie Ruan, grade 7, reflected: "During the movie I was thinking how the only thing I think of most mornings before school is 'I wish I could sleep for 5 more minutes,' but meanwhile desperately poor children say in India don't have the luxury of school or safe sleep. Meanwhile I had been taking school for granted."

Eleanor Anderson, grade 7 wrote about her post screening thoughts: "The film changed me; it really opened my eyes to see that poverty is happening in more places than I or I think anyone else thought. This documentary film showed me what's really going on in the world and that not everyone has fresh water and that not everyone has a home and millions do not know when the next time they will eat or even drink fresh water."

Celine Nguyen, grade 7, wrote this post screening: "Until I watched The Same Heart, I didn't know how much poverty there is in the world. The best part of the night was when after the movie, Len Morris talked with us about ways we can help end poverty and child labor. When I got home, I talked to my mom about how we shouldn't take anything for granted. I realized I have way too much and now realize there are kids out there who do not have enough food or education."

ODW-USA is an after school activism club which was co-founded by students of the Broad Meadows Middle School in 1998 after they decided not to retire after raising funds and establishing "A School for Iqbal Masih" in Pakistan in the 1990s. Other ODW member groups have since sprung up at Quincy High, at Archbishop Williams High, at Silver Lake Regional Middle School and at a school in Vermont and even at a school in Arkansas.

ODW-USA is student led and any school can apply to join. Like Len, ODW is anti-poverty, pro universal education. Each school year ODW members form a partnership with an anti-poverty, pro-education charity of their choice. As a result, over the years since its inception, ODW-USA collectively has raised over a quarter million dollars and helped expand or initiate pro-education projects in Zimbabwe, Vietnam, Nepal, Ethiopia, Burundi, Bangladesh, Kenya and other countries, changing the lives of thousands of vulnerable, very poor children.

What's next for ODW-USA? ODW member schools had just voted on the day of the screening to partner in 2016 with the Needham based Alliance for Children Foundation-Haiti to expand and improve educational opportunities for dozens of orphans, especially rescued restaveks, in Haiti. Len witnessed the secret ballot voting and vote counting. The Alliance for Children-Haiti actually discovered ODW-USA because members were present at one of the two previous screenings of "The Same Heart," and when they saw ODW-USA in the film, they reached out to ODW-USA and asked how they could apply to be ODW's next Charity of the Year.

Abigail Drinkwater, grade 7 member of the Broad Meadows chapter of ODW-USA said after voting for ODW Charity of the Year, "The best part for me was when someone so extraordinary as Morris told the students of ODW that he looks up to us. As an ODW member, that really means a lot."

Alyssa Ruan, grade 7 screening attendee wrote this post screening: "The film did change me. I am now aware of all the horrible things going on in the world due to devastating poverty, and I hope to join ODW-USA" (to be part of the solution).

Morris left Quincy for now, but he promised to return for future collaborations with ODW. He told the ODW students and their families, "The world we live in now, does not have to be the world we live in in the future. If we all work together relentlessly and have unwavering faith, we can change the world for the better and end devastating global poverty."

Each year since the 1990s, Morris lives those words. So do the student members of ODW-USA. You could say Len Morris and ODW-USA members have "The Same Heart."

AN INTEGRATED CARE Learning Consortium held recently at Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton drew more than 40 local educators, human service providers, and mental health and substance abuse treatment professionals to discuss ways to better coordinate behavioral health services in the area. Shown are (left to right) Lynn Cronin, vice president of nursing Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton; Iyah Rohm, policy director for the Health Policy Commission; Peter Healy, president and CEO of BID-Milton; Lisa Braude, CHART 2 project manager; Rebecca Blair, vice president patient experience BID-Milton and Brady Fish, CHART 2 program manager for the Health Policy Commission.

A Year of Progress In Developing An Integrated Behavioral Health Program For Region

A pressing community health problem throughout the state is a lack of coordinated behavioral health services for patients with acute mental health or substance use disorders.

Often times these patients find themselves in hospital Emergency Departments (EDs), where they can potentially remain for several days while staff work to stabilize them and find an appropriate treatment facility or program. It's not necessarily appropriate or efficient healthcare, taking up needed treatment rooms while increasing wait times in already busy EDs. The situation can also exacerbate patients' symptoms and anxiety, and delays access to needed behavioral health care.

As 2015 comes to a close, significant progress has been made to address this important community health issue through the development of an integrated behavioral health network between Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton (BID-Milton), South Shore Mental Health (SSMH) and other community providers through a $2 milllion investment grant BID-Milton received last year from the State's Health Policy Commission.

The investment grant was given to the hospital in order to increase access to behavioral health services and improve the care received by patients in the ED, including reducing their length-of-stay, and their likelihood of returning to the ED within 30 days of treatment and to improve community management of behavioral health crises.

The investment grant from the Community Hospital Acceleration, Revitalization and Transformation (CHART) Investment Program, was one of 25 awarded to hospitals in the state a little over a year ago by the Health Policy Commission (HPC). The HPC's mission is to advance a more transparent, accountable, and innovative health care system through independent policy leadership and investment programs. Its goal is better health and better care at a lower cost across the Commonwealth.

Through the CHART investment grant, during the past year BID-Milton and SSMH have drafted the framework for a more coordinated behavioral health program in close partnership with the HPC. According to Ashley Yeats, MD, chief medical officer and vice president of healthcare quality at the hospital, changes already implemented in the ED include additional staff training on caring for behavioral health patients, enhanced treatment protocols and collaborative treatment planning with SSMH.

Last August, the hospital opened a behavioral health-sensitive treatment area within the ED. The newly renovated, four-bed area is physically separate from the main ED treatment area to provide a more therapeutic environment for behavioral health patients.

Astronaut Encourages Students 'Never Gift Up On Your Dream'

Astronaut Heidi Stefanyshyn-Piper recently visited students at the Merrymount Elementary School.

Stefanyshyn-Piper has flown in two Space Shuttle missions and has performed many Space Walks during her time as an astronaut. Her message to Merrymount students was to work hard and figure out what you love to do. Never give up on your dream. If you don't reach your goal the first time keep trying until you reach your goal.

Students spent an hour asking great questions which were answered by Mrs. Piper. It is possible that some future astronauts and engineers were inspired by her visit.

Discussions Increase For A Quincy Community Disaster Relief Coalition

By KEVIN HALL

When disaster strikes, or appears ready to hit in Massachusetts, Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) gets into its Framingham, MA Bunker to coordinate getting our infrastructure, such as roads, sea walls and power lines back into working order.

Sitting among the many groups in the Bunker, is a coalition of non-profits and churches called Massachusetts Voluntary Organizations Active in Disaster (MA VOAD) that specializes in individual assistance to people who need food, temporary shelter, pet care, and/or help with property or emotional damage so they can better get on with their lives.

Similar to the state level, Quincy has its own emergency management and they meet at its Emergency Operation Center with various city departments, such as elderly affairs, and utility companies to ensure that reports are gathered and situations get back into order. There is some non-profit individual assistance by organizations such as the Red Cross and Salvation Army but not with the same coordinated level like that done by MA VOAD at the state level. At a city or regional level, such an organization would be called a Community Organization Active in Disaster (COAD) and could also include local businesses as well as non-profits and churches.

"Since COADs are community members, they know the ins and outs of local government and can solicit community resources much faster than state-level organizations," said Larry Rosenberg, American Red Cross member and Co-Chair of MA VOAD. "This is especially true with storms and hurricanes that can cover much of the state at once."

There aren't many COADs in Massachusetts but they generally formed after disasters to assist needy citizens and to protect them in the future. These groups formed in Western, MA following the floods from Hurricane Irene and the recent Springfield to Sturbridge

Planning Board Approves Elm Street Townhouses

By SCOTT JACKSON

An aging, condemned three-family home on Elm Street in Quincy Point will be torn down and a developer will build five new townhouses in its place.

The Planning Board on Dec. 9 approved the proposal by Donald Gillespie of Scituate-based Welby Builders to raze the existing home at 113 Elm St. and replace it with the five new townhouses. The Zoning Board of Appeals had granted a variance for the project at its meeting on Sept. 15.

The current home on site was built in 1880, according to Christopher Harrington, the attorney representing Welby Builders. He noted the house was rundown with a roof that partially collapsed during last winter's heavy snowstorms; the city has placed a condemn notice on the house.

"It's a very low value property," Harrington stated.

The new townhouses will each be three stories tall and sold as condominiums. The first floor of each unit will contain a two-car garage. The top two floors will provide living space, including two bedrooms in each townhouse.

The site at 113 Elm St. sits behind a six-unit townhouse development, known as the Elm Street Townhomes, at 115 Elm St. Access to the three-family home at 113 Elm St. had been provided for with a 14-foot-wide easement from the owners of 115 Elm St.

Access to the five new townhouses will still be provided via a driveway on that easement. Gillespie also reached an agreement with Ed Flavin, who owns the apartment building next door, for a nine-foot easement that will allow for a 20-foot wide driveway. Welby Builders will also landscape a three-foot-wide strip of property between the driveway and the Flavin property; maintenance of that landscaped area and the driveway will be the responsibility of the owners of the five townhouses being built at 113 Elm St.

A cobblestone walkway will separate the driveway to 113 Elm St. and the parking lot for 115 Elm St. The installation of the cobblestone walkway was one of several items requested by the condo board of the Elm Street Townhomes and agreed to by Gillespie. Another condition requires that no more than two of the five new townhouses be rented out at any one time.

The developers will also repair portions of the sidewalk on Elm Street in the vicinity of the driveway during construction of the new townhouses.

Mark Bartlett, with the engineering firm Stantec, served as the city's peer reviewer for the project. He said the proposed stormwater management system would be able to control all runoff from the roofs and the five outdoor parking spaces on site. Bartlett said there was some concern about a rock ledge on site and the runoff it would generate, which would lead right into three of the units on one side of the property, but revised plans addressed that issue with a collection system.

Two residents – Flavin and Damon Avent, who represented the owners of the townhouses at 115 Elm St. – spoke during the public hearing portion of the meeting.

"I thought it was a terrific opportunity to clean up the area," Flavin said. "I thought it was a terrific opportunity – a once in a lifetime opportunity – to solve this situation of this old house, this dilapidated house, cleanup the area and make it nice, make it what it should be…I feel as though the whole area is going to be improved. That property is going to be developed; it's going to be improved. It's going to make my property better."

Avent confirmed the condo board at 115 Elm St. had reached an agreement with the developer of the proposed townhouses to address concerns the condo owners there had.

A second project, a proposal to build a four-story, 24-unit residential development at 32 Gilson Rd./18 Johnson Ave., had been scheduled for review at the Dec. 9 meeting. The applicant behind that project, however, sought a continuance before the meeting to postpone it to a later date. The Planning Board granted that continuance and rescheduled the hearing to Jan. 27.

Homebuyers Workshop Jan. 5, Jan. 7

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. will offer a two-part workshop for first-time homebuyers, to be held from 5 to 9 p.m. on Tuesday, Jan. 5 and Thursday, Jan. 7 at the Winter Gardens apartment complex (lower level community room), located at 45 Winter St. in Quincy.

The workshop will give participants an opportunity to meet and hear from real estate brokers, insurance agents, attorneys and loan originators. Attendees also will have an opportunity to learn about NeighborWorks' down payment assistance programs and speak to a lender about different mortgage options.

The registration fee for the workshops is $20 per person. To register and pay online, visit www.nwsoma.org or call (617) 770-2227 x34 for more information.

Conway Supports DOVE Mission

It was a banner year for DOVE, Inc.'s 2015 Harvesting Hope Gala and fundraiser, which was held recently at the Boston Marriot Quincy.

"We raised a record-breaking $245,000 to support DOVE programs and services and assist victims of domestic abuse," said Helen Shiner, co-chairperson of the Gala and Manager of Jack Conway Realtor's Quincy office. "I want to thank the hundreds of guests who attended and all of the sponsors who helped make the evening such a big success."

As in other years, members of Shiner's real estate team volunteered to assist with the live and silent auctions during the evening.

The keynote speaker was Malcolm Astley, father of slain 18-year-old Lauren Ashley of Wayland who was murdered by her estranged boyfriend in 2011.

"Malcolm's speech touched everyone to the core and made us realize how important this annual gala is to our organization," said Shiner. "The monies we raised will benefit the guests at the shelter, pay for legal advocacy, and fund our Youth Speak program, in which a young member of our staff visits local schools and talks to teenagers about the warning signs of unhealthy relationships. The students who attend these talks then become DOVE ambassadors and go out and spread the message to their peers."

Shiner, who serves as clerk of the DOVE Executive Board, has co-chaired the Harvesting Hope Gala for the last two years. The group recently honored her Conway-Quincy colleague Richard Cahill with its 2015 Pillar of Hope Award for helping to find a home and mortgage financing for the shelter in 1981.

AFJRROTC Annual Food Drive

FOR THE PAST 10 years, cadets of the MA-841st AFJROTC of North Quincy High School have held an annual food drive and distributed over 47,000 goods to various food pantries such as the Quincy Crisis Center, Germantown Food Bank, and The Quincy Veterans Services. This year we were able to collect 5449 items, totaling 16,570.49 points for our in-house competition. This fun- spirited competition in which flights competed with one another to donate the most goods showed the corps' enthusiasm and willingness to help the community. As the commander in charge this year, it was encouraging to see young adults take a vested interest in their community and in the lives of so many struggling to make ends meet now during the holiday season and throughout the rest of the year. Cadets in charge were Amber Man and Janelle Chin.

Integrated Behavioral Health Program For Region Progress

In October, BID-Milton and SSMH launched the Integrated Care Learning Consortium at the hospital. More than 40 professionals from the community, including representatives from social service agencies, local school districts, and healthcare providers, met to collaborate and share strategies on how to best serve patients suffering from mental health or substance use disorders. There will be a second consortium meeting in January.

"We are seeing greater numbers of patients with behavioral health issues coming to hospitals' emergency departments to seek care," explained Dr. Yeats. "The CHART 2 grant helps us provide more timely and better coordinated care in the ED. It allows us to further develop partnerships with community-based providers who have the ability to provide pre-crisis intervention for many of these patients, thereby averting use of hospital resources all together. Engaging our community partners and employing a proactive approach to meeting the needs of behavioral health patients not only improves quality of care but also lowers healthcare costs."

What's ahead? Early in 2016 BID-Milton and South Shore Mental Health officials will place SSMH clinicians and other supportive professionals onsite in the hospital's ED, as well as utilizing technology to coordinate care, expedite the clinical evaluation of behavioral health patients, begin therapeutic treatment sooner, and provide patients with a team to support them through the treatment process. In addition, the hospital and SSMH hope to enable those with behavioral health problems who do not require hospitalization to utilize existing community resources and providers to receive treatment, thereby eliminating use of the ED when appropriate.

"We look forward to our continued work with Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton and other community partners to focus on the treatment and recovery of patients with mental illness. This innovative program provides treatment options that are more patient focused and address the inherent inefficiencies of care for patients with mental illness in the emergency department setting," said Sherry Ellis, vice president of crisis and rehabilitative services for South Shore Mental Health.

"Our partnership with community hospitals and their partners is a critical part of HPC's efforts to achieve the Commonwealth's cost containment and quality improvement goals," said David Seltz, Executive Director of the HPC. "This historic investment and these transformative initiatives in Milton and its surrounding communities shine a light on our behavioral health system, breaking down the stigma associated with behavioral health and ensuring that the thousands of families struggling with mental health and substance abuse have the same access to high quality care as those with physical health conditions. We look forward to continuing to partner with BID-Milton, South Shore Mental Health, and the communities they serve to build a more coordinated and affordable health care system."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, December 7, 2015, at approximately 6:00 p.m., Quincy Police Officers were dispatched to the Dunkin Donuts parking lot on Sea Street on a report of a man asleep behind the wheel of his vehicle. Officers Eugene Smith, Tim Kaes and Steve O'Hare arrived on scene and located the driver/suspect, who was incoherent. The Officers approached the suspect and had him step out.

Off duty Quincy Police Officer Stephen Cleary approached the Officers and told them that he was the reporting person. He said that he had observed the suspect behind the wheel, nodding off to sleep in the middle of the lot with the vehicle's engine running. Officer Cleary said that the suspect awoke to the array of blue lights entering the area and then backed his vehicle into two parking spots in the lot as if to hide. Officer Kaes performed a license check on the suspect and learned that he was unlicensed to operate a motor vehicle. Brewster EMS arrived on scene, examined the suspect and cleared him medically.

Based on Officer Cleary's observations of the suspect driving without a license, Officer Smith placed the suspect under arrest for "Unlicensed Operation of a Motor Vehicle. While waiting for the tow truck, the Officers conducted an inventory of the vehicle. Officer Kaes discovered a syringe, a spoon with residue and cotton stuck to it, and a plastic bag with white residue inside. These items, believed to be related to heroin, were found in the driver's side door pocket. The spoon and plastic were taken as evidence to be tested and the syringe was disposed of for safety reasons.

Prior to placing the suspect in his police cruiser, Officer Smith performed a pat frisk for weapons and found two white pills labeled "54 142" in his pocket. These pills were later identified as Methadone which the suspect did not have a prescription for. The suspect, a 30 year old Dorchester resident, was transported to the Quincy Police Station for booking. Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE . . . On Sunday, December 6, 2015, at approximately 12:25 a.m., Officers Michael Reilly and Christopher McDermott were dispatched to the area of 85 Quincy Avenue for a report of a male sleeping behind the wheel of a vehicle.

Upon arrival, the Officers found the sleeping male suspect in the driver's seat of his pick up truck with the engine running. The Officers noted that the vehicle was in drive and the doors were locked. The Officers attempted to wake the suspect by yelling and knocking on the windows of the truck to no avail. The driver, now slumping over the wheel, was drooling and sweating. The driver's eyes opened briefly but continued to face the floor as he placed his hands on the wheel.

At this time, the suspect removed his foot from the brake and his vehicle began to move forward. While operating his vehicle with his face toward the ground, the suspect drove through the intersection of Quincy Avenue and Water Street. The suspect, traveling at a very slow speed, now looked up as if realizing that his vehicle was moving. It was also clear that he had no idea that two Police Officers were outside his vehicle's windows and was unaware that the blue lights of two police cruisers were directly behind him in flash mode.

Fearing for the safety of the public, the Officers ran back to their cruisers and pulled up behind the vehicle with sirens, air horns and blue lights activated to get the suspect's attention and alert other drivers in the area. The suspect stopped his vehicle about 50 feet from where he was originally found.

The Officers confronted the suspect, who said he just came from a local bar and was headed home to Dorchester. (Wrong direction). The suspect was asked to step from his vehicle to perform field sobriety tests. He appeared unsteady on his feet and had a strong smell of alcoholic beverage. He said that he had a "couple of drinks." The suspect failed two tests and the Officers decided that the he was too intoxicated to continue with additional tests.

The suspect, a 33 year old Dorchester resident, was placed under arrest and charged with, "Operating Under the Influence of Alcohol and Operating a Motor Vehicle Without a Valid Driver's License." Nice Work!

Quincy Eyes League Title; Fresh Beginning For NQ

H.S. Girls Basketball Previews

By BILL GRIFFIN

There are different story lines for girls basketball at Quincy and North Quincy this winter.

At Quincy the question is: How good can the Presidents be this season? The answer is, likely, very good. Quincy brings back its top seven players from last year's 14-5 team which took second in the Keenan Division of the Patriot League behind eventual state champion Duxbury and lost a thriller to Durfee in the first round of the tournament.

"Right now we want to get better every practice, every game. We want to focus on the level of our play," said coach Jeff Bretsch. "We feel we have a team that can contend for the league title. That's something the girls want. This is mostly a senior team, and they want that as part of their legacy."

At North it is a fresh beginning, a bright, brand new day under coach Brian Buckley who built a legacy of success at Scituate which included eight tourney trips in nine years and a run to the EMass finals in the Garden. The Red Raiders will be fun to watch. They have speed, quickness, they will move the ball up the floor, and they will run.

"I'm very enthused after the first two weeks of practice," said Buckley. "A lot of what we're doing is new, but the players have bought in completely. Their effort has been excellent and I've seen a lot of improvement in just two weeks."

Quincy is led by 6'5" Nicole Jorgensen who will play at URI next year and has a chance to do things in her senior year that no player at Quincy has ever done. She already holds the game, season, and career records for blocks and rebounds. She has a chance to score 1000 points. She has started for four years in the middle and has learned to flourish in a world of double and triple teams.

More than numbers, what is most impressive is she has improved by streets each year. She works at her game in the summer and she gets better. She can go for blocks and not foul. Her finish around the basket is softer and surer. She is a better passer, a passer who can beat a double-team by finding the open cutter or the free jump shooter.

"I think this will be Nicole's year," said Bretsch. "I've been amazed by her improvement in the off season. This is the year she will reach her full potential which is something I want for her because she has worked so hard."

Like Jorgensen, Gabby Jerahian is another four-year starter. She is a spot-on three-point shooter and an athlete who can take the ball to the basket. She had five threes in a game twice last year, including the tourney against Durfee. She can also shut down a hot shooter with her quickness and toughness on defense.

Senior forward Sarah Gibbons is one of the keys to Quincy's season. She stepped up and had a great run in volleyball. She worked and grew stronger in the off-season. At 6'0", she can be a legitimate second big for the Presidents, a second rebounder, a second shot-blocker, a second inside scorer. The double-teams will surely come against Jorgensen. Jorgensen will spot the open player. If Gibbons can free herself and convert Jorgensen's passes into points, Quincy will be tough.

Senior Alyssa Camara is a smart, versatile guard. She moves the ball to the right people at the right time in the right spot. She plays good defense and hits the open jump shot.

Sophomore Liana Cunningham is a prize at point guard. Her defense against Duxbury star Maddie Foote last year was the big reason Quincy gave the undefeated Dragons their best test of the year. She is fast, smart, unselfish to a fault and she has that unteachable sense of how to pass, how to play the game.

"Gabby's drive to the basket has really improved. She has a variety of moves and has improved her ball and head fakes," said Bretsch. "Sarah seems to be a stronger and more confident player. Alyssa cares so much about the team and the game. She is a vocal leader. Liana has the potential to be a special player."

Seniors Julianne Kane and Ariana Paulo bring experience off the bench. Kane is a solid post player. Paulo can shoot and play strong defense. Taisha Alexandre, Donata Coletti, Jessica Ball, Amanda Moosick, Joelle Robinson, and Maeve Hernon also supply depth for the Presidents.

Quincy has seven seniors ready for what should be a fine run this winter. Duxbury graduated four of five starters, but it will not be an easy road in the Keenan Division. The Dragons are always good. Hingham had an impressive opening win over Rockland behind Sydney and Haley Blasetti. Plymouth North won its opener by 20. In the Fisher Division, Hanover is a legitimate threat to win a state championship.

"Our strength is our experience. The girls are polished. They understand right away what we want to do," said Bretsch. "I'd like to see our rebounding improve. We have the height. If we can get the defensive rebound out cleanly, we can run which is something we have the speed to do."

Quincy is at Duxbury Friday

North will be led by tri-captains Remy Aucoin, Marissa McGue, and Ali Cole-

Holes To Fill In Red Raiders, Presidents Line-Ups

H.S. Boys Basketball Previews

By BILL GRIFFIN

In recent years, basketball fans have been spoiled by the high quality of hoop played in the city.

North Quincy has made the tournament five straight years. North has won two Fisher Division titles in the last four seasons. In 2012, the Red Raiders earned the No. 1 seed in the south sectionals. In 2013 and 2014, they made historic runs to the sectional finals and played powerhouses Mansfield and Catholic Memorial tough and tight down to the finals seconds of each game.

Quincy has made the tournament six straight years. The Presidents have advanced to the second round in the last three years. Last season was Quincy's year. Despite playing an insane final week of five games in five nights, the Presidents won the Keenan Division of the Patriot League. They also captured the Moscardelli Tournament and the city championship with two wins over North. It added up to a neat Triple Crown.

This year, there are good players and promise at each school, but it will be difficult to match the success of the recent past. Quincy lost five starters from last year's 19-5 team which dropped an overtime thriller to Taunton in the tourney.

North returns three of its top six from last year's 11-9 club which fell to New Bedford in the first round of the tournament, but the three players who the Red Raiders lost were of the high quality: Matt Gerakis, Jackie Chen, and Solomon Umoren. There are many points, assists, rebounds and much hustle and defense to replace.

"We have some talented players to work with," said Quincy coach Dave Parry. "It's a case of getting on the same page and blending that talent into a good team."

"I've liked the effort I've seen in practice, but we have a lot to replace," said North coach Kevin Barrett. "Matt was our best all-around player. Jackie not only gave us shooting, he gave us defense. Solomon was an athletic rebounder who could shoot the three. The kids have a big challenge in front of them."

Senior Dhaaky Drake returns to run the point for the second straight year for North. He is quick and pushes the ball well. He should benefit from a year's experience. Senior Conor Pound is back at center and gives North a steady presence close to the basket.

Mike Soricelli provided energy and defense off the bench last year. He brings an element of toughness to his play which lifts the Red Raiders. He will be looking to expand his offensive game this season.

"We go pretty much as Dhaaky goes. We need him to play well, so we can consistently execute our offense," said Barrett. "Conor rebounds well, blocks shots and gets us second chances off the offensive boards. Mike gave us a lift last year. His toughness elevates the whole team."

Junior Aidan Golden is up from the JVs and will start at the off guard. Senior Will Ortiz gained varsity experience off the bench last year and will start up front for the Red Raiders.

"Aidan can shoot and slash to the hoop. Will is a good power player who can shoot and rebound," said Barrett.

Junior Ryan Manning gives North depth up front. The Red Raiders will also get help from Tom McLaughlin, Matt Eagles, Johnny He, Evelin St. Marie, Jack Mead and Andrew Huang.

"What I've liked best is the leadership the experienced players have shown in practice," said Barrett. "We need them to set the tone for the younger players."

The league is loaded. On the Keenan side, Whitman-Hanson is a team who should go deep in the tourney. Plymouth North and Duxbury are strong. Plymouth South is the favorite in what should be a strong Fisher Division.

"I don't think in my years at North I've seen the league stronger from top to bottom. We are going to have to show up ready to play every night," said Barrett.

North is at Hanover Friday night.

Senior co-captains Quinlan Evans and Scott Mele will lead Quincy. Evans is a sharp-shooter who hit on 75 percent of his shots from three-point land last year. Mele is an excellent defender who stopped quality opponents and played meaningful minutes in important games last year.

"Scott has improved his shot as well and he can drive to the basket. Quinlan will be our best shooter," said Parry.

Parry has size. The issue is experience. Mark Munroe (6'5"), Dyreke Johnson (6'3"), and Darius Setalsingh (6'2") have the ability to become a solid front line as the season develops.

"I like our athleticism and our size," said Parry. "The effort in practice has been good. What we need to do is improve each practice and gain experience in our early games."

Juniors Kyle Murphy and Ugo Kamalu and sophomore Jean Louis give Quincy depth off the bench. There are good athletes here who will make strides when they grow accustomed to playing games at varsity speed.

"We played in the Randolph Jamboree and we scrimmaged Marshfield who is very good," said Parry. "It gave our kids a taste of the physicality and speed of varsity games. I could see them adjust and improve in the scrimmages."

North hosts Duxbury Friday night.

The city rivals will meet twice this season in the nightcaps of double-headers. The girls teams from North and Quincy will play in the openers. The first game is at Quincy Jan. 2 at 5:30. The second meeting is at North Feb. 12 at 7 p.m.

North Quincy Wins Opener; Quincy Bows To OA

H.S. Ice Hockey Previews

By BILL GRIFFIN

For North Quincy, the opener could not have been better. For Quincy, the opener showed encouraging signs for a young team which will develop into a good hockey club as the season progresses.

Senior goalie Kevin Doherty made 28 saves, four different players scored, and North dominated the final two periods en route to an impressive 4-1 Patriot League win over Scituate at the Quincy Youth Arena Saturday night.

"I don't know if it was nerves or new players, but we didn't play well in the first period," said coach Matt Gibbons. "The second and third periods were more like the team we thought we had. We played good hockey."

Oliver Ames jumped out to a four-goal lead and withstood a strong Quincy rally in the third period to drop the Presidents, 5-2 in a non-league meeting. James O'Leary and Mike Calnan scored for the Presidents.

"We're very young. We have six freshmen playing and only seven kids back with any significant varsity experience," said coach Ted Walsh. "We made some mistakes early, but I was happy with the way we came back in the third period. We have kids who are learning to compete at varsity speed."

Doherty was at his best in the first period when Scituate scored its goal and poured 12 shots on net. He handled breakaways, hard slappers through screens and re-directions. He was calm and poised in his net, and that confidence filtered through to his teammates. He did what all good goalies do which is keep his team close as it works its way through a rough patch of hockey.

"He stole games for us last year, and he saved us in the first period. It would have been 2-0 or 3-0 if he didn't play so well," said Gibbons.

Doherty richly earned the No. 1 star of the night, but the most important story of the game was the offense. If North scores this year, the Red Raiders will be good. Doherty is solid. North always plays smart, tough, disciplined defense. The defense on the blue line is a talented, veteran unit. The forwards backcheck as hard as they forecheck. The question is: Can North score?

Against Scituate, the Red Raiders put 22 shots on goal in the final two periods and cashed in four chances. They pressed and they scored. Junior defenseman Kevin McDonald (one goal, two assists) started it with the equalizer less than three minutes into the second period. He stole a breakout pass at the blue line and fired home a low wrister.

Junior Austin Lee, who played a terrific game on the second line, put North ahead to stay at 2-1 with 34 seconds left in the second. Kevin Mock fed Ryan Moreschi at the point. Moreschi drilled a low slapper, and Lee was in perfect position to knock home the rebound.

That was enough for Doherty and the defense, but the offense stayed on full throttle. Gibbons moved freshman Kieran O'Driscoll to the first line after the first period and his speed energized his senior linemates: Mock and Timmy Glynn.

Mock finished a breakaway with a beautiful deke and backhand tuck for a 3-1 lead. Glynn picked the top corner off a great feed from McDonald for the 4-1 final. The goals were important, but what was equally important was who scored them. North needs offense from Glynn and Mock this season, and they delivered against a quality team.

"We need scoring from Timmy and Kevin on that first line, and tonight they came through. Kevin McDonald made two nice passes for goals," said Gibbons.

Four goals will be enough to win most games for this defense. North returns four starters. Moreschi had a big game against Scituate with his long reach and stick-checking. Matt McDonald is one of the best defensemen in the league. Kevin McDonald and Cam White are solid, and Joey England gave North quality shifts as a fifth defenseman against Scituate.

Derek Bille is an excellent backup goalie.

Along with the goal scorers, Garrett Kulig, Corey Hernandez, Ethan Herman, John Early, John Norton, Austin Currie and O'Driscoll will skate regular shifts at forward for the Red Raiders.

Connor Donaghey, Chris Donaghey, Austin Devane, Sean Flynn, and Evan O'Connor will supply depth for North.

"I think we should be pretty good. The question is whether we can score enough goals. If we can, our defense and goal-tending are strong," said Gibbons.

Quincy hosts Nantucket Dec. 23 at 3 p.m.

After Oliver Ames jumped out to a 5-1 lead after two periods, Walsh asked his team to forget about the score and just try to win the third period. Quincy responded and controlled the action in the final stanza with a 10-6 edge in shots on goal.

The Presidents scored 14 seconds into the third. Forwards Pat Quirk and Dan O'Leary and defensemen Owen Lynch and Griffin Lynch did an excellent job forechecking and keeping the puck in the OA end. James O'Leary drove home the goal from close range to narrow the lead to 5-2.

Calnan scored in the second period. He moved in cleanly from the blue line and clicked on a backhander for the goal.

"We were much better in the third period," said Walsh. "I think we took some checks, played two periods and realized this is just hockey. We're still working on fundamentals, but we have some good, young talent. We'll be much better as the season goes on."

The strength of the team will be on the back line. Senior goaltender Chris Connolly saw varsity time backing up Ryan Higgins last year when Quincy made its second straight trip to the tournament under Walsh.

Senior Brandon Nunnink and junior Josh Campbell form one defensive pair. The Brothers Lynch, senior Owen and freshman Griffin, will also work together on defense.

"Brandon and Owen are excellent defensemen who played regularly for us last year," said Walsh. "As a group, they make the breakout pass well and they are good with the puck."

Quirk centers James and Dan O'Leary on the first line. Quirk is an excellent skater and passer. James O'Leary is a strong skater who works well in the corners and in front of the net. Dan O'Leary is a freshman with talent and promise.

"We'll have to look to that first group for scoring especially early in the season," said Walsh.

Senior Paul Blake and juniors Sam McGahey and Mike Tervakowsky form the second line. Tervakowsky is a good skater who is making the transition from defense to forward.

Seamus McBride, Jason Whalen and Scott Parrish will skate on the third line. Matt O'Brien, Nick Murray and Steve Montgomery form a fourth line which will see plenty of ice time for the Presidents.

"We have a high ceiling. The young kids have talent," said Walsh. "Right now, we want to concentrate on the quality of hockey we're playing and forget about the scoreboard. As we improve our play, the wins will come."

Quincy will host Whitman-Hanson Saturday night at 6:40 p.m.

Quincy and North will face each other twice this season. They will meet in the first round of the sixth annual Quincy Holiday Tournament Sunday, Dec. 27 at 7:15. This is a scheduling change. The opening round was originally scheduled for Dec. 26. The consolation and championship game will be played Monday night, December 28. King Philip and Milton also meet in the opening round.

North and Quincy will also played each other Feb. 6 at 6:40 p.m.

man. Aucoin was the team's leading scorer and rebounder last year as a sophomore. She has excellent inside moves, knows how to receive a pass and find the open creases to get off her shot. For those of us old enough to remember Kevin McHale, she has that same knack for always keeping the ball high when she grabs a rebound or catches a pass. She does not bring it down into the land of reach-ins and steals. Her finish around the bucket is excellent.

McGue is an exceptional athlete who, barring the unforseen, will have started in three sports for four years when she graduates in June. She is quick, strong and she can jump. Her instincts and anticipation on defense are off the charts. Finally, as good an athlete as she is, she is a better leader.

Coleman is working her way back from an ACL injury. She played well in the second half of the soccer season. She is a good shooter who rebounds well and can get to the line.

"Another thing about Remy is her speed. She has the ability to get up and down the court. We want to run, and when you have a center who can get out on the break, it really helps," said Buckley. "I've been very impressed with Marissa. She is a super athlete, and she has been a pleasure to watch. Ali will help us. She'll come off the bench to start the season because she is coming back from injury, but she is a good player."

Junior Kerin Coleman gained experience at the point last year. She shoots well, plays under control and understands her job is to spread around the ball to open shooters. Junior Karyn McEvoy will play the off-guard. She has good range with her jumper and can open up the court with her shot for drives to the hoop.

Sophomore Jesse Caldwell was a strong inside player as a freshman. She rebounds and can not only score from in close, but has good range with her shot out to the foul line. Sophomore Jill Hallisey has the speed Buckley loves and will see plenty of time in the backcourt.

Forward Jen Butka, who was probably the best freshman in the league last year, will miss the season with an ACL injury.

"Right now our strengths are our passing and our uptempo game. The girls have a good skill set for the running game," said Buckley. "The area we will look to improve is our shooting. We don't have a lot of size, so I'm not sure we'll get a lot of second chances. We need to make a good percentage of our shots."

North hosts Hanover Friday.

The two rivals will meet each other twice this season. Both games will be the openers of double-headers. The boys teams will play in the nightcaps. The first is at Quincy Jan. 2 at 4 p.m. and the second is at North Feb. 12 at 5:30 p.m.

Unraveling The Mystery Of William Appleton's Grave

it public that the headstone for William Appleton who died at Gettsyburg is not for the individual who is actually buried there," Cassani said.

In fact, no one knows where that William Appleton is buried. According to the Gettsyburg National Cemetery, the remains of Cpl. Appleton is not known. He may be one of the many unknowns in the National Cemetery in Pennsylvania, or in the fields and farms around the Gettysburg battlefield.

"Some soldiers who died at Gettysburg were returned home for burial so it's not out of the realm of possibility that (Cpl. Appleton) would have been brought back home to be buried, but he's absolutely not from Quincy. He never lived at the home and is not buried there," Cassani said.

According to the research, Cpl. Appleton lived in Boston and was the son of Thomas and Adeline Appleton. A carpenter by trade, he enlisted in the Union Army at the age of 21. He mustered on May 24, 1861 and died of wounds July 4, 1863 – one day after he was wounded in action.

Cassani is convinced the William Appleton who is buried at Sailors Home Cemetery is not the Union soldier who lost his life like thousands of others in the Union and Confederate armies at Gettysburg.

So how did the marker with Appleton's name and his war service end up at the Sailors Cemetery? One theory is a wooden cross marked the grave years ago. And because the cemetery has other Union soldiers buried there, it was determined that this Appleton must have been the soldier who died at Gettysburg.

Not the case, Cassani says. "Without question, this Mr. Appleton is not the soldier who died at Gettysburg."

Call it a coincidence but the William Appleton who is buried there also died of bloodshed.

According to the recent research, the William Appleton who is buried at Sailors Cemetery was a Quincy resident. He was a crippled sailor who was born in Jamaica. He had lived for a number of years at the Sailors Home – a nursing home for former mariners, sailors and other veterans.

This William Appleton, was the victim of a cold blooded murder.

On that fateful day of Sept. 20, 1877, Mr. Appleton was in Wollaston near the train depot at Beale and Hancock Streets.

"He was a mild-mannered guy by all accounts and he was murdered by a guy named Michael Murphy," Cassani said, reading from an old newspaper clipping that chronicled the crime that sent the city into a frenzy.

"Murphy was on his way to Hingham to shoot somebody else. He's in Quincy waiting to jump on the train to go to Hingham and he stops and asks Mr. Appleton if he can have five cents to buy a bottle of booze. Appleton says no and Murphy shoots him three times, once in the head, and kills him."

He was 53 years old.

"It's a murder in the middle of Wollaston," Cassani said.

A newspaper account of the incident notes that Mr. Murphy bought a gun for five bucks in Boston a few days before the shooting. He had been apparently drinking already and ran into Mr. Appleton and killed him because he wouldn't give him money for alcohol.

"Mr. Appleton was just going about his daily business. He was in the wrong place at the wrong time," Cassani said.

The incident reportedly sent Quincy – which was still at town at that point in history – into a frenzy. There was much media coverage in the daily newspapers about the murder and the trial.

The justice system was a lot quicker back then. Mr. Murphy's trial began a week after the murder.

"Mr. Appleton's murder is a real tragedy and the city deserves to know how he died," Cassani said. "We need to correct the mistake (on his gravestone) and we're going to do it."

Cassani said the city hopes to place a proper memorial for Mr. Appleton at the cemetery sometime in the spring.

City records confirm that William Appleton - the murder victim - is buried at the Sailors Home cemetery. According to a Death Registry Journal in the City Clerk's Office, William Appleton died Sept. 20, 1877. The cause of death reads "shot by Murphy." The registry also states Appleton was buried in the "National Sailors Home Grounds."

The white marble monument for Cpl. Appleton may be repurposed and also displayed somewhere in the city.

Cassani praised Gearin for his research on the Appleton marker and for helping to solve a mystery – and historical inaccuracy – since perhaps the 1920s or 1930s when the grave was first marked with the monument.

"Denis has done a tremendous amount of work piggybacking on the research that Chuck Phelan, Libbie Payne and David Lambert did. Denis connected the dots, he did quite a bit of research and spent some time at the Massachusetts State Archives.

"We're going to have a nice accessible Google map so when folks go to the Sailors Cemetery they'll be able to look up a name on a grave stone and learn who he was and something about their life."

And that will include the correct description of Mr. William Appleton.

'Santa's Help Swim' Sunday

The Quincy Recreation Department will supervise a special program of recreational swimming Sunday, Dec. 20 to assist Quincy parents with the seasonal holiday rush.

"Santa's Helper Swim" will allow parents to drop off youngsters, age six and above for a period of recreational swimming from 1 to 3 p.m.

Youngsters will be supervised by members of the Quincy Recreation Department Aquatic staff who are certified in accordance to the standards of the American Red Cross. The swim is conducted at the Lincoln Hancock Community School Pool.

Children may stay for all or part of the program.

There is no cost for the program if the child is already has a current pool participation card. For Quincy residents who do not have a card a guest fee of $2 will be charged.

Parents who may wish to swim at the same time may do so and can bring children under the age of 6 as long as they enter the pool. The adult guest fee is $5.

There will also be an opportunity to purchase a pool membership in the form of a gift certificate at the pool on Sunday or any time before Dec. 23 during regular programming of the Recreation. Department.

"Santa's Helper Swim" has become a "traditional offering on the weekend before Christmas and has proved a popular and enjoyable way for our families to take some stress out of the busy season and enjoy a positive recreational experience," said Recreation Director Barry Welch.

For additional information call 617 376 1394.

LEGO Workshops During School Vacation

The Quincy Recreation Department will offer LEGO Workshops during Christmas School Vacation for boys and girls in kindergarten through grade three.

Children will create and build with the popular LEGO toys in both individual and group projects.

The workshops, which will be scheduled during vacation week, will be conducted in the Community Room of the Richard J. Koch Park and Recreation Complex located at One Merrymount Parkway. The cost of the program is $20 for a three-hour session and will include the LEGOS, supervised instruction and a snack.

The sessions are: 9 a.m. to 12 noon on Saturday, Dec. 19; Monday, Dec. 28; Tuesday, Dec. 29; Wednesday, Dec. 30 and Saturday, Jan. 2.

Enrollment will be limited and a minimum number will be needed for each session for proper group activities.

Supervision will be provided by members of the Quincy Recreation Department staff and participants will also be guided in related LEGO activities such as design challenges and games.

Cross Cultural Networks Begins Homestay Search

Cross Cultural Networks, an international education organization, has begun its search for home stays for the upcoming semesters. Representing six private schools in New England, including Fontbonne Academy in Milton and the Woodward School in Quincy, CCN provides a strong support network between its partner schools, homestays, and international students.

"Our homestays treat our students as their own children, and many of the friendships that are created last far beyond the school year," said Daniel Spillane, CCN's Marketing Manager. Spillane used to live with a house full of international students during CCN's earlier stages.

CCN's international students must qualify under high academic and character standards. Based in Canton, CCN also has a network of schools throughout Michigan and New York.

"Families also receive a monthly stipend for the care and support of our students." said Spillane. "It's a really unique experience, especially if you have children, for them to befriend kids from different cultures." To be a homestay for an international student, contact CCN's Boston Office at 178-821-0831.

Discussions Increase For Local Disaster Relief Coalition

tornadoes. Cape Cod has a regional COAD and Scituate, a coastal area subject to flooding and tides like Quincy, created their COAD, Scituate Alliance of Natural Disaster Services (SANDS) following "catastrophic losses in hurricanes, coastal flooding, blizzards, harsh nor'easters, shipwrecks and other natural disasters" per the Scituate town website.

Voluntary Organizations Active in Disaster exist in every state and were formed in 1969 after several churches and non-profits rushed to Louisiana following Hurricane Camille in an uncoordinated manner that inadvertently interfered with emergency management. Some of the many MA VOAD member organizations include American Red Cross, Boston Cares, United Way, Team Rubicon and Americares and churches such as Salvation Army, United Methodists, Scientologists, Southern Baptists, Catholic Charities, Adventists Community Services and many more that can all be seen on the MassVoad.org website.

MA VOAD feels that although their coalition has gotten more and more organized and streamlined to handle emergencies more quickly, local COADs are the best approach and can handle more issues than state level organizations. For example, the MA VOAD clean-up of flooded basements following the flooding from two record-setting storms in March of 2010 took about a year to resolve while help following Hurricane Sandy and last year's Revere tornado was much quicker. Yet, some widespread situations such as last year's snow storms were too broad-based for MA VOAD to handle, except for in small pockets, with sheltering, etc.

"If I didn't have shoveling and other help from my wonderful neighbors, Mark and his wife, I would have been stuck and really nervous about possible electrical and heat outages," said Margaret Segerstedt, age 85, of North Quincy.

Another North Quincy resident, Laura Mullane said, "Our 84 year-old neighbor, George, would have been unable to get his medication or food if a few of us neighbors didn't shovel him out and assist him in other ways over the winter."

"All disasters are local and COADs are a proven approach for the enhanced level of community preparedness and coordination that is needed to effectively help neighbors and others in a city or small region," said Paul Leslie, MA VOAD Co-Chair and Salvation Army member.

On the flip side, if not coordinated well and without a system in place to ensure that people who are not in need do not take advantage of the goodwill of neighbors, a COAD could get in the way of emergency management.

"I certainly wouldn't want dozens of citizens showing up at the Emergency Operations Center in an uncoordinated manner with shovels when the next storm hits and I would also want to ensure that help only went where needed," said Fire Captain Rich Bryan, Quincy's Emergency Manager. "The idea of a COAD is an interesting concept though that I plan to bring up with Fire Chief Barron."

With COADs, like with VOADs, they are generally not set up by emergency management as their job is to handle infrastructure. They are generally created by local businesses, organizations, churches and community leaders who see a need and get together to protect their neighbors. At times, they join together for other projects needed in a city once they are better organized as a coalition. VOADs also push out the concept of creating COADs so if any Quincy organization, church, etc. has an interest or wants more data on creating a COAD, they can email massvoad@gmail.com for assistance.

Kevin Hall is the Public Affairs Director for MA VOAD and its Church of Scientology representative.

'Service Of The Longest Night' At United Methodist Dec. 22

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will host a "Service of the Longest Night" Tuesday, Dec. 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the church chapel.

The service is for those who are struggling or dealing with a present or past loss of any kind.

"The service is so named because it is held on the Winter Solstice: the longest night of the year," said Rev. Dr. Susan Jarek-Glidden, pastor of Quincy Community United Methodist Church.

"It is very simple, and consists of music, Scripture lessons, prayer, and quiet reflection. The purpose is to try and provide a safe place for people who are dealing with grief and loss – whether that grief or loss is recent or decades old."

The public is welcome to attend.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

Union Congregational Church

Pastor Jack Swanson's Sunday sermon at Union Congregational Church, Wollaston will tell the story of Hanna, Elizabeth and Mary, three remarkable women central to Christianity.

Hanna was the mother of Samuel, the first prophet in the Bible, Elizabeth was the mother of John the Baptist, the last, and Mary was the mother of Jesus. All three women gave birth in miraculous circumstances, all three were models of deep believing faith and all three are important to an understanding of the Bible and christianity.

Pastor Jack Swanson holds a Master of Divinty degree from Andover Newton Theological School and studied at Virginia Theological Seminary in Virginia. He is a Navy veteran, a substance abuse councelor and an adjunct professor at Massasoit Community College. He is a member of the South Shore Evangelical Clergy Association and is the Commodore of the Squantum Yacht Club.

Union Congregational Church is located on the corner of Beach St. and Rawson Rd. in Wollaston. Sunday service is at 10 a.m. For more information call the Church at 617-479-6661 or visit the web site at www.unioncongregational.org. The church is handicap accessible.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Handle a potentially awkward situation by warming up your confidence reserves and letting it radiate freely. Also, expect an old friend to contact you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's not too early for the practical Bovine to begin planning possible changes for 2011. A recent contact can offer some interesting insights.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A request for an unusual favor should be carefully checked out. Also check the motives behind it. Your generosity should be respected, not exploited.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Party time beckons, but for some Moon Children, so do some workplace challenges. Deal with the second first, then you'll be free to enjoy the fun time.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A warm response to an earlier request might be a positive indicator of what's ahead. Meanwhile, Cupid could pay a surprise visit to single Leos looking for love.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) How you respond to a proposed change in a project could affect your situation. Be prepared to show how well you would be able to deal with it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) The revelation of a secret could cause some changes in how to deal with a workplace matter. It very likely also validates a position you have long held.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An attempt to get too personal could upset the very private Scorpio. Make it clear that there's a line no one crosses without your permission.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The savvy Sagittarian might be able to keep a family disagreement from spilling over by getting everyone involved to talk things out.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Be careful not to push people too hard to meet your ideas of what the holiday weekend's preparations should be. Best to make it a cooperative, not a coerced, effort.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An unexpected request could make you rethink a position you've had for a long time. Meanwhile, plan a family get-together for the weekend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Someone might find that it was a fluke to try to use your sympathetic nature to get you to accept a situation you're not comfortable with. Good for you.

BORN THIS WEEK: You like challenges that are both mental and physical, and you enjoy always beating your personal best.

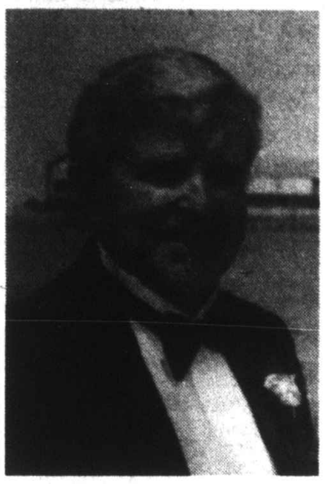
James T. Clifford, 98



JAMES T. CLIFFORD

A celebration of life service for James T. "Jim" Clifford, 98, of Scituate was held Tuesday in St. Frances Xavier Cabrini Church, Scituate.

Mr. Clifford died peacefully Dec. 9 at the home of his son and daughter-in-law James "Jim" and Holly Clifford.

Born in Boston, he was the son of the late James F. Clifford and Anna Murphy Clifford. He was predeceased by his beloved wife of 43 years, Louise B (Malloy) Clifford, and their daughters Constance Marie Clifford and Debora Ann Clifford, as well as three sisters: Helen Cignarella, Anna Lundgren Taylor and Dorothy Cummings.

He was the much-loved father of Catherine Clifford and Clyde Grant of Natick, Mary Laflamme of CT, James and Holly Clifford of Scituate, Patricia Clifford and Pam Mullins of Jamaica Plain, Paul and Lisa Clifford of Hingham and Christine Clifford of Marshfield.

He was the cherished grandfather of Michael Laflamme of TX; Matthew Laflamme of CT; Jessica Walker of Hingham; Nicholas Walker of Marshfield; Cody Clifford of Hingham; and Rebecca and Laura Clifford of Scituate. He is also survived by five great-grandchildren and many nieces and nephews and great nieces and nephews.

Mr. Clifford served proudly in the U.S. Army in the South Pacific during WWII.

With his late wife Louise, he established Clifford's Flowers in 1945. Together they grew the business over the course of four decades until her death in 1987. He was active in FTD, holding a number of regional offices. A talented artist, during the 1960s and 70s he won numerous regional and national floral design awards. He continued to work in the business with his son Jim until retiring his late 80s. In retirement, he enjoyed his garden, Civil War history, following golf and New England sports teams especially the Red Sox, and spending time with his family.

Mr. Clifford was a founding member of the Friends of St. Frances Xavier Cabrini, Scituate. His humor, talent, love and devotion to his family will be sorely missed.

affordable – targeted at residents who make less than 80 percent of the median income for the area. Developers can also opt to make a payment into the affordable housing trust fund in lieu of building on site units.

The council held at public hearing on the proposed change Nov. 16.

The change was supported by the Rev. Sheldon Bennett and the Rev. Dr. Adolph Wismar, both of whom sit on the city's affordable housing trust committee; Sandy Eaton of the South Shore Coalition for Human Rights; and Edgewood Circle resident Bill Zamzow.

Dean Rizzo, the outgoing president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, said the chamber was opposed to the amendment and the council should wait until a housing production plan for the city is released in 2016 before considering it.

Palmucci spoke in favor of his amendment at an ordinance committee meeting held immediately after the public hearing, as did Council President Joseph Finn. Councillors Michael McFarland and Brian McNamee both said they were opposed to the amendment at that meeting.

Under Chapter 40B of state law, communities are required to meet certain requirements for affordable housing or developers who propose affordable housing projects can bypass local zoning rules.

Sean Glennon, the Planning Department's director of community development, said at the Nov. 16 council meeting that Quincy is not in danger of failing to meet the requirements laid out in Chapter 40B because it exceeds the land area minimum for affordable housing. That minimum requires 1.5 percent of developable land be used for affordable housing and 3.26 percent of such land in the city is dedicated to affordable housing, Glennon said, not factoring in several recent projects that would increase the percentage.

Chapter 40B also establishes a goal of having 10 percent of all housing units in a city dedicated for affordable housing. In Quincy, 9.6 percent of all units are dedicated for affordable housing. The city, Glennon said, is currently 178 units short of meeting the 10 percent mark though that doesn't include several recently completed projects with affordable housing units, which would reduce the shortfall to 135 once certified by the state.

Ralph Willmer, a principal planner with the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, told the Planning Board Dec. 3 that Quincy will need an additional total of 4,000 market rate and affordable housing units by 2020 to keep up with demand. By 2030, the MAPC expects 8,000 new residents will be residing in the city.

Terrence P. Keefe, 57

Terrence P. "Terry" Keefe, 57, of Randolph and formerly Quincy died Dec. 8, 2015, as a result of injuries sustained when he was struck by a motor vehicle.

Son of the late Francis and Jacqueline (Boman) Keefe, Mr. Keefe was born in Quincy and raised in the Adams Shore section of the city. He had attended Quincy schools and worked for a time as a roofer in the construction industry.

He was the father ofSharon and Colleen Keefe, and grandfather of Carter Kalpaktsis. Brother of Janice Langton and her husband Joseph of Brockton, Ronald Keefe of Plymouth and Patricia Keefe and her loving companion Brian Tully of Milton, and brother of the late William and Dennis Keefe. He is also survived by many nieces and nephews, as well as his close friend Beverly Nelson of Marshfield.

2015-2016 Winter Parking Rules

October 15, 2015—April 15, 2016

DURING A SNOW EMERGENCY;

- No parking is allowed on either side of Emergency Arteries. (For a complete list of Emergency Arteries go to the DPW web site at www.quincyma.gov)
- Residents on non-emergency side streets are allowed to park on the ODD numbered side of the street this winter season.

Residential parking permits are void during snow emergencies.

Overnight parking on the street is prohibited without a residential parking permit which is available at the Quincy Police Department, 617-479-1212.

The average tow fee is $125.00, plus cost of storage.

To find out if a snow emergency has been declared call 617-770-7669, log onto www.quincyma.gov or tune into QATV channels 8 and 10.

For other snow information call the SNOW HOTLINE 617-376-1927.

Curbside Collection for the Holidays

There will be No curbside collection of trash or recycling on Friday, December 25 due to the Christmas holiday. Collection for Friday will occur on Saturday, December 26.

There will be No curbside collection of trash or recycling on Friday, January 1 due to the New Year holiday. Collection for Friday will occur on Saturday, January 2.

Christmas trees will be collected curbside on your regular trash day during the weeks of January 4 and January 11. Please remove all tree decorations. DO NOT wrap trees in plastic bags.

Be a Good Neighbor!

Keep your sidewalk and steps clear of snow and ice for the mail carrier and police and fire fighters. Don't force school children to walk in the street. Help your elderly neighbors to shovel.

There are 9,329 catch basins in the city. Clearing catch basins near your home or business will allow rain or melting snow to enter the drainage system and not flood the street.

There are 2,549 hydrants in the city. Don't pile snow to obstruct a fire hydrant. In the interest of safety, clear and shovel out nearby fire hydrants.

EARLY EVENING stroll in McIntyre Mall during one of last winter's major snowstorms makes a pretty holiday-like card to extend season's greetings to all Quincy Sun readers. A partially snow-covered John Adams bronze statue is visible to the right of the strollers. Illuminated United First Parish Church is in the background. Feb. 3 At Boston Marriott Quincy

Gov. Baker Speaker At Chamber Meeting, Expo

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Quincy Chamber of Commerce has tabbed Gov. Charlie Baker as the keynote speaker at its upcoming annual meeting and business exposition.

Mayor Thomas Koch will also speak at the event, which will take place Feb. 3 from 4 to 8 p.m. at the Boston Marriott Quincy in Crown Colony.

GOV. CHARLIE BAKER

The Annual Meeting and Business Expo 2016 is the chamber's fifth such event and continues a tradition started a decade ago by Quincy 2000, a predecessor to the Quincy Chamber. Baker's appearance will mark the first time a sitting governor has spoken at the event, according to Dean Rizzo, the chamber's president; Lt. Gov. Karyn Polito spoke at a economic development event hosted by the chamber in June.

"We invited him and he graciously accepted. The governor is certainly familiar with the efforts of the Quincy Chamber," Rizzo said, noting Baker previously toured the chamber's Quincy Center for Innovation with Koch when the mayor endorsed Baker's run for governor in 2014.

Koch is expected to provide an update on businesses and economic development in the city.

In addition to the featured speakers, Rizzo anticipates more than 80 businesses attending the event.

"There will also be over 80 businesses with displays and booths," he said. "It's great chance to learn about companies doing business in Quincy."

The event is open to both chamber members and the general public. Individual tickets cost $35 and provide access to both the speakers and the business exposition. Refreshments and a cash bar will also be available.

Businesses can sponsor a table for $275, become gold level sponsors for $500 or platinum sponsors for $1,000.

The deadline to register is Jan. 27. More information can be found online at thequincychamber.com.

My Brothers Keeper
Santa's Workshop

CARNIVAL BENEFITS MY BROTHER'S KEEPER – Some of St. Agatha School's 8th grade students were very busy planning a fun-filled day to raise money for My Brother's Keeper, a Christian ministry which delivers furniture and food to local families in need. My Brother's Keeper Carnival was held in the gym Dec. 11 and provided lots of fun activities. Students participated in a bean bag toss, a Frisbee toss, and pin the nose on Rudolph. There was a floating duck game, a knock down the bottles game, basketball and bowling! There were hula-hoop contests, guess the number of candies, and a raffle. Shown here (from left) St. Agatha School Principal Kyle Egan, Erich Miller, president, My Brother's Keeper and Jim Orcutt, the co-Founder of My Brother's Keeper. The carnival raised $1,360 for my Brother's Keeper.

SPREAD HOLIDAY
HAPPINESS...FREE!

Who says you have to spend money to have a memorable holiday?
Give these a try – they're fun... and free!

Mend a quarrel. Keep a promise.
Gladden the heart of a child. Listen.
Seek out a long-lost friend. Give a soft answer.
Do a good deed anonymously.
Think before you speak. Apologize if you were wrong.
Share a treasure. Try to understand.
Let someone else go first. Welcome a stranger.
Appreciate the beauty and wonder of the earth.
And, while there's time, let people know you're glad they're in your life.
That's the greatest gift of all.

Here's where we take our own advice:
To all our Colonial Federal customers & friends, thank you!
We appreciate you more than you will ever know.
From each and every one of us, happy holidays and a healthy, prosperous New Year to you and yours.

Moments in time

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 9, 1493, Christopher Columbus, sailing near the Dominican Republic, sees three "mermaids" -- in reality manatees -- and describes the mythical half-female, half-fish creatures as "not half as beautiful as they are painted."

• On Jan. 7, 1785, Jean-Pierre Blanchard and John Jeffries travel from England to France in a gas balloon, becoming the first to cross the English Channel by air. They nearly crashed as their balloon was weighed down by extraneous supplies such as silk-covered oars.

• On Jan. 4, 1847, Samuel Colt rescues his faltering gun company by winning a contract to provide the U.S. government with 1,000 of his .44 caliber revolvers. The heart of Colt's invention was a mechanism that combined a single rifled barrel with a revolving chamber that held five or six shots.

• On Jan. 8, 1867, Congress overrides President Andrew Johnson's veto of a bill granting all adult male citizens of the District of Columbia the right to vote. It was the first law in American history to grant black men the right to vote.

• On Jan. 10, 1946, the first General Assembly of the United Nations convenes in London. Two weeks later it adopted its first resolution, which called for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction.

• On Jan. 5, 1957, in response to the increasingly tense situation in the Middle East, President Dwight Eisenhower delivers a proposal to Congress calling for a more proactive U.S. policy. The "Eisenhower Doctrine" established the Middle East as a Cold War battlefield.

• On Jan. 6, 1994, Olympic hopeful Nancy Kerrigan is attacked at an ice rink two days before the Olympic trials. A man, hired by the ex-husband of skating rival Tonya Harding, clubbed Kerrigan in the leg in an attempt to keep her out of the Olympics. Months later, Kerrigan won the silver medal, while Harding finished eighth.

Granite Telecommunications Hosts Holiday For Hope Drive

Granite Telecommunications, LLC, celebrates the holidays each year by hosting the Holiday for Hope Drive in partnership with Father Bill's & MainSpring.

Throughout the two buildings at Granite headquarters in Quincy, 16 Christmas trees are decorated with paper ornaments describing a local family in need of a helping hand this season and the gift wishes of their children.

Granite teammates will choose a gift based on the wishes described on each ornament and will subsequently donate a wrapped present to be given to the family. Granite's team of over 1,450 employees also decorate the Christmas trees and the company donates $1 for each ornament so the families have spending money for Christmas dinner and other much needed necessities.

In coordination with Father Bill's & MainSpring, the decorated Christmas trees and gifts are delivered to each family in time for Christmas. For more information about Father Bill's & MainSpring, visit www.helpfbms.org/.

A Wish List

SANTA

Dear Santa:

Here I am again, later than usual. I know I promised to write earlier but it seems things just get busy and stay busy.

I know you are gearing up for your big sleigh ride later this week. Hope you have clear weather throughout your travels. If you need any last-minute gift suggestions for the fine people in Quincy, I've put together a little list for you. Some of these suggestions are just for fun but others are more serious. I hope you can do your best to make as many as you can come true.

So here goes, Santa.

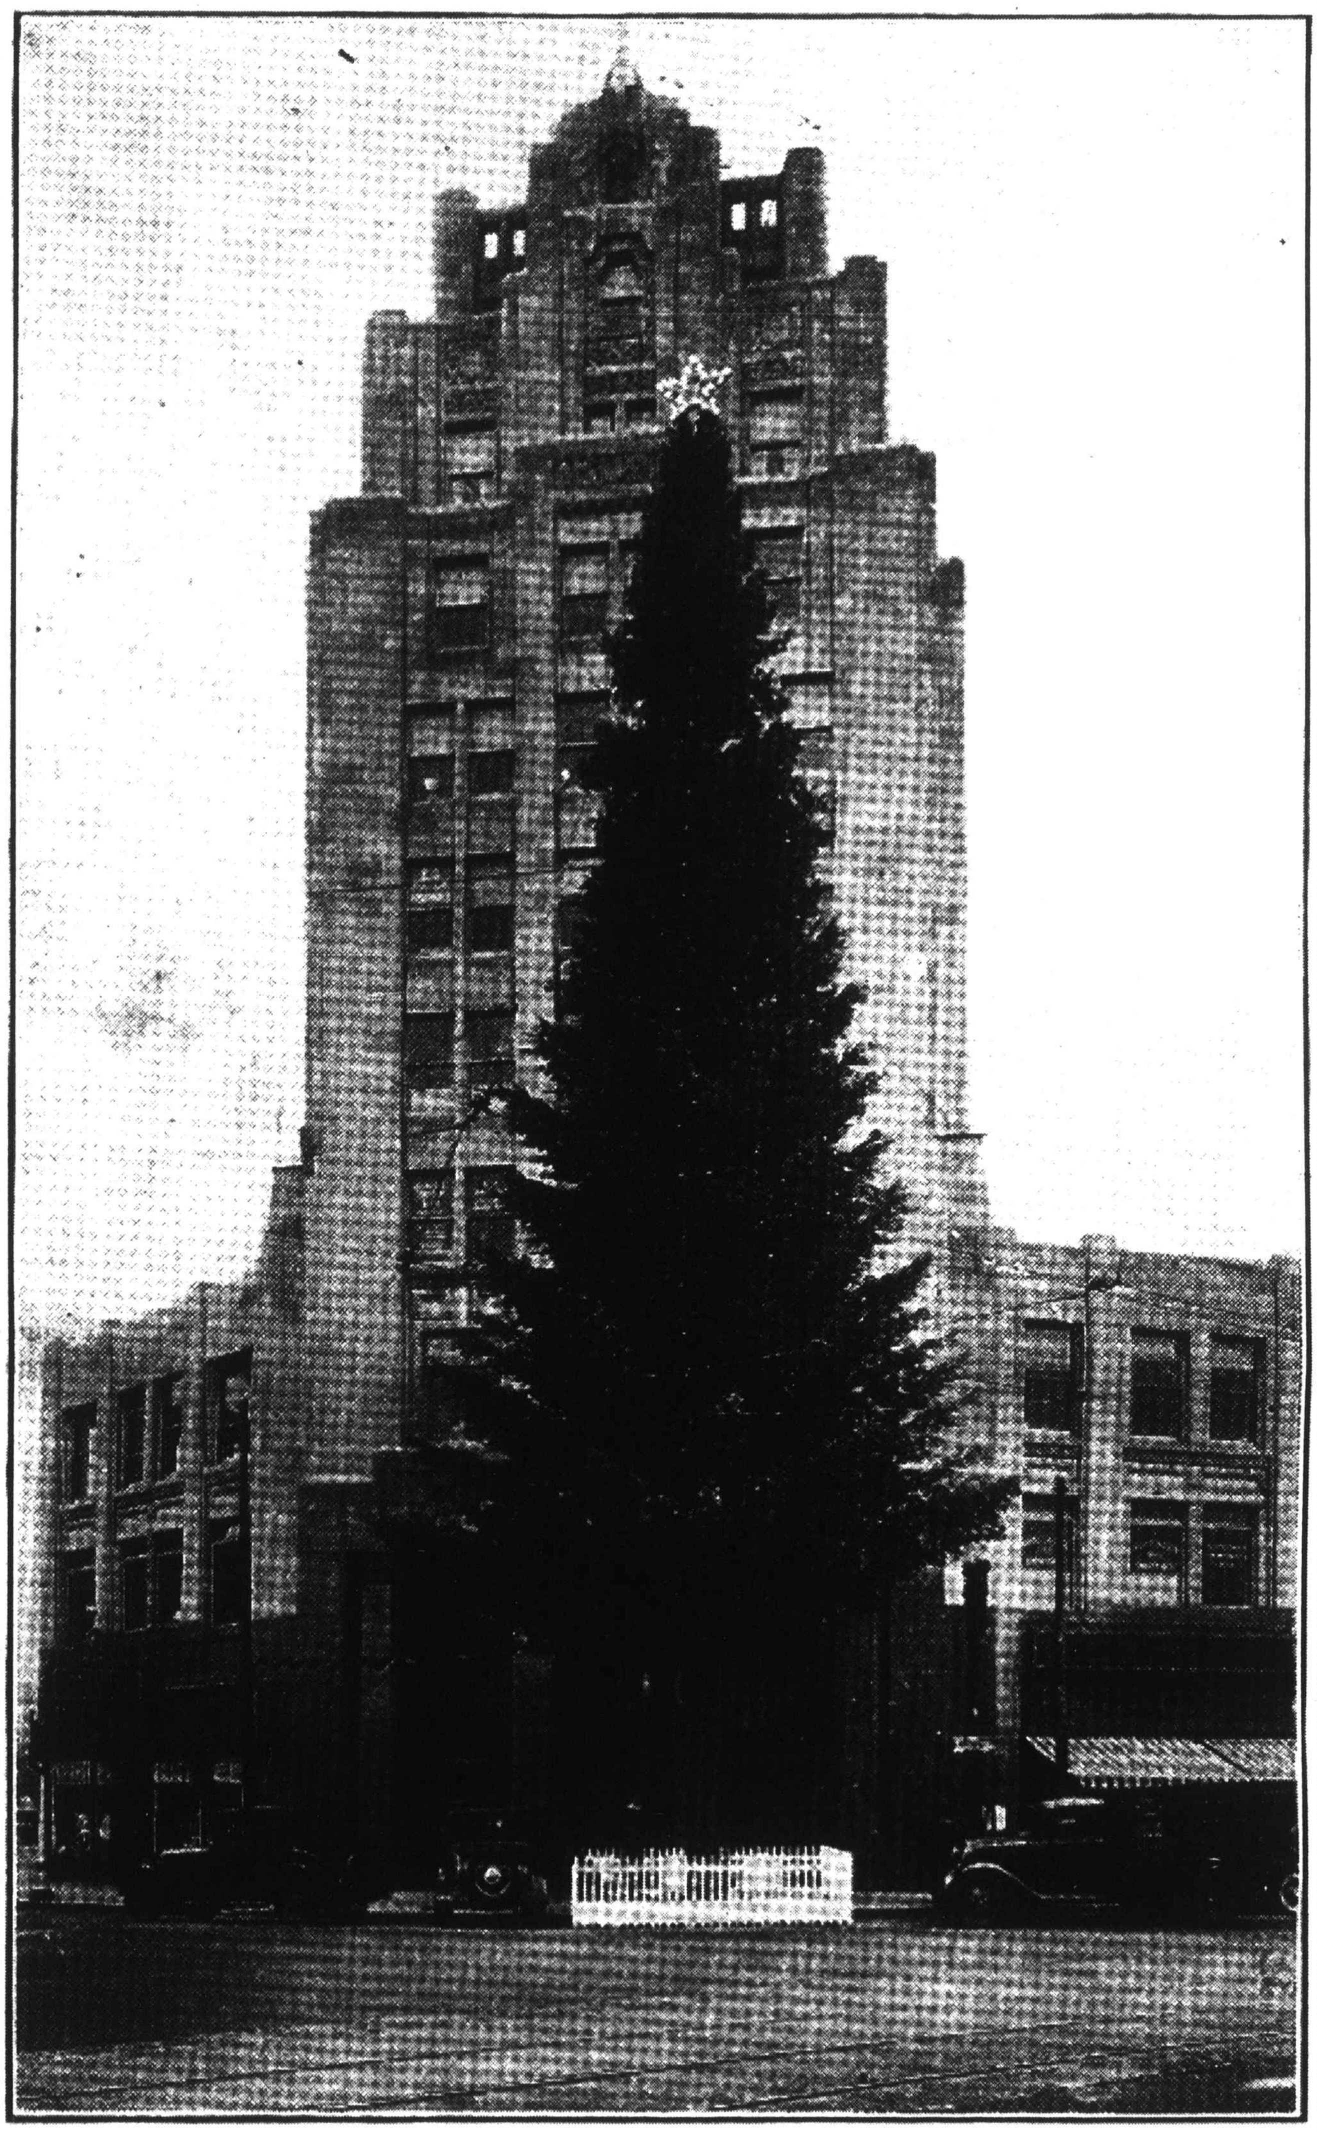
I had a couple of thoughts for Mayor Thomas Koch. But one thing you don't need to bring him is a four-year term. He got that courtesy of the voters last month. The mayor could use the next couple of years just running the city. No campaigning. No fundraising. Just making decisions. He also wants all the finishing touches on the recently restored James R. McIntyre Government Center done early next year. I'm sure he wouldn't mind some extra federal and state money for some of the projects that are cooking in Quincy. And toss in a ground-breaking or two for some more developments in Quincy Center. . . A gavel for Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes. She seems like a shoe-in to be elected the next city council president by her peers Jan. 4. She'll be the second woman to lead the council – the first was the late Patricia Toland who also served as the vice chairman of the School Committee. . . .Bring a second gavel for School Committeeman Paul Bregoli. He has the votes to become the vice chairman of the School Committee next year. . . Don't bring anything to fill the school committee seat being vacated by Noel DiBona. Emily Lebo looks like the odds-on favorite to be elected to the vacant seat at the joint convention Jan. 11 . . . For newly elected city councillors Noel DiBona, Nina Liang and Ian Cain and School Committee member-elect James DeAmicis: good luck as they begin to fulfill the responsibilities in their new elected positions. . . A storage shed for outgoing School Committeeman David McCarthy. Something tells me he'll need the shed to store his political signs for another run at a council at-large seat in 2017. . . For City Clerk Joseph Shea: a happy, healthy retirement after yeoman's work as the city clerk for the past 23 years. Joe will be stepping down sometime early next year. But Santa bring him some community projects he can continue to work on at his leisure. He likes staying busy. For a "going away" present how about new voting machines with the latest technology. . . For Assistant City Clerk Nicole Crispo – confirmation as the next city clerk when the city council takes up nominations and deliberations after Shea retires. Santa, every city clerk to serve during modern times first served as an assistant before receiving the council's vote to be the clerk. She's worked hard and is qualified to be the next city clerk. . . . Recently retired Norfolk County Commissioner and former City Clerk John Gillis: good health and a special tribute event recognizing his decades of public service. . . For "eagle eye" wildlife photographer Karen Walker: a photo of a bald eagle in Houghs Neck. . . . Retired Quincy High School Principal Frank Santoro: some horses for his new home in Plympton . . . Quincy DPW Director Dan Raymondi: a snowless winter. Santa, last year Old Man Winter really dumped us with the white stuff – nearly 10 feet of snow with most of it falling in four major nor'easters in a span of three weeks. If it's going to snow, how about a foot spread out over three or four "weather events." Just enough to make it look pretty but not a nightmare to get around in . . . Sons of the American Legion Commander Paul Moody: plenty of bricks sold for the Flags for Veterans Island at Fort Square. Call Karen and Paul Moody at 617-472-5952 for more information. The island has more than 300 flags on it and now the Sons are selling engraved bricks. Paul, his wife Karen, and lots of volunteers have helped make this one of the most patriotic sites in all of Quincy . . . Marine Corps General and Joint Chiefs of Staff Joseph F. Dunford, Jr.: success in the war against terror and preserving our country's freedom . . . For the Adams National Park Service: a new Visitors Center at the Adams Birthplaces as recommended in a report by the NPS's Olmsted Center for Landscape Preservation in Boston. . . A speedy recovery and good health to Quincy attorney and local philanthropist George Burke who recently underwent surgery . . . Norfolk County Register of Probate Patrick McDermott and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes – a duet album featuring Irish and holiday tunes . . . Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti – a "one for the ages" comedy skit that leaves 'em rolling in the aisles at the next St. Patrick's Day luncheon. Rumor has it Santa that this will be the last luncheon. . . . Strong voter registration numbers for Alicia Gardner, chairwoman of the Quincy Democratic City Committee and Christine Cedrone, chairwoman of the Quincy Republican City Committee. . . Margaret Laforest, the Ward 1 councillor and executive director of Discover Quincy: a jet pack to help her get to all of her meetings as quickly as possible . . . Outgoing Quincy Chamber of Commerce President Dean Rizzo: the right job opportunity that will challenge and reward him. He's done a great job bringing the Chamber to where it is today, Santa. . . . Incoming Chamber of Commerce President Maureen Rogers – a big welcome back to Quincy and a strong year of growth and membership at the Chamber . . . To all the directors of the city's charitable and non-profit organizations including Captains Tim and Nicole Ross of the Quincy Salvation Army, Interfaith Social Services' Rick Doane; Rev. David Wooster, Quincy Crisis Center; Sue Chandler, DOVE; Beth Ann Strollo, Quincy Community Action Programs; and Kathy Quigley, Germantown Neighborhood Center: ample donations and other financial assistance to meet all their goals in serving the needy and less fortunate here all year round . . . More Quincy postcards for City Historian Tom Galvin's popular "Quincy's Yesterdays" feature in The Quincy Sun. We also say thank you to Tom as he begins his 22nd year with the newspaper next month. His first postcard column appeared Jan. 27, 1994. . . . Police Chief Paul Keenan and Fire Chief Joseph Barron and all the city's first responders and public safety personnel: safe shifts protecting the city and serving the community. . . Cross-country cycling enthusiast Nora Canavan who raised $10,000 for adults impacted by cancer riding from coast to coast earlier this year: another challenge to raise even more money for a great cause.

Santa, we also hope you'll take a look at the list of gifts that Quincy's fifth graders would like to give this year (special section on Pages 16-22 and Pages 28-38.) We have some very creative, thoughtful and inspiring young minds in Quincy and we think you and our readers will enjoy this year's "If I Could Give One Gift It Would Be" holiday wishes section.

We also wish to extend the happiest of holidays to all our of faithful readers, loyal advertisers and dedicated news carriers and other good friends for continuing to support The Quincy Sun as their weekly community newspaper.

Merry Christmas, Happy Chanukah and a very happy, healthy and prosperous New Year from all of us at The Quincy Sun.

Scenes From Yesterday



MERRY CHRISTMAS
from QUINCY, MASS.

Largest Christmas Tree in United States.
85 feet high contributed by Retail Merchants.

CONTINUING ON WITH a Christmas tradition we began in 1995 this is the 21st year we have published this 1934 postcard. This huge Christmas tree was decorated with over 600 lights and two stars on top that blinked alternatively. Its placement in front of the Granite Trust Bank building was with the approval of bank president Theophilus King. He had built the art deco building in 1929 on the site of the old wooden Bethany Church. King was Howard Johnson's banker and convinced him to open his second store, a restaurant, in the bank building at number one Chestnut Street. The sign for "Johnson's" is visible on the left. Johnson had his first office here as well. Homer's Jewelry store was under the awning on the right now home to Rogers Jewelry Store. Merry Christmas. Brownell, Marshall Seek Clean Air Charge Suspension

Reps Thomas Brownell and Clifford Marshall have asked the State Department of Public Utilities to suspend the "fuel adjustment charge" to customers along with the low sulfur fuel oil adjustment.

The requirement that utility companies burn low sulfur oil in the interest of clean air was suspended last week by agreement between the Depts. of Public Health and Public Utilities.

GROUT PILE TO BE REMOVED, OTHER DANGERS POSTED

A campaign was underway to eliminate one hazard and spread warnings of other dangers in the West Quincy quarry area where two young people lost their lives in a recent rockslide.

The City Council accepted recommendations contained in a report of a special committee named to investigate the dangers of the site off Willard St. and the Southeast Expressway.

The council directed Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti to implement the recommendations as soon as possible.

Events, Activities For Children At Crane Library

By JULIE RINES
Thomas Crane
Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library has scheduled the following events and activities for children during January.

Music and Movement with Rubi

On Saturday, Jan. 2nd at 10 and 10:30 a.m. sing and dance with Rubi Lichauco! Rubi brings her popular preschool program to Quincy so put on your favorite dancing shoes and join us for this lively mix of music and movement for children ages 0-4 accompanied by an adult.

This program has become so popular there isn't room to move and dance as we would like so we have decided to split the group in two. No registration is required; when the 10 a.m. session fills we will close the doors. Spend some time in the children's room choosing books or playing with our early literacy activities while you wait for the 10:30 a.m. session. We think two smaller groups will make this program more fun for everyone.

Preschool Discovery @ Wollaston

Drop by the Wollaston Library with your preschooler any time between 10 and 11:30 a.m. on Thursday, Jan. 7th to do some fun simple science together. Activities, experiments and instructions will be provided for science you can do with your child.

Drop by and do some color science with your child! We'll be sorting colors, mixing colors together in a couple of different ways, and even doing color chromatography - a fancy-sounding term for a simple and fun activity you can do with markers, water, and coffee filters.

This program does not require registration.

Book Clubs for Kids

Do you like to read? Would you like to talk to others about books? Then you will like our book discussion groups. Join us each month to discuss all kinds of books.

The Phoenix Book Club for children in grades 5-8 meets on the second Tuesday of each month to discuss a variety of books. The Club will meet on Tuesday, Jan. 12th at 7 p.m. at the Main Library.

This month we'll be discussing Steampunk. What exactly is Steampunk? It's a cross between historical fiction and science fiction, with stories set in the past (often the Victorian era) but with technology we definitely didn't have back then. But instead of sleek futuristic computers and robots, Steampunk features steam-powered machines and automatons.

Many steampunk books are written more for adults than kids, but we've found a few and we have them set aside in the Children's Room. Come take a look and join us to talk about it in January!

The Night Owls Book Club for children in grades 3 and 4 meets on the second Thursday of each month. This month we will be meeting on Thursday, Jan. 14th at 7 p.m.

This month we will be reading The Penderwicks by Jeanne Birdsall. This summer the Penderwick sisters have a wonderful surprise: a holiday on the grounds of a beautiful estate called Arundel.

Soon they are busy discovering the summertime magic of Arundel's sprawling gardens, treasure-filled attic, tame rabbits, and the cook who makes the best gingerbread in Massachusetts. But the best discovery of all is Jeffrey Tifton, son of Arundel's owner, who quickly proves to be the perfect companion for their adventures.

Stop by the main library children's room library any time to pick up a copy of the book to read before our meeting. Any questions? Call 617-376-2411 and ask to speak with Ms. Cronin.

Preschool Science Discovery

Have you seen Preschool Discovery @ Wollaston on our calendars but haven't been able to make it to those programs? If so here's a chance for you and your preschooler to try some hands on science at the main library.

Stop by with your preschooler any time between 10 and 11:30 a.m. on Friday, Jan. 15th to do some fun simple science together. Activities, experiments and instructions will be provided for science you can do with your child.

Drop by and do some color science with your child! We'll be sorting colors, mixing colors together in a couple of different ways, and even doing color chromatography - a fancy-sounding term for a simple and fun activity you can do with markers, water, and coffee filters.

This program does not require registration.

Winter Storytimes

Weekday storytimes for children ages 4 months through 5 years old begin on Friday, Jan. 29th. The library offers several programs by age. Stop by the library or check our website thomascranelibrary.org for details.

Due to overcrowding advance registration is required for Mother Goose on the Loose and Just for Twos storytimes. Registration will begin Tuesday, Jan. 12th. Register online, by phone at 617-376-2411 or in person in the Main Library Children's Room. Registration is limited to Quincy residents.

Registration For Winter Explorers

Beginning Tuesday, Jan. 12th register for the Afternoon Explorers online, by phone at 617-376-1330 or in person at the Wollaston Branch. Registration is required and limited to Quincy residents

Junior Explorers for ages 3 - 5

Fractured Fairytales - You probably already know the story about the Frog Prince, but what about the Frog Principal? And who on Earth is Bubba the Cowboy Prince? Join us for these stories and more new takes on old fairy tales.

Mondays, Feb. 1, 8, 22, 29 and March 7, 9 from 3 to 4 p.m.

Explorers for ages 6 - 8

Construction - We'll be combining engineering and stories together this storytime, with tales about towers, planes, boats and more. Come build a bridge, try to make an unsinkable boat and more!

Wednesdays, Feb. 3, 10, 24 and March 2, 9 from 3 to 4 p.m.

Saturday Storytime

Join Denise Shaver on Saturday, Jan. 16th at 10 a.m. for a Wintery family storytime full of stories, songs and rhymes for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult. No registration required.

Toddler Drive In @ Adams Shore

Calling all toddlers! Join us on Tuesday, Jan. 19th at 10 a.m. at the Adams Shore branch library to make your own cardboard carton car. Then rev up your engines for a trip to the drive in where we will sit in our new cars and watch a short video.

This program is for 2 and 3 year olds accompanied by an adult. No registration is required.

LEGO Building at Wollaston

Drop in on Wednesday, Jan. 20th from 1 to 8:45 p.m. for free-play LEGO building. Grab some LEGO bricks and build a boat, a spaceship, a double-decker couch - anything you want, then toss them back and try to make something else. LEGOs must be returned by the end of the program, sorry!

Parents please note regular LEGO are intended for children ages 5 and older, DUPLO and other building toys will be available for younger children.

Mother Goose & Little Bo-Peep

Join children's librarians Jane Miller and Gail Columbare on Thursday, Jan. 21st at 10 a.m. as they present Mother Goose and Little Bo-Peep: a Nursery Rhyme and Song Extravaganza. This is a fun-filled program of stories and songs for children ages 4 months to 3 years old accompanied by an adult.

No registration is required.

Full STEAM Ahead with Science Saturday— Math

This month we'll be exploring tessellations on Saturday, Jan. 23rd at 10 a.m.

A tessellation is when you fit geometric shapes together to cover a surface. Think about tiled floors or soccer balls. They can be simple and they can be complex. We'll be playing with shapes and tiles and making our own tessellations - you can go simple or make something really complicated. We'll show you how to make sure they always fit together!

This program is suggested for families with children ages 3 and older.

No registration is required.

Throughout the school year Full STEAM Ahead will explore the areas of Science, Technology, Engineering, Art and Math on the fourth Saturday of each month.

AAARGH! Pirates at the library!

On Monday, Jan. 25th at 10 a.m. children ages 2-5 are invited to don their best pirate gear (if they want to) and join children's librarian Cathy deVeer for stories, songs and activities about pirates on the high seas- and at home. Learn "How I Became a Pirate" and defend yourself or prepare to walk the plank!

Saturday Storytime @ North Quincy

Join children's librarian Cathy deVeer and Quinn Z. Bear at the North Quincy Branch, on Saturday, Jan. 30th at 10 a.m. for stories and songs about pets.

This program is for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult No registration required.

All programs sponsored and supported by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Deanna, Greg Seymourian Celebrate 50th Wedding Anniversary

Deanna and Gregory Seymourian of Milton, former owners of Phase II Jewelry in Quincy Center, recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary.

They met at an Armenian dance through mutual friends and married Nov. 21, 1965.

Deanna and Greg celebrated the milestone Oct. 23 at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy with family and friends hosted by their family (Deanna Niles and Sean Connors, Karen and Jim Sheridan and Jessica and Brian Cherry.)

Deanna and Greg enjoy spending their time with their family, especially their seven grandchildren: Courtney, Matthew and Lindsay Sheridan and Daniel, Christopher, Stephen and Abigail Cherry.

They also enjoy traveling and dinners out with friends and family. Greg likes card games and traveling weekly to Rhode Island to continue in the wholesale business. Greg, who is retired from the Boston School System, is also involved in property management.

Deanna is very involved in her volunteer work. She remains on the bowling team at the Neighborhood Club, enjoys the theater and her book club. They enjoy a few hours at Foxwoods with friends every so often.

The Seymourians are members of the Neighborhood Club (current and past board members.)

Greg is a longtime member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Club.

Deanna is a longtime member and past president of the Milton Woman's Club.

They operated Phase Two II Jewelry in Quincy for more than 30 years. They still reside in Milton.

Central Middle To Present 'Into The Woods, Jr.' Jan. 7-8

Central Middle School will perform the family hit "Into the Woods, Jr." in the school's Performing Arts Center Thursday and Friday, Jan. 7-8 at 7:30 p.m.

The cast and crew is made up of students from the six, seventh and eighth grades. The musical, which is a junior version of the Broadway show, features such well-known characters as Little Red Riding Hood, Cinderella, Rapunzel, The Big Bad Wolf, Jack (of Beanstalk fame), a witch, a mysterious man, two handsome princes, and host of others.

Tickets for the show are $5 each and may be purchased or reserved in advance at the Central Middle School Main Office, 617-984-8725, or at the door on the evenings of the performances.

The new Central Performing Arts Center, 875 Hancock St., Quincy is located within walking distance from the Wollaston T stop, and is handicapped accessible. There is also plenty of free parking in the area.

The running time of the show is about 90 minutes with a brief intermission.

For more information contact the main office at 617-984-8725.

QPS Financial Aid Night

The Quincy High School and North Quincy High School Guidance Departments will host its annual Financial Aid Night presented by the Massachusetts Education Financing Authority on Thursday, Jan. 7 from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at Quincy High School.

Juniors and seniors and their parents are encouraged to attend.

Five Residents On Elizabeth Seton Honor Roll

Five students from Quincy qualified for the first quarter honor roll at Elizabeth Seton Academy, Dorchester.

Making high honors, minimum 3.5 GPA, were seniors Caitlin Darcy and Meghan Forde; junior Zeline Bartolome; sophomore Genevieve Santilli; and freshman Stasha Owusu-Mensah.

Squantum Express Rides Again With Over 200 People

By ABIGAIL B. COUGHLIN

On Dec. 10th Squantum Elementary School brought back the Squantum Express. Over 200 people showed up (but I stopped counting after 50).

Children could decorate cookies, drink hot cocoa, write letters to Santa, get a picture in a sleigh, take a trolley ride, and of course watch the Polar Express. Groups of 30+ people were called to go on a trolley ride around Squantum. At the end of the ride Santa was on a sidewalk and got to come on the trolley to see the kids.

I had the opportunity to get an interview with Santa Claus after the event and he told me that the children on the Squantum Express were excellent and all have been placed on his "Good List." Santa was thrilled to see that the children had enough Christmas Spirit to actually start singing on the ride. Santa received from some of the children letters and one special little boy gave him a piece of candy, how cute is that. Personally, I think Santa was very moved by these acts of kindness.

The crowd was overwhelmed and had so much fun. Santa also gave out bells to each kid and every kid heard their bell ring that means they truly believe in Santa Claus. Honestly, I can't tell who had more fun, the kids or the parents who were watching their kid's facial expression when Santa stepped onto the trolley. Only in Squantum do you find Santa traveling the streets.

Santa is also known for getting exercise with one of his elfs after the sun goes down. So be on the watch for Santa and his elf traveling the streets of Squantum on bikes decorated with lights.

I remember when it was my first time going to the Squantum Express. I was 3 years old and I wore my PJ's there while drinking hot cocoa. Wonderful memories and I'm glad new comers got to witness the same happy, joyous memories I got to have.

Abigail Coughlin is a fifth grade student at the Squantum School and a special correspondent for The Quincy Sun.

with
Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

No Sugar Cookies

By MARIE

With the holidays here and so many people on limited sugar diets, this is a great recipe for a no sugar pastry. What I like most about this cookie is that no sugar substitute is used either. I usually find the substitutes extremely bitter when used in baking.

These cookies are strictly natural and can be made days ahead of time. Try them with a cup of tea or coffee to satisfy your sweet tooth and not add hundreds of calories.

1 cup of raisins
1 tsp. vanilla
½ cup chopped apples
1 cup oats
½ cup of dates
2 beaten eggs
1 cup of water
¾ cup chopped nuts (I use unsalted peanuts for more flavor)
½ cup of margarine
1 tsp. baking soda

Boil the first 4 ingredients for 3 minutes at low heat. Add margarine (or butter.) Cool slightly. Add remaining ingredients.

Mix well and refrigerate overnight.

Drop by spoonfuls on to a greased baking sheet and bake in a 350-degree oven for 10 to 12 minutes. If you are baking ahead of time, you can store them in a tin or food storage container.

Cranberry Walnut Scones

By SUZIE

Here is a recipe from Elena's Pantry for cranberry walnut scones. These aren't your every day scones loaded with sugar and flour (which we should avoid whenever possible). These contain high protein and good for you almond flour, coconut sugar which is loaded with nutrients and far better for you and your system than white sugar. (This comes from the sap of the coconut tree, which is gently heated to make this delicious sweetener.)

Heart and Brain Healthy walnuts and cranberries (I get the dried cranberries without added sugar) and don't forget the incredible edible egg! Make these for a quick and breakfast, or snack. There's no need to say no to cookies and scones and other baked goods over the holidays. All you have to do is have the right upgraded recipe for a replacement at hand, and make sure you have the ingredients in your pantry.

2 cups blanched almond flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 large egg
2 tablespoons coconut sugar
1 tablespoon orange zest
½ cup dried cranberries
½ cup walnuts chopped

Instructions

1. In a food processor pulse together almond flour and baking soda.
2. Pulse in egg, coconut sugar, and orange zest.
3. Stir in cranberries and walnuts by hand.
4. Transfer dough to a parchment paper lined baking sheet.
5. Form dough into a large circle, 1-1½ inches thick.
6. Cut dough like a pizza, into 8 slices.
7. Using a spatula move slices apart, leaving 2 inches between.
8. Bake at 350 degrees for 12-16 minutes until edges are browned.

Heath Message: Is Your iPhone A Real Pain In The Neck?

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

RUTH JONES

There are ample reasons to occasionally put down our cellphones, not least the fact that persistently checking them removes us from the present moment and disturbs many a family dinner worldwide. However there are other, more significant reasons that you may want to consider. Smartphones might be the culprit of a multitude of physical and psychological ailments plaguing our society in insidious ways.

Whether in a public area, private spot or workplace, take a look around: How many people are hunching over a phone? Technology is altering how we sit and stand, contorting our bodies into what some refer to as the, iHunch, text neck or iPosture. This phenomenon is not just a texting problem, but appears also to be related to gaming, online shopping and e-mailing as well.

Think about this, the average head weighs about 10 to 12 pounds. When we bend our necks forward 60 degrees, as we do to use our devices, the applicable stress on our neck increases to 60 pounds, the weight of about five gallons of paint or four Thanksgiving turkeys. Physicians treating patients in the last three decades have seen plenty of "dowagers" humps, where the upper back had frozen into a forward curve, in grandmothers and great-grandmothers, but now are seeing the same stoop in teenagers.

Sharing your bed with your smartphone? All that extra pressure puts a strain on your spine and can pull it out of alignment. Doctors compare it to bending your finger back all the way and holding it there for an hour. As you stretch the tissue for an extensive period of time, it gets tender and inflamed, and the question becomes, what are the long term consequences going to be? Experts predict this posture can lead to muscle strain, pinched nerves and disc herniation, and over time can possibly flatten or reverse the natural curve of your neck.

According to research, 8- to 18-year-olds spend an average of seven and a half hours using "entertainment media" every day. But the problem is not just associated with kids. Studies show the average amount of data used on a smartphone tripled from 2010 to 2011, and every tablet used generates 3.4 times more traffic than the average smartphone. Astonishing numbers when you think of it!

Not only does this forward head posture cause nerve pain, it can also generate metabolic complications. Experts say slouching can diminish the capacity of your lungs by as much as 30%. A lack of oxygenated blood flowing through the body can potentially lead to a number of vascular disorders. Additionally, pressure placed on the organs by inferior posture can cause gastrointestinal problems.

Our posture is at times an indication of how we feel. We sometimes slouch when we feel sad, scared or powerless. Studies have shown that people with clinical depression adopt a posture that strangely resembles the iHunch. The thought is that posture doesn't just reflect our emotional states; it can also cause them. Researchers compared people with clinical depression, randomly assigned to sit either slouched or upright, slouchers reported significantly lower self-esteem and mood, and much greater fear, and were much more negative in what they had to say. The researchers concluded that sitting upright may be a simple behavioral tactic to help develop resilience to stress. Slouching is also thought to affect our memory. In another study, the slouchers showed a negative recall bias (remembering the bad stuff more than the good stuff), while those who sat upright showed no such bias.

Lastly, there appears to be a linear association between the size of the device and the extent to which it affects people: the smaller the device, the more you typically contract your body to use it, and the more shrunken and inward your posture, the more passive you are likely to become.

Ironically, most of us spend an immense amount of time using small mobile devices to enhance our productivity and efficiency, yet using these objects, even for brief periods, might have the opposite effect, reducing our assertiveness and undermining our output.

Reality is we rely on our mobile devices far too much to abandon them anytime soon. Fortunately, there are ways to combat the problems. First, keep your feet flat on the floor, roll your shoulders back and keep your ears directly over them so your head is not tilted forward. Keep your head up and shoulders back when looking at your phone, even if that requires holding it at eye level. You can also try stretching and massaging the two muscle groups that are involved in the iHunch, those between the shoulder blades and the ones along the sides of the neck. This helps decrease scarring and restore elasticity to the area. Use a docking station and wrist guards to support the weight of a mobile device. Take frequent breaks while using any mobile device or desktop computer. About every 20 minutes, stand up, roll your shoulders and neck or go for a short walk to improve blood flow.

Remember, your physical posture has an impact on your psychological posture, and being more cognizant of these facts could not only provide pain relief, but might be beneficial in achieving contentment and greater self-confidence.

Keep Quarries Clean

The Quincy quarries have always been a popular Quincy landmark. The quarries are secluded within Quarry Hills and have become a notorious place for underage drinking and partying. The parties have the left the quarries with messes of bottles, cans and other assortments of trash covering the granite. The broken class spreads across the entire area, leaving the quarries to be a dangerous place to attend.

The litter is polluting the land, which is terrible for the environment of Quincy. Although trashcans were put into the quarries to benefit the preservation of the area, they actually have had a negative impact. People were using the trashcans for all the wrong reasons and the city decided to remove them from the area.

The ideal scenario would be that no one is littering anywhere, but that just might not work in today's society. With that being said, I propose that we, as citizens of Quincy, come together and fight to maintain this historical landmark as it is something for the people of Quincy to enjoy, the people of the city should take responsibility of maintaining it so that we may enjoy it for years to come.

I propose that volunteer groups come together to take part in the clean and become a part of a system to maintain the quarries. Together we can not only restore this landmark, but also benefit in the unity of our community.

Y Parking Lot Update

In response to Cindy Brandi, who was asking about the status of the parking lot construction alongside the new YMCA, which opened two years ago this month, I can offer the latest update.

A very reliable source at City Hall now anticipates the completion date in the spring of 2016. Those of us who unfortunately live within 100 yards of the project and regularly request updates have been given a number of likely conclusions; most recently we've been told the parking lot would be ready in September and then November.

So we've stopped holding our breath and Y members may wish to do the same. Nevertheless, most happy holidays to you and our city and let's hope for a happy ending for all in the New Year.

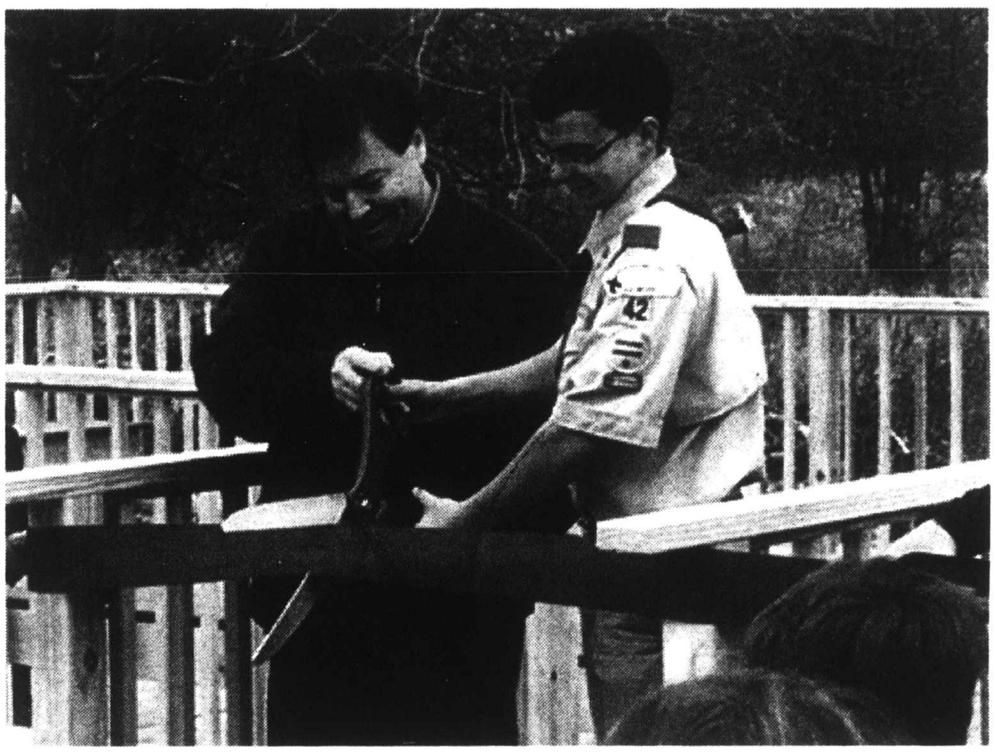
Eagle Scout's Project Honors Mom Lost To Cancer

Lucien Theberge Builds Michelle Theberge Memorial Outdoor Classroom At Bernazzani School



MAYOR THOMAS KOCH helps Eagle Scout Lucien Theberge cut the ribbon to formally open the Michelle Theberge Memorial Outdoor Classroom at the Bernazzani Elementary School. The classroom was created by Theberge to honor the life of his late mother, Michelle Theberge, who passed away after battling cancer.

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

When Quincy High student Lucien Theberge was only 14 years old, he took steps to realize a dream. He thought about his nature-loving Mom, whom he had recently lost to cancer and also about his alma mater, the Bernazzani Elementary School. So for his required Eagle Scout project, he took the first steps to establish an outdoor classroom at the Bernazzani School.

With the help and support of Ward 5 City Councillor Kirsten Hughes, school principal Peter Dionne and many others, Luc's Troop 42 began clearing brush and preparing an area adjacent to the school where the unique classroom would eventually be constructed.

Luc's Mom, Michelle, (nee Perry) a life-long Quincy resident and 1981 graduate of Quincy High, loved the outdoors and herself spent many years as a Girl Scout Troop leader, as well as being a strong advocate of her son's involvement in the Boy Scouts and a Council and PTO member at Bernazzani.

Her son Luc said, "I was originally inspired to do this project when I was a student here--I saw the need to have an outdoor learning space where we could come together, either just to read or to do ecology teaching. Also I liked the idea of the permanence of this project; being able to drive by and see it and know that it was my project, was fulfilling."

After some initial fundraising by Luc and his troop, and much planning with city and school officials, professional builders Ken MacIsaac and brothers donated their man-hours to construct the terrace-like structure, with railings and benches for the students to sit on.

Principal Dionne at first thought that the space would probably not be used until the spring, but as he noted "The weather has been so fantastic, we have been out here every day! This has been a wonderful way to incorporate this marsh site--appreciate wildlife--which has been inaccessible for a long time."

Now a 16 year-old freshman who delivers The Sun in his spare time, Luc "put in the hard work" and earned his right, along with 38 merit badges, to become the proud Eagle Scout that he is. Luc's troop leader, who also happens to be his Dad, may be even more proud than Luc himself is.

Ray Theberge, in his comments to the crowd of friends, teachers, scouts, family and supporters said, "I thank the MacIsaac brothers for their tireless efforts, the Mayor's office for helping to make this happen, for believing that a 14 year-old boy really could do this, all the teachers here at Bernazzani and the students who use it every day—that's what makes it a treasured item to us--and I thank the scouting community."

Before cutting the ribbon on the classroom, Mayor Thomas Koch said: "We are grateful for the efforts of scouting and what scouting stands for, not only in creating great citizens but also as it relates to the community with projects like these... improvements in the community, projects that are done by scouts is awesome and a great addition to the city."

Council President Joseph Finn commented, "The one thing that touched me deeply about this is that it's not simply serving a functional purpose for the Bernazzani school, but also it is a living memorial and I think that symbolizes the incredible gift we have of life...this dedication to the memory of Luc's mother is a reminder to all of us of just how precious this gift of life is."

Third grade Bernazzani teacher Michelle Andrews, who herself was a dear friend of Michelle Theberge, could attest to the frequent use of the space, as she brings students out there daily. "The children are thrilled...they get so excited, they have ideas, they want to add bird houses, we sketch, we do math; to get them into another environment--it just stimulates a whole different set of senses and the way that they are engaged with the environment and learning is pretty special."

A poised and self-confident young man, in his remarks to the attendees, Lucien exemplified everything his Dad had said about scouting: "This is just another great example of an Eagle project...this is part of what I think gives value and credence to being an Eagle Scout...to demonstrate as a youth the ability to thrive and impact your community, be a project manager and make a difference rather than just ride along the train."

Eagle Scout Lucien Theberge Commended

By SCOTT JACKSON

Lucien Theberge recently oversaw the completion of a new outdoor classroom at the Charles A. Bernazzani School for his Eagle Scout project and received a commendation from the City Council in recognition of his work.

The Michelle Theberge Memorial Outdoor Classroom was formally dedicated Dec. 13. The space was named after Lucien's late mother, who her son credited with instilling him with the values of community service and dedication.

Lucien Theberge received a commendation from Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes during the council's Dec. 7 meeting. In accepting the recognition, Theberge said he saw the need for an outdoor space at the school while he was a student there.

"When I was a student at the Bernazzani Elementary School, I saw the need for an outdoor learning space to help educate students about the local ecology and earth sciences," Theberge said.

"When I became 14 and ready to start on the trail to Eagle Scout, I went back to the Bernazzani Elementary School to see if could help meet the need I saw when I was younger. In meeting with the principal, Mr. Peter Dionne, I learned that the teachers felt the same need."

Theberge enlisted the help of architect Aris Bakalos and Kenny MacIsaac, a licensed builder, because he realized early on he needed professional help to undertake such a project. He thanked them for their contributions to the project at the Dec. 7 meeting, as well as his fellow scouts in Troop 42, his friends and family, Hughes and Mayor Thomas Koch.

Hughes said the outdoor classroom provides a beautiful space where children and seniors can go and enjoy nature.

"It was a very special way for him to honor his mom and as a mother it was so touching," Hughes said. "He's a very special young man. I hope my sons could aspire to be such great young men as Luc and some of the other scouts I know he serves with."

"This outdoor classroom is a great resource for both students and teachers and will be a benefit for years to come," she added, reading from the commendation. "Your eagle spirit is an inspiration to the community and embodies the service and leadership needed in an Eagle Scout and in all of our young men and women in this country."

NEW DIAMOND CUT BREAKS THE CODE

If you are familiar with the Da Vinci Code, you may be interested to know that an Israeli diamond designer has developed a diamond cut based on the Golden Ratio. Also known as the Divine Proportion, the Golden Ratio is considered such because it is repeated in nature. Da Vinci adopted the Golden Ratio, which the Egyptians used in the construction of the pyramids, to emphasize that symmetry underlies beauty. The "Da Vinci Diamond" features a 62-facet pentacle cut that utilizes the precise ratio of the Golden Ratio. That is, the distance of the central segment of each diagonal is related to the distance of either of the outer segments by a multiple of 1.618.

Quincy Police Raise $6,500 For School Specializing In Autism

With the approval of Chief Paul Keenan, the officers of the Quincy Police Department participated in "No Shave November." Any officer wishing to grow a beard during the month of November was permitted to do so with a donation of $50 to Crossroads School.

Keenan and representatives of the Quincy PD recently toured the Crossroads School and presented the school with a check for $6,500.

"We would like to thank all of our officers, community members, and business owners who donated to our No Shave November," Keenan said. "All monies raised went to a tremendous cause, the Crossroads School, which does outstanding work for students with autism."

A member of the Massachusetts Association of Approved Private Schools, Crossroads' mission is to provide individualized comprehensive education and related services to students with autism to enhance their quality of life and independent functioning so they may achieve their full potential. Crossroads is dedicated to going beyond that which is required by law for a Free and Appropriate Education to help students be successful.

Fundraising for Crossroads was very personal for one Quincy family, the Whites, who have been members of the Quincy Police Department family for 21 years. At the start of the fundraiser, Officer Roger White, Sr., said, "Our son, Roger, has attended Crossroads School for the past five years. Since beginning at Crossroads, his accomplishments are immeasurable. Because of the dedication at Crossroads' staff, our son is now achieving goals in life that once seemed insurmountable."

White had the opportunity to watch support for Crossroads literally "grow" daily. Andrea, White's wife, shared through tears, "For 30 days straight, every day, he was reminded of the support this department has for us. The support given to us by this entire department, including retirees, is overwhelming and humbling to say the least."

Crossroads School is currently leasing space in an office park in Natick. In the next few years, the school plans to move into a permanent school building with additional space and resources to support their students in reaching their full potential.

Donations collected throughout the "No Shave November" fundraiser will help the school with its Building Fund, which will be officially announced next spring.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THE FUTURE OF ROOT CANAL TREATMENT?

Fifteen million "root canal" procedures are performed in this country annually. These procedures are undertaken when a tooth's nerve becomes infected or the pulp (the soft material inside the tooth) becomes damaged and bacteria in the pulp chamber cause an infection or abscess. The goal is to preserve the tooth by removing the pulp, the nerve tissue, and blood vessels and replacing them with rigid natural latex produced from tree sap called "gutta percha." Because traditional gutta percha cannot ward off residual infection and has limited rigidity, researchers have begun to test an improved version that includes nanodiamonds (tiny diamond particles from diamond mining) and antibiotics (amoxicillin). Future testing will reveal if the new formulation warrants wide-scale use.

Hearing "root canal" or "extraction" may send shivers down your spine. However, a smart dental patient looks logically at the pros and cons of each service. Join us at 44 Greenleaf Street, and enjoy the benefits of professional and expert dental care. We invite you to call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Our goal is to help preserve your natural teeth for a lifetime. Let us help you smile. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist.

P.S. It is the abscessed pulp, not the root canal treatment itself, that is painful. Most people find the root canal procedure no more uncomfortable than having a cavity filled.

DeAmicis Hopes To Inspire Students

By SCOTT JACKSON

School Committee member-elect James DeAmicis, who will become the youngest elected official in city history once he is sworn into office next month, hopes his win in last month's election shows students in the Quincy Public Schools system that they can realize their dreams as well if they try.

DeAmicis, a 2015 Quincy High graduate and Suffolk University freshman, won one of the three four-year terms on the school board up for grabs in the Nov. 3 election and will be sworn into office on Jan. 4. His win in the November election came 20 days after his 19th birthday on Oct. 14 and made him the youngest resident to win a race for local office, eclipsing Michael D'Amico who was 20 when he unseated Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio in 1995.

"It means something very special to me," DeAmicis said in a recent interview when asked about becoming the youngest elected official.

"It's not that I didn't think I was going to win or think I was going to lose. I just wanted to run. I wanted to at least try and make a difference. Certainly in the back of my mind I knew that if I did win, I would have been the youngest elected official in the history of Quincy."

"My hope is that the next generation that is in the system right now sees that any dream can really truly become a reality if you just try," DeAmicis continued. "Don't feel intimidated. Just get out there and have your voice heard.

"That's what I wanted to do: At least have my voice heard, get out there, talk at the debates, talk at the community events and engage with the community, let them know the millennials, they're here. We're told time and time again that we're not active, but in reality we are active – there is that fine line with how active we can be, whether we actually take it another step further and say we're actually going to run for office or we're going to volunteer on a campaign – but we're still active, we're hard working and we want to make a difference."

DeAmicis was one of four candidates to submit nomination papers to run for the School Committee, along with incumbents Paul Bregoli and Kathryn Hubley and retired Quincy High and Central Middle School Principal Frank Santoro, who previously served on the school board. DeAmicis said his concern when he entered the race was not whether he won or lost, but informing the community about the issues of importance to him and other members of his generation, such as his three siblings – Luke, Victoria and Isabella – currently attending the city's schools.

"I honestly just got into the race because I really believed we needed change. Whether I was going to win or lose, it didn't really matter at the time," DeAmicis said. "All that mattered to me was educating the community about what I care about and what my siblings care about and what the next generation cares about – bringing in these fresh perspectives, bringing in new ideas, bringing in fresh energy that we need. It's just not School Committee – it's all levels of government.

"Even though I did feel intimidated in a way because of my opponents, at the same time I was very honored to be a part of this process."

Santoro would withdraw from the race in August, meaning the three candidates remaining – DeAmicis and the two incumbents – were essentially locks to fill the three seats. A fourth candidate, former committee member Emily Lebo, entered the race as a write-in candidate in the waning weeks of the campaign. In the November election, Bregoli and Hubley came in first and second, respectively, with more than 12,000 votes each; DeAmicis finished third with 8,341 and 4,357 write-in votes were cast.

DeAmicis said he worked hard to win the election, going door-to-door and holding signs every day during a busy summer and into the fall. It was an enjoyable experience for him.

"I was out every single day, whether it was door knocking, sign holding – I only had two different fundraisers between the campaign – mainly just getting out there and talking to people from the community. I didn't work so I was fully campaigning every single day," DeAmicis said.

"I'm thankful for the people that did help me. It was a very busy year and I enjoyed the experience I had campaigning as a candidate. It allowed me to build these partnerships with people I wouldn't have if I didn't run."

"I'm just thankful to all my supporters, my family especially. I couldn't have done it without my mother, Noreen, my three siblings; they were very supportive since the beginning," DeAmicis added. "As far as all my volunteers, the help was so instrumental. I just want to thank Quincy especially because I couldn't have done this without the voters…win or lose it was still an amazing experience. It was a great time."

Before Quincy High School, DeAmicis attended Broad Meadows Middle School. It was at Broad Meadows, he stated, that he started to get involved in the school system and the wider community.

"I was very active in the system at a very early age going back to middle school. I really learned what it meant to be a volunteer and tried to make a difference from a student's perspective, learn what the issues are inside the system and outside the system as well because like I said, I did a lot of volunteer work," DeAmicis said.

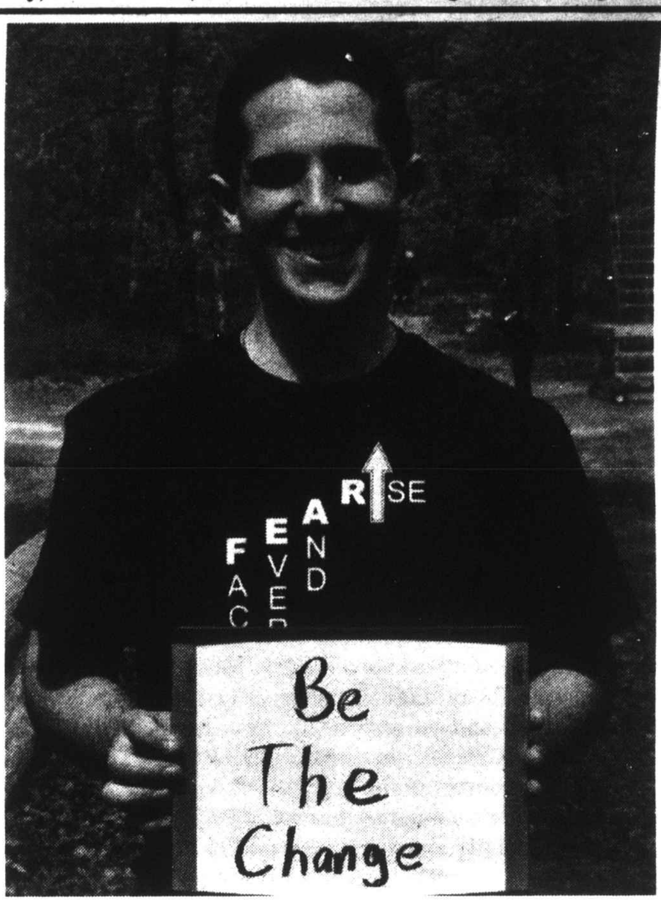
"Going into high school, I was always known as the guy that was busy. I was also busy in all these different groups, working at different pantries, helping out at the shelters – different stuff like that. My weekends were constantly so productive with volunteer work.

"I got into the race because I truly believe we needed change and we needed fresh perspectives on the city government. Because I was so fresh out of the system, I believed my student's perspective would be best used as a School Committee member. I have three siblings that are still in the system. I go back to my experience as a student – I was affected by certain issues. I truly believe now that my three siblings that are still in the system are going to be affected by issues and me being now a committee member elect, I'm going to be able to help with those issues."

Among his priorities on the School Committee are increased services for special education and mental health.

"I certainly think that transparency is something I'm going to be constantly stressing as well looking at what we can do to increase services for special education. It's a mandated thing the committee has to work with but at the same time I've gotten several members from the community who have approached and said we could still do a lot more work with this," DeAmicis said.

"At the same time, I've gotten a lot of people who are concerned about the services we're offering students for mental health. I've gotten peers I've just graduated high school with who have come out of the woodwork and explained to me, 'as a student, we dealt with mental health.' People can contradict me and say 'what about guidance counselors, aren't they there to help?' Yes, they certainly are but to a certain extent. I think we can do a lot better with offering services in terms of therapeutic mentors and specialists with that. That is something I'm going to be looking at moving forward."



SCHOOL COMMITTEE MEMBER-ELECT James DeAmicis, a 2015 graduate of Quincy High School, hopes his win in last month's election shows students in the Quincy Public Schools system that they can realize their dreams as well if they try.

DeAmicis is majoring in American politics at Suffolk; he commutes to the school in Boston daily from his home in Quincy. He is focused on his education.

"Career wise right now I just want to concentrate on my studies as a student and serve my term as a committee member and move forward," DeAmicis said.

Being on the School Committee, DeAmicis noted, is not simply a "resume builder."

"Right now, I want to be the best School Committee member I can be," he said. "I, for right now, just want to do my time as a committee member and work hard to make a difference in the system where I can before I decide to do anything else."

A Job Well Done

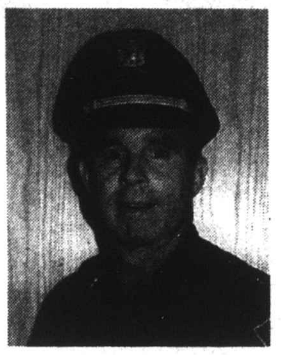
By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, December 13, 2015, at approximately 2:40 a.m., Officer Bryan Donovan was on routine patrol travelling eastbound on Sea Street by Palmer Street when his attention was drawn to the vehicle in front weaving out of lanes.

As the Officer followed the vehicle, he observed the two driver side tires cross the marked lane, into the left lane, and then correct back into the right lane of travel. The vehicle again changed lanes into the left lane without signaling, and continued dangerously over the double yellow marked lanes, into the westbound lanes of travel, crossing over the dotted marked lane that separates the two westbound lanes of travel. The vehicle continued for a short distance on the wrong side of the road, before changing lanes again and going back in the eastbound lanes of the travel.

At this point, Officer Donovan activated his emergency blue lights to initiate a traffic stop. The vehicle came to a stop in front of 833 Sea Street. The Officer approached the vehicle and asked the operator/sole occupant of the vehicle for his driver's license. The driver pulled a gray colored credit card out of his wallet and started to give it to the Officer, then realized it was not a license. After being given the license, the Officer asked the driver if he knew why he was being stopped and he responded, "Yea because you were riding my f@#$%^& a##." After the Officer explained to the driver his observations of erratic driving, the driver responded, "I just live up the street."

While speaking with the driver, the Officer noted that his eyes were glassy and bloodshot, his speech was thick and deliberate and he would slur his words while speaking. Officer Donovan also detected the odor of alcoholic beverage so he asked the driver to step out of the car. The driver said, "It is not my right to get out of the car" as he became extremely argumentative. The Officer explained to the driver that he would like him to take Field Sobriety Tests to determine if he could continue to drive. The driver refused to take any tests so Officer Donovan informed him that he was under arrest for Operating Under the Influence of alcoholic beverage.



LT. DAN MINTON

When the Officer instructed the driver to step out of the vehicle, he adamantly stated, "I'm not under arrest and I'm not getting out of the car." As he was saying this, he reached for the steering wheel and gear shift. Fearing that he was trying to flee, the Officer, at significant risk to himself, opened the door, took hold of the driver's left wrist and removed him from the car.

Once outside the vehicle, the Officer ordered the driver to put both his hands behind his back. The driver tensed up his body and violently resisted, pulling his arms away from the Officer. During this struggle, the Officer radioed Communications for assistance. As the struggle continued to place the driver in handcuffs, a passing male motorist stopped, got out of his car and asked if the Officer needed help. Officer Donovan thanked the motorist and said help was on the way. The motorist then yelled at the driver to stop resisting and do what the Officer was telling him to do. Officer Donovan was able to handcuff the driver just as Officer Patrick Folan arrived to assist.

While transporting the driver to the station for booking, the driver started yelling at Officer Donovan, "I know who you are, you're gonna get it. You'll see, wait until someone goes missing." The Officer took these statements to be threats. Once at the station for booking, the driver continued with the threats but now he was being monitored by the booking video system. A copy of the video was made for court purposes.

The suspect, a 27 year old Quincy resident, was charged with a marked lanes violation, O.U.I., Resisting Arrest, Threats to Commit a Crime and Intimidation of a Witness. Nice Work!

NICE WORK - goes out to Communications Dispatcher Laurie Brancaccio for her handling of a distraught 16 year old victim of a home evasion last week. Dispatcher Brancaccio's calmness helped extract crucial information from the victim and then direct Officers to make an arrest of a suspect.

HOME INVASIONS: As a side note, Crime Prevention has received numerous requests for information on residential alarms due to this incident. Keep in mind that this armed home invasion, like most, is not a random selection of a house. The suspects usually have prior knowledge of large amounts of money in the home and have a personal connection to the victim.

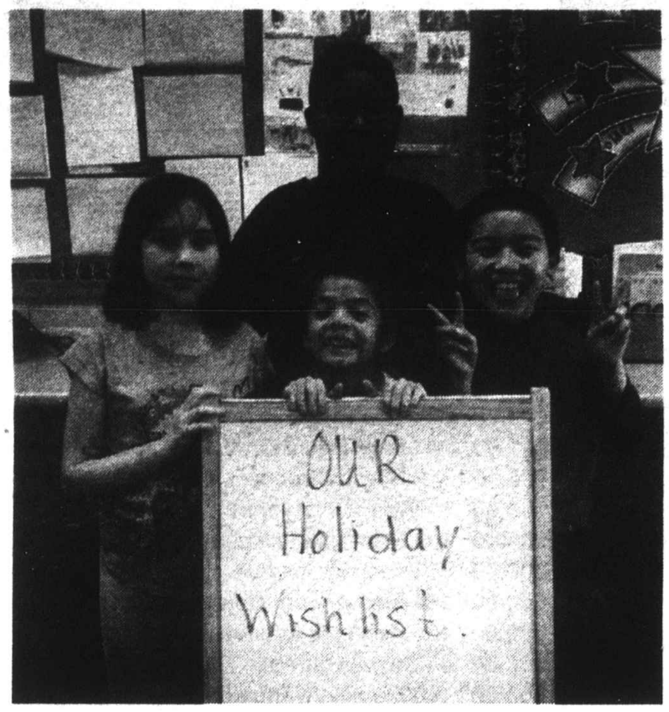
If I Could Give One Gift This Holiday Season . . .



SNUG HARBOR SCHOOL FIFTH GRADERS

SNUG HARBOR SCHOOL FIFTH GRADERS

Fifth grade students in Quincy's public schools and the Quincy Catholic Academy were invited again this year to write the answer to one question for this special issue of The Quincy Sun.

This year's theme is: "If I Could Give One Gift This Holiday Season It Would Be..."

We want to thank Erin Perkins, Curriculum Coordinator for Pre-Kindergarten, Literacy, Title I, and Gifted/ Talented Programs for coordinating the public schools' participation and the principals and classroom teachers of those schools.

We also thank Catherine Cameron, principal of the Quincy Catholic Academy, for her assistance, too.

To all who took part, we extend warmest holiday greetings. Thank you all, most sincerely.

Robert Bosworth
Publisher, The Quincy Sun

I would give them food cans, houses and also table and turkey because they don't have food for Thanksgiving and I give them because they need to live in a house and a table to put the food on.

Phil Mai
Point Webster

Lots of food to people in need. Some people don't have any food or family for the holidays and I think that's very sad. Everyone deserves to have a nice meal every day.

Jayda Berry
Point Webster

To my dear family tickets for going to Italy and many more places like Greece, India and Las Vegas.

Maitreya Palamwer
Point Webster

To give smiles and happiness and hugs all over the world. I also want to thank Santa for all the great stuff he brings us on Christmas.

and Family

If I Could Give One Gift This Holiday Season . . .

For every child to get what they want, no matter how big or small, because that is what Christmas is for after all- joy!

Marta A.
Merrymount School

For everybody to be happy and warm.

Madeline B.
Merrymount School

World peace.

Charlie D.
Merrymount School

Help to my parents. I can give them a house when I grow up.

Nhi N.
Merrymount School

Peace to my family because I care about them so much. They have done so much for me that I want to bring them joy.

Marissa C.
Merrymount School

A toy triceratops to a kid that does not have any money or any toys at all.

Ethan S-C.
Merrymount School

A bouncy ball for my sister because she doesn't get that many presents.

Tiffany L.
Merrymount School

Homes, food, and toys for stray pets at the shelter. I would do it because I feel bad because my dog has a home.

Sam M.
Merrymount School

Peace to the world. I think peace and happiness are the best gifts you can give.

Will M.
Merrymount School

To give my sister a new doll and a Barbie Dream House.

Laisha Arrendell-Pimentel
Atherton Hough

A homemade gift to my mom because they mean more than a bought gift.

Amariana Astacio
Atherton Hough

Clothes and shelter to homeless people because they can't afford things.

Daniel Ballerino
Atherton Hough

Girl's rights to do what we want. Some places still don't treat females equally!

Gwen Bates
Atherton Hough

To give lots of food to the homeless during the holiday season.

Julie Blois
Atherton Hough

A cookbook for my grandmother so that she can make food and special recipes for family dinners.

Emily Bowers
Atherton Hough

That every homeless and hungry child would find food and shelter.

Caroline Campbell
Atherton Hough

A new large colorful slinkee to my sister and also a cute new bear for her to cuddle with this holiday season. She is so important to me and I love her.

Audrey Capone
Atherton Hough

Giving a coat to a homeless person.

Hailey Concannon
Atherton Hough

An iPhone 6 to someone who is older than me who doesn't have one, because I don't need one.

Hanna Concannon
Atherton Hough

The gift I would get for someone else is food and clothes for kids that need it.

Serena Crane
Atherton Hough

Coats to keep people warm. I would give it to any homeless person.

Nathan Davis
Atherton Hough

Money. I would give the money to people who don't have it because they could use it buy things they do not have.

Kyle DeBoer
Atherton Hough

An air hockey table for my brother. He has been begging my family for two years now and would be super excited if he got one.

Mary Doherty
Atherton Hough

I would give money to the poor because they live on the street.

Adam Ducharme
Atherton Hough

An X-Box One to my brother because he would want a new game coming out for it.

Eathan Earnest
Atherton Hough

To give my mom and dad 10,000 dollars.

Chloe Fitzgerlad
Atherton Hough

A car for a homeless person. I would get a car for a homeless person because they could get a job and they could get money to make a house.

Patrick Fox
Atherton Hough

A stove for my grandmother because she likes to cook food.

Cameron Griffin
Atherton Hough

I'd give water and food to homeless people because they don't have much food and water.

Rajan Hamzallari
Atherton Hough

A new laptop to my cousin Kevin.

Timmy Hearn
Atherton Hough

Money to all of the homless people.

Oscar Huang
Atherton Hough

To my cats for being cute and cuddly. My present would be new cat toys and a Kitty Kondo.

John Kabay
Atherton Hough

An emoji hat for my brother because he has wanted it since we went to Party City to pick out his Halloween costume.

Sarah Kabay
Atherton Hough

Some perfume for my mom because she gets it every Christmas and she wears it a lot.

Alex Kane
Atherton Hough

I would give someone who doesn't have much some warm winter clothes.

Cady Kelly
Atherton Hough

To get my sisters new ipads because I like them.

Stanley Li
Atherton Hough

BERNAZZANI SCHOOL FIFTH GRADERS

A little shelter for the animals in the forest, because in the cold winter months sometimes they have no place to sleep and they freeze. But they should really keep warm and sleep nice and cozy.

Dilan Arda
Bernazzani

Gifts to boys and girls that are poor, because when I start to open my gifts, I think about kids that don't get any. I have always wanted to give them toys.

Elle Bush
Bernazzani

A doll and an action figure to a boy and girl, because I think those toys are awesome.

Morgyn Bulter
Bernazzani

A handmade scarf for a soldier, so they would be warm and so it could be a reminder of before they went to fight for our country.

Vanessa Chen
Bernazzani

Food and at least $20, because some people don't have what I have.

Kyle Cruz
Bernazzani

A teddy bear toy, because I don't think I know anyone that wouldn't like a lovable, soft, cute bear to hug when they're sad.

Lauren Donahue
Bernazzani

Food and money to people who are hungry and don't have the money for a home, because I don't want them to starve and freeze when it's winter.

Ashley Dong
Bernazzani

It would be 5,000,000 homework passes because nobody likes homework.

Joey Ferreira
Bernazzani

A warm jacket or clothes for kids who don't have a lot, because there are a lot of people who aren't as fortunate as I am.

Sadie Lee
Bernazzani

Coats and food for people in need, because a lot of people don't have money to buy things.

Jiawen Li
Bernazzani

A gift to an elderly person because I love seeing the joy on their faces, and sometimes they can't see their family because they may not be able to leave one place. I would want them to feel like they are happy and with their family.

Julia O'Dwyer
Bernazzani

Food or water to people who need it. It is really nice to give food and water because many people die every year without it.

Kevin Pritchard
Bernazzani

It would be my clothes because I have so many, some that I don't even wear, and many poor people do not have clothes.

Nathan Stagg
Bernazzani

Food and water to the poor kids all over the world. I would do this because I think that all kids should have a fun and fair life.

Benjamin Travers
Bernazzani

Money to my parents. I would give it because my parents do very kind things for me and I am thankful.

Rebeka Dang
Sterling

It would be a football to my little brother. I would give it because he loves to play catch with me.

Colin McPherson
Sterling

STERLING SCHOOL FIFTH GRADERS

A plane ticket to my grandmother in Vietnam because my grandma's birthday is coming soon and I really want to see her.

Nghi Hua
Sterling

It would be donations to charity because people who rely on charities do not have money and deserve to have a wonderful holiday season.

Ira Habiba
Sterling

It would be food because some people don't have food and they go hungry. I want to give people something that they don't have but need very badly.

Mia Ryan
Sterling

Money to the community. I would give it because it would help a lot of people. Also, I would be happy knowing that I helped those in need.

William Raffi
Sterling

Clothes and blankets for the less fortunate people in the world because some people cannot afford to be warm.

Dynasty Cardoso
Sterling

It would be food for the homeless because some people don't have access to food and everyone needs to eat. I am from Asia and many people there go hungry.

Katrina Tran
Sterling

Computers to schools that cannot afford them because without computers, students do not have the opportunity to do research to help them learn.

Meghan Sweeny
Sterling

A bunch of baby supplies for teen moms. Some teen moms are struggling with buying baby supplies and even the smallest items could help.

Carley Sullivan
Sterling

Food to the poor. Many people spend the holidays hungry and I want to change that so that these people will have plenty to eat and enjoy the holidays.

Peter Cooney
Sterling

The gift of love Because a lot of people in the world do not have love.

Anya Brenner
Sterling

Food and drink because there are many people who go without and that is a very sad thing that I would change if I could.

Calvin Chen
Sterling

Food and shelter for the homeless because I know that there are many people that do not have homes or food in this world.

Lillian Nguyen
Sterling

Food because I really want to help those in need of food because everyone needs to eat.

Brandon Hibbard
Sterling

It would be medicine for my grandfather. I want him to have better medical care.

Amira Aitsaid
Sterling

World peace because there is always war going on and innocent people are dying every day.

Christian Monteiro
Spagnolo
Sterling

SQUANTUM SCHOOL FIFTH GRADERS

SQUANTUM SCHOOL FIFTH GRADERS

A private jet for my aunt and cousins in Wyoming so they could come down to Quincy and visit anytime they want.

Elizabeth O'Grady
Beechwood Knoll

To plan a trip to Florida and I would give it to my Mom because she hasn't seen her grandmother in two years.

Gabe Neault
Beechwood Knoll

A television for my Mom because we are currently using our PC.

Liam McCoy
Beechwood Knoll Elem.

A dog to my friend Liam Carey because he would have another friend to play with.

Liam Cody
Beechwood Knoll

A hover board to my brother Gerard because he has been begging my mom for the past month.

Eva Gannon
Beechwood Knoll

Money for the poor because they need money to survive.

Tammy Chen
Beechwood Knoll

Clothing for the homeless kids because this winter might be very cold and they need some clothes to keep them warm.

Justin Chen
Beechwood Knoll

A journal with a lock on it for my litter sister. She has been writing in notebooks and she wants it to be private for herself.

Melanie Moy
Beechwood Knoll

I would give my best friend Ella a friendship bracelete that says 'Best' on it and I would make myself one that says 'Friend' on it."

Bridget Capone
Squantum School

I would give an iPad to my brother. He would love it because now all he does is play on my mom's iPad or other electronics.

David D'Antona
Squantum School

It would be to my brother. I would give him a toy car because he has a collection of them and he likes to play with his cars.

Sue Hoang
Squantum School

I would give my Nana a necklace because she got her teeth pulled out yesterday and she really deserves a new necklace.

Lana Gullins
Squantum School

I would give a camera to an orphan because he or she doesn't have a mom or dad and he or she could take pictures with it while playing with friends to remember great days and moments.

Thanhy Ong
Squantum School

It would be funny puns to classmates who are feeling down in the dumps to cheer them up.

Ceana Tran
Squantum School

A new stuffed animal this holiday season to my baby cousin who was born at the beginning of November and she doesn't have many toys.

Allyson Liu
Squantum School

It would be happiness because everyone needs happiness during the holiday season. I would give happiness to whoever needed it; family, friends, a person walking down the road, who looks sad.

Maddie Power
Squantum School

I'd give a poor family a Christmas tree so they could celebrate a happy Christmas around it. If they couldn't afford one, I'd give them one.

Graeme Johnston
Squantum School

I'd raise money for poor people because they are poor and I worry about this a lot.

Mohammed Alsharekh
Squantum School

I would give my mom a new winter jacket because she is the one who is always there for me.

Michaela Richardson
Squantum School

It would be a big teddy bear to my sister because I love her and I want her to have something to cherish.

Brianna Alvarado
Squantum School

I would give my Grandma a ticket to San Francisco because she wants to see her family; her sisters, her brothers, her dad, her great neices and nephews all live there. She calls them daily but this ticket would mean the world to her.

Kayla Lew
Squantum School

It would be an Edelman jersey to my dad. He loves the Patriots and Edelman is his favorite player.

Collin Gates
Squantum School

Clothes to the homeless because I already have way too many shirts in my closet. It would be good to give them a lot of my clothes since I have so many.

Jake Ollman
Squantum School

I would give a toy to my cousin in Jamaica. They do not have games and iPads like I do. I want to give her something she can play with.

Marissa Daley

Clothes to the people who don't have clothing so they can be warm during the winter.
Emma
Quincy Catholic Academy

A cure for all cancer so the people who have it can stop suffering from it.
Tyler
Quincy Catholic Academy

Someone to laugh with for the lonely people in this world.
Samantha
Quincy Catholic Academy

I would give the love my family shows me to all of the world.
William
Quincy Catholic Academy

An education to the poor people of the world. I would give them books, paper, pencils, notebooks, folders and pens. I would set up a school that's easy for everybody to get to.
Olivia
Quincy Catholic Academy

To end world hunger, give peace and make sure everyone is happy.
Danny
Quincy Catholic Academy

Helping the poor and to donate food, clothes and a home for them.
Arron
Quincy Catholic Academy

Giving warm clothes to people who don't have heat so people won't have to suffer in the cold weather.

If I Could Give One Gift This Holiday Season . . .

I would give an expensive watch for my parents because they buy stuff when I need it.

Yanfeng Yu
Montclair

Airplane tickets to my Marine uncle so he could come home for the holidays. I miss him a lot!

Avery Pitta
Montclair School

A spa day for my mom because she works really hard for her three children including me.

Emily Wu
Montclair

A vacation to my parents and grandma because they work so hard to keep my family safe and healthy.

Kien Bui
Montclair

Airplane tickets to my family to go somewhere because they help me so much.

Isabelle Wu
Montclair

A plane ticket for my amazing teacher who spends all her time teaching.

Artiom Fernandez
Montclair

For everyone to get at least a good present they like.

Rylee Zhuo
Montclair

I will give my mom a flower because she cooks lunch for us and she works hard.

Jia Kai An
Montclair

Winter boots to my grandpa because he always wanted somebody to give him winter boots even if he had money to buy them.

Zixion Situ
Montclair

A vacation ticket to Maine for my mom because my mom works hard and cares for me so much.

Weiyu Huong
Montclair

Medicine to cure cancer. I want people with cancer to feel good and not get tired.

Milton O'Brien
Montclair

A trip to Italy for my mom because she has been working hard at her work. I picked Italy because she wishes to go there.

Heidi Malushi
Montclair

A plane ticket for my mom because she is always tired and buys so much things for me, my sister and my brother.

Kumi Chen
Montclair

WOLLASTON SCHOOL FIFTH GRADERS

I would give my parents and grandparents a vacation so they all could have a break from working so much.

Nora Zraizaa
F.W. Parker School

I would give my grandmother in China a visit to America so I could spend more time with her because that is what she would want the most.

William Huang
F.W. Parker School

I would make someone's dream come true. Sometimes people dream of being famous or having a certain job and it doesn't happen and they become really sad.

Jovanny Goncalves
F.W. Parker School

I would give my family a week off of work so we can all gather together and tell stories and have a feast. I would also donate money for people that do not have any, so they could have a wonderful feast too.

Vincent Shi
F.W. Parker School

I would make sure everyone has food. That is because on holidays, like Christmas, not everyone gets to be at home with food to eat and heat to warm them.

Donna Chen
F.W. Parker School

I would give chocolate to kids that are thankful, friendly and very good. Santa gave me chocolate once and now I can give candy to another child.

Anh Nguyen
F.W. Parker School

I would donate lots of money, food and supplies for homeless people. Every time I see someone on the street asking for money, I feel bad. Some people just stand and do nothing but I want to help.

Amy Zheng
F.W. Parker School

I would give a home to someone in need. Some people have to live on cold, damp sidewalks and benches. They do not have a home or a warm bed, so I would like to give them one.

Julian Bokulich
F.W. Parker School

I would give the world peace because this would stop wars and make people stop hurting one another. This would make the world a place without criminals and bad things.

Solana Ocean
F.W. Parker School

I would give my parents a long vacation. They work really hard to earn money for my family and I have always wanted to give them a special gift on Christmas. It would be a dream come true for me if I could give them this.

Allen Zheng

I would give my friend Caitlin another hamster. I feel badly for her because her hamster died.

Paula Day
Squantum School

It would be a home and a family for each and every child on this planet.

Maggy Power
Squantum School

I would like to get all the veterans home to their families somehow for the holidays.

Abigail B. Coughlin
Squantum School

I would give my little sister the American girl doll Maryellen, because she has been begging my mom all year. I'd also give that to her because I love seeing her happy.

Niamh Kelly
Squantum School

I would give my brother a Lego set because he loves Lego.

Jason Cooper
Squantum School

It would be a mirror to Dr. Bloom so she can look at how wonderful she is when she is stressed out and upset.

Maura Hays
Squantum School

I would give a mini-car to my little sister. I would do this because she has been begging my mother for this the whole year. It would be lots of fun riding in a mini-car with her.

Munroe, Mele Lead Presidents Past Duxbury

By BILL GRIFFIN

For more than two periods, it was just about perfect.

Quincy dominated the middle behind the play of senior center Mark Munroe. The Presidents used 10 players before the first quarter was finished, ran a crisp, athletic fast break for easy buckets, and set the tone for it all with a sticky man-to-man defense which limited Duxbury to 16 points in the first half.

The Presidents had the lead up to 23 points early in the third period before Duxbury changed the flow of the game with its full-court press. The Dragons drew within 10 in the fourth, but Quincy stood firm thanks to a four-star floor game from Scott Mele and six clutch points from Ugo Kamalu for a 63-52 win over Duxbury in a Patriot League Keenan Division contest at the Quincy High gym Friday night.

SCOTT MELE defends the Presidents' hoop as Duxbury's Nick Gearin looks to make a pass in the paint. Quincy defeated the Dragons 63-52 last Friday night.

It was a quality win over a quality team, and it gave a good hint that the Presidents (2-1) might enjoy an interesting winter despite graduating their first six players from last year's Keenan Division championship team.

"Duxbury is good team. They were ranked No. 4 in Division 2 South in one poll," said Quincy coach Dave Parry. "I was happy with our break and our play inside. We lost to a good Malden Catholic team in the opener, and we learned from it. We're trying to build something in every game and in every practice. So far, the kids are buying in to what we want to do."

In other action last week, Mele, Jean St. Louis, and Darius Setalsingh each scored 12 to lead the Presidents to a 53-47 win over Hanover.

Munroe was terrific. He had 20 points, nine rebounds, clogged the middle on defense and got good, quick outlet passes out to start the break in the first half. Kamalu (10 points) and Dyreke Johnson went to the boards for second chances and defensive rebounds to set the fast break in motion. Quincy won this game close to the basket.

"Mark was great. That's the kind of game we need from him. He looks better every game," said Parry.

Quincy ran and ran and

Saturday Morning Gym Program

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct supervised programs in nine school gymnasiums on Saturdays throughout the winter.

Saturday gym programs are free and open to boys and girls age 8 through high school. The time varies according to age groups. All programs have walk in registration at each location and are open only to Quincy residents. Participants may attend the location of their choice, not just their neighborhood gymnasium.

Assorted gym activities such as dodge ball, tag football, basketball, and gym games will be conducted under the supervision of the Quincy Recreation staff. The core schedule is from 9 to 10:30 a.m. for elementary youth age 8 through grade 5; 10:30 a.m. to noon for middle school and high school. Some adjustments in this time schedule may be made at different locations to accommodate difference in attendance by age groups.

The Saturday schedule is offered at the following schools: Atherton Hough, Atlantic, Beechwood Knoll, Central, Merrymount, Montclair, Snug Harbor, Squantum and Point Webster.

For more information call the Quincy Recreation Department at 617-376-1394 or visit the website www.QuincyRec.com.

Quincy Drops Duxbury After Bowing To Hanover

37 Points, 38 Rebounds In Two Games For URI-Bound Nicole Jorgensen

By BILL GRIFFIN

They have only just begun.

For many teams, the opening week of the season is a time to ease into the schedule. Grow accustomed again to games played at varsity speed, make mistakes, learn from them, and move on to the next test.

However, for Quincy's girls basketball team, there was no easy ride in Week One. There was a test against an elite team from the Patriot League. There was a memorable comeback which fell just short. And most importantly there was a bounce-back win on the road against the club which has ruled its division for years.

Friday night, Nicole Jorgensen scored 19 points, grabbed 25 rebounds, blocked four shots and had three steals, and Quincy opened up a close game in the second half to drop defending Keenan Division and Division 2 state champion Duxbury, 48-35 in a Patriot League contest at Duxbury.

Quincy Downs W-H 4-1 For 1st Win Of Season

Faces NQ In Holiday Tourney

By JOE REARDON

No matter where Quincy winds up in the Patriot League standings by season's end, the team and coaching staff will look back at the first game on the schedule and recognize it as a major turning point.

Yes, that's right. A turning point came in the first game of the season. That may sound odd that a team switches gears so early on but Quincy High has a roster this year capable of responding quickly and with resolve.

With the Presidents trailing Oliver Ames 5-1 after two periods and desperate to breathe some life into his young, and for the most part, inexperienced team, head coach Ted Walsh addressed his squad and told them it was imperative that they play hard, smart and aggressive hockey and to win the third period against the Tigers. Although a win was out of reach on that day, the Presidents could come away with a huge positive and momentum moving forward.

Quincy took Walsh's words to heart and responded immediately. They outplayed Oliver-Ames in every way possible, adding a tally along the way to make it a 5-2 final. The Presidents accomplished exactly what Walsh asked, a calling card of the team so far this winter, and have been playing great hockey ever since.

"The team is very young and is doing everything the coaching staff has asked of them," said Walsh. "As a coach, it's very exciting to see a team execute in a game what they've been working on in practice when everything comes together."

Quincy earned its first win of the young season last Saturday night at home, routing Whitman-Hanson 4-1. Even that score doesn't show just how thoroughly the Presidents manhandled the Panthers. Quincy suffocated Whitman-Hanson in its end with a swarming offense that put 40 shots on frame compared to the Panthers' 16. Walsh also saw continued production from his freshmen who have been the big story so far this season. Griffin Lynch has been playing like a veteran and scored his first career goal and the Presidents also had big tallies from Sam McGahey and Pat Quirk.

The effort from start to finish was tremendous and Walsh knows the Presidents will be able to grind out wins if they keep their head to the grindstone. "The kids just skated hard from start to finish," Walsh said. "They did everything we asked of them. All three lines scored so what more can you ask? They're willing to learn and they're competitive."

And if a team is only as good as its goalie, the Presidents are in great shape with Chris Connolly between the posts. Quincy's netminder has been brilliant so far this season and was white hot again against the Panthers, turning away several high percentage scoring opportunities.

"He saw some tough shots and just stuffed them," said Walsh. "He's been great."

Prior to the W-H victory, the Presidents outplayed Plymouth North but couldn't put home one more tally as the teams skated to a 3-3. Quincy was continously around the net, outshooting the Panthers 42-20 and the effort was continous throughout the entire game.

The fact that the Presidents are so young make the team that much more exciting in the way the squad has responded. Walsh has five freshmen on the varsity roster, and one, Dan O'Leary, is on the first line matched with his older brother James and Pat Quirk.

It will be intriguing to see if the Presidents can keep the intensity high in the coming weeks, and if they can, what the results will be. The first look will come Wednesday when Quincy heads south to take on nonleague opponent Martha's Vineyard, a team that is always in the tournament hunt.

The always popular Christmas Tournament gets underway this Sunday night as the Presidents face off against North Quincy at 7:15 p.m. at the Quincy Youth Arena.The winner advances to play either Milton or King Philip Monday at 7:15 p.m. The consolation game starts at 5:30 p.m.

Despite the strong start by Quincy it's too early to tell if the squad is tournament material after qualifying last season and finishing 8-8-4. Still, the upside for the Presidents appears practically limitless. The freshmen, already playing poised and confident, are only going to get better with each game. That, along with the mix of veterans, could be the ingredient for a successful campaign.

NQ Swim/Dive Teams Bow To Hanover

Sophomore Tommy Zhang won two events to lead the North Quincy boys swimming and diving team but the Red Raiders still fell by a score of 98-50 to visiting Hanover Dec. 17 at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool .

The NQ girls lost 99.5 to 56.5.

Zhang collaborated with freshmen Adam Tlacxolal and Kenny Ng, and junior Alexander Bui for second (2:05.59) in the boys first race of the 2015-16 season, 200-yard medley relay. Zhang then touched the wall first in the 200 individual medley clocking 2:11.62 and supplied the first-place time of 1:06.88 in the 100 breaststroke.

NQ's best finish came in the meet's fourth event, the 50 free, which saw Kenny Ng swim 27.75 for second followed by Alex Bui's 31.44 effort for third. Ng then finished the 100 butterfly with a time of 1:37.47, good enough for third place. Tlacxolal was third in the 200 freestyle (2:30.63) followed by Ng in fourth (2:37.34). Freshman Aymen Sadaka earned fourth in both the 100 free (1:10.72) and 100 backstroke (1:22.87).

Freshman Juliana Chieng paced the girls team with silver in the 50 free (26.19) and gold in the 100 breaststroke (1:25.91). Twice she teamed up with Danielle O'Driscoll, senior Grace Anderson and sophomore Brenna Kirby to earn second in both the 200 medley (2:21.54) and 200 freestyle (2:02.19) relays. NQ finished three swimmers in the top five of the 200 freestyle led by O'Driscoll who earned second (2:47.22) followed by seniors Gabby Doody (2:56.35) in third and Kara Carchedi in fifth (2:59.78).

Three NQ swimmers placed second including Brenna Kirby who clocked 1:10.81 in the 100 free, and Rebecca Thorne's effort of 1:30.75 earned her silver along with Grace Anderson who swam 1:16.88 in the 100 butterfly.

North Quincy hosts Silver Lake after the winter break on Jan. 5. The meet starts at 4 p.m.

Quincy Swim, Dive Teams Fall To Silver Lake

Quincy Varsity Swimming and Diving had a meet against Silver Lake Dec. 15 at Lincoln Hancock Pool. Both girls and boys lost with scores of 67-94 and 40-68 respectfully.

Highlights include: Captain Bailee Carey qualifying for South sectionals with a first place diving score of 189.5. Captain Thomas Tran also came in first in both the 100 yard butterfly and breaststroke. Tran joined his teammates Matthew Pham, Antonio Vega, and Guilherme Eller in the 200 yard freestyle relay for another first place finish with a time of 2:05:06.

Quincy took on Scituate Tuesday at Lincoln-Hancock Pool.

School Vacation Expanded Recreation Program

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct an expanded Recreation Program of activities utilizing school gymnasiums for the upcoming school vacation period.

The Recreation Staff will supervise neighborhood school gymnasiums in eleven locations for a free program for boys and girls age 8 through high school.

"This Quincy Recreation tradition of free vacation open gym programs will be supervised by members of the Recreation staff who normally supervise our ongoing After School and Saturday Recreational Programs," said Recreation Director Barry Welch, "With many working parents we feel that these programs are both practical and necessary while providing positive use of leisure time by the participants."

The vacation week program will be conducted on Monday, Dec. 28th, Tuesday, Dec. 29th, and Wednesday, Dec. 30th from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. The core schedule on these days is from 9 to 11:30 a.m. for boys and girls age 8 through 5th grade. From 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. for children in middle and high school, grades 6 - 12. On Thursday, Dec. 31st New Year's Eve, the gyms will operate from 9 to 11:30 a.m. only.

The following gyms will be open from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.: Atherton Hough, Atlantic, Beechwood Knoll, Central, Merrymount, Montclair, Lincoln Hancock, Point Webster, Snug Harbor, Squantum and Wollaston. On Thursday, Dec. 31st New Year's Eve, the gyms will operate from 9 to 11:30 a.m. only.

The regular Saturday supervised gym program will be conducted as usual from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturday, Dec. 26th, and Saturday, Jan. 2nd.

Participants must be Quincy residents and may attend the location of their choice. Registration will be done at the program

Youth who have not previously attended the Quincy Recreation Department Afterschool and Saturday Program are invited to attend.

A variety of gym games and activities from basketball, floor hockey, dodge ball and other gym games will be played. Participants are requested to wear sneakers for these activities. In all, over 220 hours of programming in the gyms will be offered on the expanded day schedule.

The night gym schedules will be modified due to the school vacation week and will be announced at each location. No Recreation Department programs will be conducted on Thursday, Dec. 24th, Christmas Day, or New Year's Day. For more information call 617-376-1394 or visit www.QuincyRec.com.

If I Could Give One Gift This Holiday Season . . .

SQUANTUM SCHOOL FIFTH GRADERS

I would give to the Quincy Teen Mothers. I would give supplies, clothes, and maybe food. All these goods will be needed in order to provide for their young children.

Sofia Xie
Wollaston School

If I could give a gift this holiday season is to my best friend named Aria. She always wanted to have a pocket binder. Also, she wanted that is because her card board binder breaks. The binder I am going to give her is unbreakable!

Jennifer Chen
Wollaston School

I would donate food and clothes to the Interfaith Social Services. It provides food, clothes and emergency shelter. Especially around Christmas time, it provides gifts for families who might not even have enough money to buy their children any Christmas presents.

Sarah Alberione
Wollaston School

If I could give one gift this holiday season I would give those without a lot of money 1 million dollars so they would be set for life. They could go to college to get a good education.

Steven Gao
Wollaston School

If I could give one gift this holiday season it would be a gift to my principal because he does a lot of work. For example, he has to go to a lot of meetings, call parents, work on his computer, and more. I think he should have a gift card to his favorite store.

Jason Ton
Wollaston School

It would be dolls for the girls and action figures to the boys at an orphanage. I will give it to the orphanage because they may not have enough money to pay for toys.

Suleka Huseein
Wollaston School

It would be a bag of food and some water. I would give it to someone who is homeless. They wouldn't need to worry about food for a couple weeks.

Kazuki Hedge
Wollaston School

It would be a friend for my grandmother.

Amber Doyle
Montclair

It would be a trip to Paris for my mom.

Emily Zeng
Montclair

It would be an ornament for my youngster sister Kalianna because I haven't seen her since she was two.

Desiree Masone
Montclair

It would be a whole entire year supply of food for the homeless.

Allen Huang
Montclair

A new computer game for my cousin, Do hau.

James Weng
Montlcair

It would be cash for the animal shelter.

Jason Wen
Montclair

It would be a Dell 2 computer and one laptop to my friends Meghan, Sophia, Yvonne, Adin, Zixan and my mom and dad.

Natalie Chan
Montclair

A new computer for my cousin, Nathan.

Jeffrey Tam
Montclair

It would be peace for the world.

Meghan Huang
Montclair

Winter boots for my grandmother because she doesn't have winter boots and she shovels our driveway with sneakers.

Sophia Huang
Montclair

It would be a beautiful home to live in for my family.

Jason Li
Montclair

A doll house for my niece because she loves playing with doll houses.

Giordano McKenzie
Montclair

Peace to the world.

Kayla Grippi
Montclair

A box filled with cookies, a book mark and lots of books. My gift would be to a child who loves to read. I would donate it and it would go to a kid that I don't know and it would really help that child.

Sivapriya Marimuthu
Montclair

I would give my older sister an Apple laptop with a magenta cover. She would scream and give me a big juicy hug.

Brianna M.
Squantum School

I would give my family tickets to go to the Caribbean. I would give this because they have always wanted to go there.

Nicholas Enbar-Salo
Squantum School

I would give my mom one of those vacuum cleaners that are small and move by themselves so she won't have to always worry about cleaning. Because she does so many things for me and around the house, she deserves a break.

Caitlin Feeney
Squantum School

A few new albums to my brother, Jake. He likes music similar to what I like. I can't wait until the holidays when my brother comes home.

Sam T.
Merrymount School

Schools for children that can't go to school. Some children might not get a good education, and I want everyone to have the chance to learn.

Nicholas F.
Merrymount School

For my mom and dad to be able to take a break and go on a vacation. They work so hard for my sisters and me. They love me so much and I want them to know how much I love them back.

Victoria B.
Merrymount School

Making my Papo happy because he is almost 100. I want to see him more and hug him. I want him to be happy.

Mairead F.
Merrymount School

Love to the world. I would love to help clean the earth and show I care about it.

Kevin B.
Merrymount School

Supplies to the animal shelter. I would do this because some shelters don't have enough supplies for all of the animals. Some of the animals would then have to be put down, and I would hate for any animals to be put down.

Charlie C.
Merrymount School

Clean water for people who can't get it. Some water can be dirty, so I would want them to not get sick.

Thomas O.
Merrymount School

Love, laughter, family, and peace to all kids. They'll have the best Christmas in the world. All you need is love, laughter, peace, and your family.

Gianna J-L.
Merrymount School

It would be shelter because shelter protects people during the winter.

Antonio Wade
Point Webster

It would be clothes. I would give that because clothes keep people warm.

Megan Cobb
Point Webster

It would be food because people need food to live.

Robert Chambers-Holland
Point Webster

It would be homes because people need homes to keep warm this holiday season.

Elijah Eno
Point Webster

It would be food because people need food.

Rene Micheri
Point Webster

I'll donate or give a gift to the mayor for $5 million to upgrade schools because I want children to learn more.

Anonymous
Point Webster

It would be a shirt to my mom because I love her so much and she cares about me.

Anonymous
Point Webster

A Dunkin' Donuts credit card to my mom because I know she likes coffee.

Kyle Cao

It would be love to my family and the school. I would give them love, because I want everyone to be happy. If love is spread in school, then everyone would be happy and can make new friends.

Harry Wang
F. W. Parker

If I could give one gift this holiday season it would be to Jennifer. It would be a bracelet, because she is my best, best, best friend and I wish to do it.

Joel Alcantara
F. W. Parker

If I could give one gift this holiday season it would be happiness. When people feel sad, I can help them feel better. I just love the sound of laughter and when you help someone feel better you are showing love.

Yenny Guan
F.W. Parker

It would be a friend for my grandmother.

Amber Doyle
Montclair

It would be a trip to Paris for my mom.

Emily Zeng
Montclair

It would be an ornament for my younger sister Kalianna because I haven't seen her since she was two.

Desiree Masone
Montclair

It would be a whole entire year supply of food for the homeless.

Allen Huang
Montclair

A new computer game for my cousin, Do hau.

James Weng
Montlcair

It would be cash for the animal shelter.

Jason Wen
Montclair

It would be a Dell 2 computer and one laptop to my friends Meghan, Sophia, Yvonne, Adin, Zixan and my mom and dad.

Natalie Chan
Montclair

A new computer for my cousin, Nathan.

Jeffrey Tam
Montclair

It would be peace for the world.

Meghan Huang
Montclair

Winter boots for my grandmother because she doesn't have winter boots and she shovels our driveway with sneakers.

Sophia Huang
Montclair

It would be a beautiful home to live in for my family.

Jason Li
Montclair

A doll house for my niece because she loves playing with doll houses.

Giordano McKenzie
Montclair

Peace to the world.

Kayla Grippi
Montclair

A box filled with cookies, a book mark and lots of books. My gift would be to a child who loves to read.

Sivapriya Marimuthu
Montclair

I would give time to spend with family. I would give this to my parents, because they don't have a lot of time to spend together.

Zahra Almousawi
Squantum School

It would be family joy to each family in the world. I would give this to all families so that they can be happy and have a great holiday.

Ava Moran
Squantum School

The gift I would give this holiday season would be hospital supplies. I would give them to veterinarians and doctors all around the world, so that they would have a better chance at saving people's and animal's lives.

Lea Bergin
Squantum School

The gift I would give is a brand new bike. I would give it to kids at a shelter. They don't have many things, so they can all share the bike and get exercise.

Adriana Campbell
Squantum School

It would be to give world peace to everyone, so there would be no more fighting.

Morgan Calvert
Squantum School

It would be a large puzzle to my grandpa because he loves solving puzzles!

Vincent O'Leary
Squantum School

I would give plenty of clothes to the poor.

Alinx Johnson
Squantum School

I would give my cousin Grace a trampoline. I would give her this because she has too much energy and she could use a lot on her trampoline.

Cullen Quilty
Squantum School

If I could give a gift it would be homes. I would give this to anyone who is homeless. I would give this gift because many people don't have homes.

Aidalee Giordano
Squantum School

If I could give one gift this holiday season, it would go to everyone, and it will be world peace. All I hear on the radio is the explosions in Paris. It's ridiculous; people come to Paris for fun, not to die, so this holiday I want everyone to have peace.

Robert Walinjom
Squantumn School

It would be to give money to the poor. The poor people on the streets may even be children too. They need food and shelter and kindness and respect.

Joycelynne Diep
Squantumn School

If I could give one gift this holoday season it would be to my brother. I would give him a hover board. I would give him a hover board because he has been wanting one for a while and they give you a lot of attention.

If I Could Give One Gift This Holiday Season . . .

If I could give one gift this holiday season it would be cans of fruit. Fruit is healthy and people who do not have enough to eat need the vitamins.

Brian Chan
Sterling

A clock for my favorite teacher, Mrs. Maydak. I would give it so that she and the whole class can look at the time.

Sean Libby
Sterling

I would give kids the ability to grow faster. I am small right now and I would like to be tall instead. I know a lot of other kids want to grow faster as well.

A'syiah Reeder
Sterling

An education for the poor and the homeless. It is sad to think that some people are living on the streets and not attending school.

Rebekah Hall
Sterling

Clothing to those who need it. Millions of people do not have clothes to wear and I have a lot of clothes that I don't need.

Shaina Daphnis
Sterling

A handful of help to the poor and the homeless. I feel bad that my family and I have plenty and celebrate during the holidays while many people go hungry and cold.

Nicholas Pereira
Sterling

Toys to children in need because some children do not have any toys at all. I want them to be able to play, especially inside on rainy days.

Vincent Forucci
Sterling

It would be an outfit that no longer fits me. I would give it because some people don't have any clothes to wear.

Madison Rose
Sterling

It would be a toy that I don't use anymore because there are some kids who don't even have one toy and I think it would be nice to give them one.

Olivia Colligan
Sterling

POINT WEBSTER SCHOOL FIFTH GRADERS

Homes to the homeless because people need shelter to keep warm, especially in the winter. I would do anything to help people survive.

Madison Payne
Sterling

It would be any kind of help to those in need. Many people don't get to be warm in winter and some don't get gifts under their tree on Christmas.

Alexandria Simeone
Sterling

Food for people in Africa. Many people there do not have food and water and cannot survive and be healthy because of that.

Valeria Sales-Neta
Sterling

Homes for the poor. I feel bad for all the people that don't have homes to live in, especially when it is very cold outside.

Alex Lei
Sterling

Support to poor people. I would give it because my family and I feel bad for all the poor people on earth and we want to help in any way we can.

Arunee Sundosd
Sterling

A new car to my mom and my dad. My dad really needs a new car and my mom will need one soon as well.

Andrew Riva
Sterling

Food for the poor. Some people barely ever get to eat and food is a wonderful gift for those who cannot afford it.

Christian Tineo
Sterling

It would be my Nintendo Wii. I don't really use it that much anymore but when I did it was very fun. Someone who cannot afford video games could use it and have as much fun with it as I did.

Patrick Berry
Sterling

It would be my two best friends to someone who has no friends. My friends are very nice and we always hang out. Someone without friends would like to hang out with them.

Brandon White
Sterling

Unlimited food and drinks for the homeless because I'm tired of people ignoring the homeless and I really want to make their lives easier to enjoy.

Jessica Chen
Beechwood Knoll

A Star Wars Lego set to Liam McCoy because he and I are best friends and he loves Legos.

Colin Smith
Beechwood Knoll.

Food and clothes to homeless people who cannot afford their own.

Jack Cavicchi
Beechwood Knoll

Flowers and chocolate for my teacher because she is very nice.

JingLin Tan
Beechwood Knoll

POINT WEBSTER SCHOOL FIFTH GRADERS

A dog for my mom because she loves dogs.

Haley Johnston
Beechwood Knoll

A batch of gluten free shortbread cookies for my family because they love them.

Julian DeJesus
Beechwood Knoll

All of my allowance money for a homeless person so they can use it to buy clothes, food, or anything they need.

Kristen Duong
Beechwood Knoll

An iPad to my family because they want an iPad with a big screen.

Tammie Xu
Beechwood Knoll Elem.

It would be a warm hug. I don't really have enough money to buy anything for everyone. Even if I bought a gift, it doesn't show much love. Isn't the holiday all about love?

Emily Lin
Wollaston School

It would be a scarf. It would be a scarf because it would keep kids warm.

Linda Gao
Wollaston School

It would be a college education. Most jobs you need to be trained or have graduated from college but some people can't afford college. With a college education you can go for the job you want.

Amin Charepoo
Wollaston School

It would be a very cute teddy bear. I would like to give a teddy bear to poor kids, because I do not want those poor kids to be lonely, and I also want them to have a best friend that they can trust, and play together to have fun.

Oscar Chen
Wollaston School

If I could give one gift this holiday season it would be a toy car to a poor kid that can't get toys.

John Nigro
Wollaston School

It would be $1,000. I would donate the money to Dana Farber. I would do it because of all the sick children in the hospital that can't go home for Christmas.

Selena Chen
Wollaston School

It would be a fuzzy sweater. In the winter, everyone is freezing and warm clothing keeps everyone warm. So a fuzzy sweater will be a warm gift for everyone.

Keyi Lin
Wollaston School

It would be a teddy bear. I would give it to Stella because she helps me with my work at school and plays with me at home.

Ashlee Nguyen
Wollaston School

It would be a shiny-bright red car for my dad. He really likes cars and driving. I think he would really like that present!

Arnold Chen
Wollaston School

It would be a drawing book. I would give it to my sister because she loves to draw. One time she drew a dragon and it looked real. I always hang the arts on my wall.

Andy Vu

Bill O'Donnell

If I Could Give One Gift This Holiday Season . . .

Good health and happiness to everyone who can't afford to get anything for Christmas, I feel that on Christmas everyone should have peace and joy.

Matthew B.
Merrymount School

Gifts to the people that are not as fortunate as me.

Madison O.
Merrymount School

A huge donation to the Children's Hospital for kids that have cancer. I would do this because it's tough to go through cancer, especially for kids. I want to give them Christmas joy and hope for a cure.

Elizabeth C.
Merrymount School

To give an education to the less fortunate. There are a lot of kids who don't know how to read.

Sean M.
Merrymount School

Food and toys to orphans because they don't have things other kids have.

Ammar C.
Merrymount School

Toys to children who can't afford toys for Christmas. I would do that so that the kids and their families can enjoy Christmas.

Ruby L.
Merrymount School

Food and money to the poor. I feel bad for people who don't have homes and are starving in the cold during fall and winter.

Trinity T.
Merrymount School

The lives from the attacks in France. I think it is unfair for the people whose family and friends died.

Stephen G.
Merrymount School

Money for my parents so they can take a vacation.

Fionn G.
Merrymount School

To donate money for kids that have cancer because they can't celebrate Christmas like other kids. I would want to raise as much money as I can just so kids can have a happy holiday and hopefully feel better.

Andrew M.
Merrymount School

Water, food, and a shelter to the poor. I feel bad for people that might not get to celebrate Christmas.

Jaimie S.
Merrymount School

A donation for my country, Iraq, because they are going through a horrible crisis. I'm always worried about my relatives there.

Sadeq S.
Merrymount School

Toys and money to the poor. They don't have a lot of money, and they can't celebrate the holidays with a big celebration like I do.

Danielle O.
Merrymount School

Buying every homeless person a home, because I feel bad for the ones that don't have a home for the whole winter, which is really cold.

Anass B.
Merrymount School

Clothes and food to the homeless shelter. I think it is unfair that some people don't have a home. They could use some free food and clothes.

Benjamin D.
Merrymount School

Water and food and shelter for all people begging for a place to live and eat.

Kastriot P.
Merrymount School

Money and a big house for everyone that needs it. Everyone should be happy and I feel bad for homeless people.

Quinten V.
Merrymount School

To be kind, because if everyone was kind then nothing bad would happen.

Anna T.
Merrymount School

Toys for orphans. I would want to put a big smile on their faces and to change their lives with happiness.

Kyleigh C.
Merrymount School

The gift of world peace. For too long, countries have been quarreling like children, and people have died and suffered for absolutely no reason.

John Thomas M.
Merrymount School

A gift for all the kids in the hospital. I would call it a "cure-kit"- it would have coloring books, small toys, and art supplies.

Kaleigh M.
Merrymount School

A big donation to the Wounded Warrior Project. They fought so much and risked their lives for us, so we should help them in return.

Andrew N.
Merrymount School

Blankets, clothes, and money to Nepal because they had a big earthquake, and they need a lot of help.

Delia N.
Merrymount School

Money and food to the homeless. I would start a fundraiser and give all the money to kids that have no food.

Alise H.
Merrymount School

To bring joy all around the world. A lot of kids don't get presents.

Joey M.
Merrymount School

Money to kids with cancer. I would also want researchers to find a cure.

Victoria R.
Merrymount School

To donate money and toys to the children who can't afford them. I think everybody should be able to get something for Christmas.

Tommy L.
Merrymount School

Tatiana Rojas
Sterling

It would be a new home to a family in need. I would give it because there are homeless people around the world who are freezing right now.

Brenda Moura
Sterling

It would be help for a poor family. I would give it because there are a lot of families out there that don't get holiday gifts.

Viviana Depina
Sterling

It would be food for the poor. I would give it because so many people go hungry and deserve to eat, especially over the holidays.

Kenny Ortiz
Sterling

It would be a job for someone who does not have one. I would give it because everyone needs to be able to take care of their family and buy presents for their children over the holiday season.

Chris Bruce
Sterling

It would be food and water to someone who does not have any. I would give it because people need food and water to live but some don't have those things.

William Britt
Sterling

It would be a new laptop to Attila Marquez. I would give it because Attila is a great friend and he helps me when I am in need.

Kenny Chen
Sterling

It would be a membership to a water park for Kenny Chen. I would give it because Kenny Chen is my best, best friend and he helps me with my school work too.

Attila Marquez
Sterling

If I could give one gift this holiday season it would be TAB Wheels to someone who can't walk. I would give it because you don't have to walk and they're fun to ride.

Chase Morales
Sterling

It would be an Easy Bake Oven to someone who won't be getting any presents this year. I would give it because the person who gets it can make treats!

Brianna Backman
Sterling

It would be a new laptop for someone who needs it. I would give it because some people don't have laptops but they probably really need them.

Amy Dang
Sterling

It would be my toy helicopter for someone who will not be getting any gifts. I would give it because it flies really high and it's very fun to play with.

Jacob Rodriguez
Sterling

It would be a gift card to someone in need. I would give it because everyone likes to shop and needs to shop.

Ty Neal
Sterling

It would be the gift of peace, love, food, and shelter. I would give it because I think everyone deserves good things, not bad things, and I'd like peace not war, so stop the fighting!

Derrek Barry
Sterling

It would be a nice outfit for a foster kid. I would give it because I don't know if foster kids get gifts from Santa, but I know it would be nice to get them from me.

Lauren Kabilian
Sterling

If I could give one gift this holiday season it would be an iPhone 4s to a child in need. I would give it because a child may need o keep in touch with his or her mother or father.

Brooke Doherty
Sterling

It would be a home for a homeless family. I would give it because everyone should be happy and feel loved.

David Oneto
Sterling

It would be the gift of my father to my mother. I would give it because my father is in Cape Verde and my mom and I miss him very much.

Angelica Aikens
Sterling

It would be to give my brother one more day to be with our pet ginger who died. He misses her every day and even made a game to play in her honor.

Isabella Carina
Point Webster

A drone to my step-dad because he really wants one.

Aiden Rossi
Point Webster

Unlimited food supplies for the homeless because they need food to live more than I need a present.

Casey Nguyen
Point Webster

A monkey. I would give it to Isabella because she loves monkeys.

Ivan Hassan
Point Webster

It would be a toy to my little brother because he's my brother.

Christopher
Point Webster

Brand new clothes to any homeless person because a lot of these people can't afford clean clothes.

Kaitlyn Vo
Point Webster

It would be canned food for poor people. They are not as lucky as a lot of people. For example I can buy tons of food at the grocery store while poor people starve. So that's why I would get them food.

Christine Loney

Registry Of Deeds Toys For Tots Drive Success

The 9th annual Marine Corp Reserve Toys for Tots Drive at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds was a great success, according to Register Bill O'Donnell.

"Every year people come by, and are so generous in their giving. This year we had a great bunch of gifts ranging from stuffed animals to footballs to board games," O'Donnell said.

Many people donated presents by dropping off gifts to the Registry. On hand to deliver the toys with Register O'Donnell were Norfolk County Commissioners Joe Shea of Quincy and Fran O'Brien of Dedham.

O'Donnell expressed his gratitude for the generosity of Registry of Deeds employees, title examiners, attorneys and many Norfolk County residents for contributing to the Toys for Tots Drive.

"I would like to thank everyone for making the event such a wonderful success. Additionally, we are truly honored to partner with the Marine Corps Reserve in their annual toy drive which helps makes the holiday brighter for millions of children each year," O'Donnell said.

OBITUARY

William F. Joyce, 79

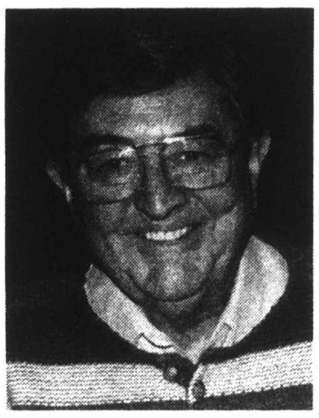
A memorial service for William Francis Joyce, 79, of Plymouth and formerly Quincy was held yesterday (Tuesday) in Davis Funeral & Cremation Home, Plymouth.

Mr. Joyce died Dec. 19 at home surrounded by his beloved family.

He was the devoted husband of Carol Joan (Sabean) Joyce. Born in Quincy on Jan. 26, 1936, he was the son of the late William F. and Dorothy P. (Murphy) Joyce. He was educated in Quincy, a graduate of Quincy High School with the Class of 1954.

Following his education, Mr. Joyce enlisted in the U.S. Navy where he served proudly on the USS Willis A. Lee during the Korean Conflict. He worked for most of his life as the owner and president of Boston Tramrail Company until retiring more than 10 years ago. He had moved to Plymouth three years ago, previously residing in Middleborough and Weymouth.

He enjoyed working on crossword puzzles, gardening, singing, and listening to music. In earlier years he loved playing basketball and tennis as well as coaching youth sports.



WILLIAM F. JOYCE

Besides leaving his wife Carol, to whom he would have celebrated 60 years of marriage in May 2016, he was the loving father of Christine Joyce Clark and her husband William of Gloucester and was predeceased by his son Stephen William Joyce of Whitman. He was the beloved brother of Marylou Joyce of Plymouth and the late Priscilla Abate of Kingston. He also leaves his cherished grandchildren Avery, Zachary, and Emily.

Memorial donations may be made to the Make a Wish Foundation at wish.org.

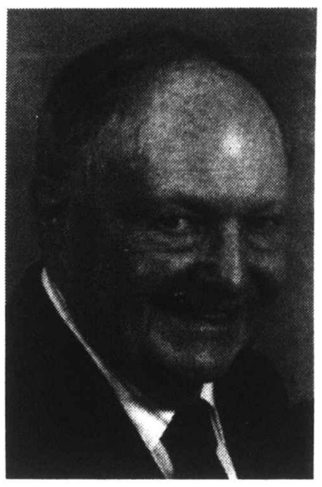
John D. Salenius, 87



JOHN D. SALENIUS

A funeral Mass for John D. Salenius, 87, of Quincy was celebrated yesterday (Tuesday) in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mr. Salenius died Dec. 18 surrounded by his loving family.

Beloved husband of 64 years to Lois (Hayden) Salenius. Cherished father of Kathleen, James, Maryann and the late Jack, Joseph and Elizabeth. Loving brother of Carol. Also survived by several grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Born and raised in Boston, Mr. Salenius served in the Army National Guard for several years. He worked for Boston Edison for more than 40 years. He was permanent deacon at Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy as well a member of the Third Order of St. Francis.

Mr. Salenius dedicated his life in service to others. His faith and his family were the foundation of all that was truly important to him. He will be sadly missed.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Interment at Old Calvary Cemetery, Boston.

Burial in Old Calvary Cemetery, Boston.

Memorial donations may be made to VNA Care Network & Hospice, 199 Rosewood Drive, Suite 180, Danvers, MA 01923.

Hilda A. Kecati, 95

A funeral Mass for Hilda A. Kecati, 95, of Quincy was celebrated Monday in St. Joseph's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Kecati died Dec. 17.

A native of Egypt who spoke four languages, she immigrated to the U.S. about 50 years ago and settled in Brookline. On first arriving, she made her living as a talented artist, eventually becoming an investigator for the Massachusetts Department of Revenue, a job she held for 15 years.

In 2007, she moved to 1000 Southern Artery where she made many friends and continued her creativity, painting, sewing and knitting.

The wife of the late Michael Kecati, she is survived by her brother Mario Gastaldello of France, her nephews Christian Gastaldello and Charles Gastaldello of London, Patrick, Jean-Luc and Philippe Gastaldello of France and her friends at 1000, including her dearest friend Helga Collins and her family.

Interment at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Arrangements were made by Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St., Quincy.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A hectic period begins to wind down. Take time to draw some deep breaths and relax before getting into your next project. A long-absent family member makes contact.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're eager to move forward with a new challenge that suddenly dropped in your lap. But you'd be wise to take this one step at a time to allow new developments to come through.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're almost ready to make a commitment. A lingering doubt or two, however, should be resolved before you move ahead. An associate could provide important answers.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Caution is still the watchword as you move closer toward a decision about a new situation. If you act too fast, you might miss some vital warning signs. Go slowly and stay alert.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your new goal looks promising, and your golden touch does much to enhance its prospects for success. In your private life, Cupid does his best to make your new relationship special.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That impatient side of yours is looking to goad you into moving before you're ready to take that big step. Stay calm and cool. Let things fall into place before you act.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A legal matter you hoped could finally be settled could be a pesky problem for a while, until all the parties agree to stop disagreeing with each other. Be patient.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Partnerships -- personal or professional -- which began before the new year take on new importance. They also reveal some previously hidden risks. So be warned.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your associates are firmly on your side, and that persistent problem that has caused you to delay some activities should soon be resolved to your satisfaction.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Favorable changes continue to dominate, and you should be responding positively as they emerge. Someone wants to become more involved in what you're doing.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A friend wants to share a secret that could answer some questions you've wondered about for a long time. Meanwhile, travel aspects continue to be strong.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Stay on your new course despite so-called well-meaning efforts to discourage you. Rely on your deep sense of self-awareness to guide you to do what's right for you.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have the capacity to meet challenges that others might find overwhelming, and turn them into successful ventures.

then ran some more. The Presidents had 22 fast-break points, 12 in the first half when they opened a 34-16 lead. Munroe and Kamalu started them with the outlet, Quinlan Evans (10 points) and Setalsingh were the triggermen in the middle and St. Louis and Kamalu put on the exclamation point with athletic finishes.

The striking part of it all was how clean the Presidents were on break. It was only the third game of the season, and teams that are just learning how to run typically make a fistful mistakes in early-season contests. Quincy was sure and steady with the ball on the break, especially in the first half.

There were two memorable passing sequences. One went from Munroe to Evans to Mele to St. Louis for an easy layup. The second covered the whole floor with Mele, Evans, Setalsingh whipping checkerboard passes for a Kamalu bucket. In each case the ball barely touched the floor.

"We work and work on fast-break drills in practice. They are unselfish, and they're starting to believe in each other. We have the speed to run," said Parry.

Quincy will use a deep bench. Ten players getting minutes before the first quarter is finished is impressive. Against Hanover, eight players scored. Against Duxbury, eight players scored. The depth and balance helped late in the game when Johnson and Evans left with fouls. Quincy had good players, who had already warmed to the pace of the game, to insert in the fourth period of a close game.

"We have a lot of players who have good individual skills and we want to find a way to use them all," said Parry.

Mele had three points and proved a player doesn't have to score to play an excellent game. He did everything well. He rebounded, dished out the ball on the break, played excellent defense against Duxbury's Nick Gearin, rebounded the ball, and slowed Duxbury's press by making accurate inbound passes in the fourth period.

"He does things that don't show up on the score-sheet, but help you win games. We wanted the ball in his hands at then end of the game," said Parry.

Duxbury's press bothered the Presidents. Remember it was the third game of the season.. Presses usually work better in Game 3 than they do in Game 13. The Dragons drew within 53-43 with 3:01left, but Kamalu took over the game. He had a fast break layup off a great feed from Evans, calmly swished four free throws and had a big-time rejection of a Duxbury drive to wrap up with win for Quincy.

"We saw a lot from their press that we need to work on. It gave us a lot of problems. We have to look up the floor better and throw the long pass over the press," said Parry. "To have a big man like Ugo who gets to the basket and makes his foul shots late in a close game is huge for us."

Quincy is at Scituate Tuesday and will participate in the BABC Holiday Tournament at Cathedral High in Boston Dec. 28.

Quincy Bows To Hanover, Rebounds At Duxbury

Earlier last week in the season opener, Hanover knocked down 10 three-pointers to build a 24-point bulge early in the third period and then held off a furious Quincy rally which cut the lead to five before escaping with a 60-50 decision at the Quincy High gym.

"We played well in the second half against Duxbury," said coach Jeff Bretsch. "I know they graduated four of their starters from last year, but it's a great program. They expect to win. They were undefeated last year. The banners are up in their gym showing they've won the league the last five years. It's a good win in their gym, a good step on our journey."

Against Duxbury, Jorgensen was in foul trouble, and the Presidents lost sophomore point guard Liana Cunningham to illness in the first half. Quincy's play was a bit sluggish and the Presidents led, 23-21 at intermission.

"We had some challenges, but we overcame them," said Bretsch. "Nicole played with discipline with three fouls, and Sarah Gibbons did a great job off the boards and making the open shot when Nicole was double-teamed."

Jorgensen had 37 points and 38 rebounds in the first two games. She took over the inside in the second half. Alyssa Camara stepped in at point guard for Cunningham and played a terrific game. She scored seven points, ran the team, and distributed the ball to the right shooters at the right time.

Gabby Jerahian had 12 and Gibbons chipped in with eight points and eight rebounds for the Presidents who upped the lead to nine after three and were not seriously threatened in the final period.

"Alyssa was really good at the point. Ariana Paulo played a good all-around game as well," said Bretsch.

There were great expectations for the Quincy vs. Hanover game. They are likely the two best teams in the league. Hanover has nine players back from its Fisher Division championship team last year. Quincy returns its top seven from the club which finished second in the Keenan last year and is a favorite to win the division this winter.

In addition, there were three players who have committed to Division 1 college programs on the floor. Jorgensen has signed to go to URI while Hanover's Stephanie Flynn (Columbia) and Haley Wardell (Drexel) will also play Division 1 ball in college. The next time three Division 1 players are on the same floor at the same time will be shortly after the stars fall from the skies.

"I can't remember when we've had one Division I player on this floor, let alone three," said Bretsch.

Despite the talent and the anticipation, this was still an opener. An opener means mistakes, turnovers, and missed shots. Quincy was a bit uncertain in the first half, and it cost the Presidents as Hanover built a 26-10 half-time lead.

The most telling number was foul shots. Quincy missed eight free throws in the first half and went 4-13 for the game. Hanover was 22-27. Toss in five threes from Megan Dixon(18 points) and four from Wardell (23), and it all came down to shooting despite the fact that Quincy outscored Hanover by four points from the field.

"They just couldn't miss, especially Dixon," said Bretsch. "I was proud of the way the kids came back. "They didn't give in. They kept playing hard. At half-time, we told them to relax, to go out and just win the second half which they did. The lead turned out to be too big to overcome."

The lead grew to 36-12 early in the third, but the comeback began, as it almost always does, on defense. Joelle Robinson and Cunningham brought energy and hustle to Quincy's press and forced turnovers which opened the door, and the Presidents stepped through.

Gibbons held Flynn (903 career points) to seven points, four of which came late in the game when Gibbons was on the bench. Quincy forced 23 turnovers. The Presidents held Hanover to one point for more than five minutes to start fourth period. The defense brought them back. The gym came alive. Quincy had a shot.

"It really started with our energy on the press. Give Liana and Joelle credit for that," said Bretsch.

Offensively, Quincy did what it does best – pound the ball inside to Jorgensen. Jorgensen (18 points, 13 rebounds), carved out open spots, pinned defenders under the hoop and demanded the ball. She had 12 of her points in the second half. Cunningham (four points, three assists), Camara (13 points, four assists), and Jerahian (eight points, five assists) hit jump shots which brought Hanover's defense out a step and cleared the passing lanes for feeds to Jorgensen.

"Nicole was much more aggressive in the second half. She really wanted the ball. She got position, and our guards did a good job getting the ball inside," said Bretsch.

Quincy scored 40 points in the second half, 25 in the final quarter. A Camara hoop drew Quincy within, 46-41 with 3:04 left, but Flynn cashed two tough lefty drives to stretch out the lead. Hanover made its free throws in the final minute to clinch the victory.

"I just wish the game were five minutes longer," said Bretsch.

A RECORD 114 inches of snow fell in Quincy during the winter of 2015 - including 85 inches during a three-week span in late January and early February. To clear streets and sidewalks, the city trucked snow to several "snow farms" incuding this one at Squantum Point Park. Here excavators and front-end loaders move the snow into large "mountains," some that extended 60 feet in the air. This photo was taken Feb. 27. Snowfall, Election Among Year's Top Stories

2015 The Year In Review

By SCOTT JACKSON

The year got off to an icy start with a record-breaking winter that saw nearly 10 feet of snow fall on Quincy before giving way to a fiery campaign for the first four-year mayoral term in city history.

Eighty-five inches of snow fell on the city during a three-week period in late January and early February, forcing schools to close a total of 11 days and bringing Red Line service in the city to a halt for weeks. In total, 114 inches of snow fell in Quincy during the winter of 2014-15, the most in the city's history, and the city spent $13.5 million to clean it all up.

The race for mayor featured four candidates, each of whom had citywide office in the past. September's preliminary election set up a third showdown between incumbent Mayor Thomas Koch and former Mayor William Phelan, with Koch winning for a third time in November. The November election also included four winners in other races that made history of their own – the first two residents of Asian descent elected to the City Council, the first African-American elected to the council, and the youngest resident to win a municipal race.

Plans to redevelop Quincy Center progressed throughout 2015. In March, the Planning Board approved plans for West of Chestnut, mixed-use project by Quincy Mutual and Gate Residential featuring 169 apartments and 12,000 square feet of ground floor retail and work was able to begin later that month. The Planning Board in September approved a second downtown project, a plan for 56 condos with 7,500 square feet of retail space, by developers Sean and Scott Galvin. The Galvins' project was one of three unveiled in April, along with a 15-story apartment building on the Hancock Lot and a 116-room Hancock Street hotel.

The year also saw the rise and fall of Boston's bid to host the 2024 Summer Olympics, including a planned venue at Squantum Point Park; the completion of restoration work at the James R. McIntyre Govern-

Inaugural Ceremonies

Koch To Take Oath For 1st 4-Year Mayoral Term Monday

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch plans to focus on the future – including infrastructure, public safety and education – when he is sworn into a new term Monday.

Koch will begin his fifth term as mayor – and the first four-year mayoral term in Quincy's history – when he is inaugurated during the Jan. 4 ceremony. The inauguration begins at 10 a.m. and is being held inside the Great Hall of the newly restored James R. McIntyre Government Center.

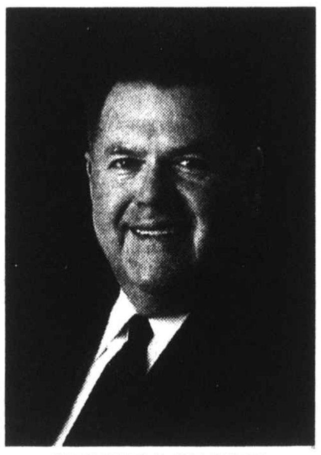
Special Election To Fill McNamee's Seat

Longtime Ward 6 Councillor Loses Brief Bout With Cancer

By SCOTT JACKSON

A special election will be held this spring to fill the City Council seat vacated by the death of longtime Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee.

City Clerk Joseph Shea on Monday said the special election would be held in April, possibly either April 12 or 19, and a preliminary election, if necessary, would take place in March. Shea said he hopes to schedule the preliminary for March 1, the same date as the state's presidential primary, to help boost turnout but is awaiting approval to do so from state officials.



BRIAN McNAMEE

The council will approve the dates for the special election at its first meeting of the year on Jan. 19; Shea will recommend the schedule for the election. The Secretary of the Commonwealth's Office must also approve the schedule for the special election.

Candidates running in the election will need to gather the signatures of 50 residents of Ward 6 to qualify for the ballot, the same requirement candidates for ward seats must fulfill in regular municipal elections. Shea said nomination papers would be available at his office in late January, once the council approves dates for the special election. Those papers would need to be returned to the clerk in mid-February.

Mr. McNamee died Dec. 23 following a brief battle with cancer. A 59-year-old Newbury Avenue resident, Mr. McNamee was first elected to the council in 2005 and was re-elected to a sixth term in November.

Ward 6 includes Squantum, Marina Bay and portions of North Quincy and Wollaston.

Downtown Projects, Garage Before Council Soon

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council could be asked to review land disposition agreements for two downtown projects and plans for a new municipally owned parking garage as soon as February or March, Mayor Thomas Koch said in a recent interview.

The two projects the council will need to vet are a planned 15-story, 122-unit unit luxury high rise with retail space on the first floor and a six-story, 116-room hotel building with an indoor pool, restaurant/bar, and conference center.

Peter O'Connell, the Quincy developer behind Marina Bay and Granite Links, has proposed the $45 million tower project, which would be located on a portion of the Hancock Lot. LBC Boston, based out of Allston, is behind the $25 million hotel proposal, which would be situated the 1500 block of Hancock Street; a portion of the lot will be involved in the project.

The disposition of the city-owned lot for the developments requires council approval.

To make up for the parking spaces lost by the two projects, as well as future projects taking place in the Hancock Lot, Koch said the city would propose building a new parking garage on site. The new garage will hold between 600 and 700 vehicles; the lot has about 400 spaces.

The mayor said planning for the two new developments and the garage is ongoing, but would be finalized in a matter of weeks and be presented to the council in February or March.

"It's going to be weeks now. We're still [having] a lot of internal meetings. We want to make sure that we're not just reacting to one individual project; these are 50- to 100-year decisions. We have to get it right," Koch said.

"When I say that I mean the layouts, the egress, the amount of spaces in the garage, how the garage is laid out and where do you feed the egress in and out of the site; you don't want to create a traffic backup.

"That's the exercise we're going through now as we're continuing to negotiate with the individual developers – we want the best project, we want the best quality project, we want to maximize the value out of the Hancock Lot. That's what we're focused on."

The mayor said the goal would be to introduce plans for the garage at the same time as the formal plans for the two new developments, to provide a clear picture of the lot's future. Construction of the new garage and the two developments would also take place concurrently.

The administration is also formulating a parking plan to accommodate those who use the Hancock Lot while construction of the new developments and the garage takes place.

"The other thing that's going to be challenging is you're going to be trying to build a garage and you're going to have buildings going up, all at the same time– where do these people park in the interim? So we're working on some interim plans for that," Koch said, before noting the interim plan would likely involve satellite parking.

A MOST FASHIONABLE GEMSTONE

Those born in January may love their birthstone for its pomegranate-red color; however, deep red is not the only color for which garnet is known. This group of more than ten different gemstones of similar chemical composition also comes in various shades of green, a subtle to intense yellow, a fiery orange, and some earth-tone colors. The only color in which garnet does not manifest is blue. Garnet lends itself to just about any fashion trend. An experienced jeweler can help match the color to the specific name of garnet, of which there are many, including almandine, andradite, demantoid, grossularite, hessonite, pyrope, rhodolite, tsavorite, spessartine, and uvarovite. For just about any fashionable color, there is a garnet to match.

Some cultures believe garnets have properties that provide stability, grounding and courage. They also associate garnets with sexuality, bounty and fertility. Remembering Brian McNamee

Son Beams

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Seems everyone has a favorite Brian McNamee story.

For me, there are a few but each and every one showed his humorous side.

One of them recurred every fall when I called on some of the elected officials to man the community leader kettle for the Salvation Army. Brian – even when he worked on the North Shore – was adamant that he would find the time to get back to Quincy on a work day and volunteer at the kettle.

As for figuring out a time for him to ring the bell, Brian always said the same thing to me.

He'd call me on the phone and ask "Who am I ringing the bell with?"

Before I could even tell him who he was with, he'd quickly add, "Don't put with me any of my council colleagues . . . They don't like me anyway."

We both laughed and we both looked forward to seeing each other at his appointed time to talk current events especially the local political scene.

While Brian was a bit of a lone wolf on the council, it's not true that his colleagues didn't like him. Sure they clashed at times but they'd be the first to tell you that they respected him.

Brian was the lone dissenter on plenty of 8-1 votes . . . including one year he voted against the city budget in protest over the hiring of Dan Raymondi as the DPW commissioner.

Brian did more than just cast that vote. He called me the next day and insisted on taking out a full page paid ad in The Sun explaining his vote. In my nearly 30 years of working at the Sun full time, that was a first. And it will probably be the last.

But the move was quintessential Brian.

He was not a fence sitter. And he wasn't going to win "Councillor of the Year" by his peers.

But if you lived in his ward, you knew you were getting a strong advocate – a strong voice – who had no political ambitions beyond serving the neighborhoods of Squantum and North Quincy in Ward 6.

He was a worker, a doer. From the minute he decided to run for elected office in Quincy - he never quit.

His road to the council was anything but easy. He lost his first three attempts for a seat. Bruce Ayers beat him in Ward 6 in 1997. He failed to win an at-large seat in 2001. And Alicia Gardner defeated him in Ward 6 in 2003.

A lesser man may have thought "three strikes and I'm out."

But not Brian. He was just getting warmed up.

And in 2005 he finally won that coveted Ward 6 seat defeating Mark Bracken. He didn't coast in his re-election bids, either. He was re-elected five times including this past November but only once was he unopposed.

During his tenure on the council, Brian honed a reputation as an independent thinker who was well-prepared to discuss any issue. He was not afraid to step out on a political limb if he thought it was the right position for his constituents and the neighborhoods in his ward.

Colleagues in government – including Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti, Mayor Thomas Koch and Council President Joseph Finn – were among those who expressed deep condolences after Brian lost a short bout with cancer Dec. 23. He had just turned 59 years old on Dec. 3.

Bellotti called Brian "an extraordinary public servant who fought for the underdog every day and never forgot why he was elected and who elected him."

McNamee was employed as the director of finance for the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office at the time of his death.

Mayor Thomas Koch, who ordered city flags to fly at half-staff Monday and Tuesday, called Brian "a passionate, tenacious fighter for the neighborhoods, including my own, he represented on the City Council.

"Agree or disagree, you always knew where you stood with Brian, and he absolutely never shied away from speaking his mind freely," the mayor said. "And to those who knew him best outside of the political arena, he was a tremendously loyal friend and a truly fascinating person, full of wonderful stories about history, music and culture. He was something of a modern day Renaissance Man, and I am deeply saddened by his passing."

Council President Joseph Finn said, "Brian clearly was a presence on the City Council and definitely will be missed."

Some like Sean Glennon were fortunate to know Brian so well they were like family. Besides being a longtime friend, Sean was also Brian's campaign manager for 10 election cycles.

Sean described Brian as a "gladiator with a heart of gold." Physically, he appeared big and strong but was more like a teddy bear. He had a firm hand shake and always looked you in the eye. His bright big smile seemed to emanate from his bigger heart.

Brian, Sean said, embodied a newspaper editorial years ago that read, "McNamee defends his Ward 6 neighborhoods like a pit bull, and if you live there, that's not a bad thing."

Brian was proud of that characterization and he lived up to it each and every day.

"A tireless advocate, he returned phone calls and emails within hours, and challenged himself to resolve constituent issues as quickly as possible," Sean said. "Brian considered outreach and public input to be a critical component of his decision-making process, and he organized over 100 community meetings over the years to give residents an opportunity to weigh in on issues that were important to them," Sean said.

Brian was also extremely well-educated and absolutely brilliant, his friend said.

"His intelligence coupled with his experience as an all-state tackle (high school football in Rhode Island) was an indomitable combination. I think he was probably the most calculated and methodical person I've ever met in my life, and once he made a decision on something, that was it.

"He was a dear friend with a great sense of humor and a robust, infectious laugh," Sean said. "I considered him to be a member of the family – as did his other friends.

"I am a better person for having known him, and I will always treasure our friendship."

Brian's passing is tragic. He left his friends, family and city much too soon.

Last week, while many of us were preparing for the joyous occasion of Christmas, some of Brian's inner circle visited him for one last time. He remained pragmatic to the end.

"Don't feel bad for me . . . none of us are getting out of this alive," he told them.

That's true but his words can't lessen the pain of his loss.

We'll miss you, Brian.

Thank you for your service to this community and your friendship to so many.

We are all better for knowing you.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On Jan. 12, 1904, Henry Ford sets a land-speed record of 91.37 mph on the frozen surface of Michigan's Lake St. Clair. His four-wheel vehicle, dubbed the "999," had a wooden chassis but no body or hood.
- On Jan. 15, 1919, fiery hot molasses floods the streets of Boston, killing 21 people and injuring scores of others. Some 2.5 million gallons of molasses burst from a huge tank when bolts holding the bottom of the tank exploded, shooting out like bullets.
- On Jan. 11, 1949, in Washington, D.C., the cornerstone is laid at the first mosque of note in the United States. The Islamic Center was built with a 160-foot minaret from which prayers were to be announced.
- On Jan. 17, 1950, in Boston, 11 men steal more than $2 million from the Brinks Armored Car depot. It was almost the perfect crime. The culprits weren't caught until January 1956, just days before the statute of limitations for the theft expired.
- On Jan. 14, 1969, an explosion aboard the aircraft carrier USS Enterprise kills 27 people in Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. A rocket accidentally detonated, destroying 15 planes and injuring more than 300 people.
- On Jan. 16, 1979, faced with an army mutiny, Mohammad Reza Shah Pahlavi, leader of Iran since 1941, is forced to flee the country. Fourteen days later, the Ayatollah Khomeini, spiritual leader of the Islamic revolution, returned after 15 years of exile and took control of Iran. In November, Islamic militants stormed the U.S. embassy and took 52 Americans hostage, holding them for 444 days.
- On Jan. 13, 1999, NBA superstar Michael Jordan announces his retirement from professional basketball for the second time, saying he had lost the drive and desire to continue playing. Jordan originally had announced his retirement in 1993.

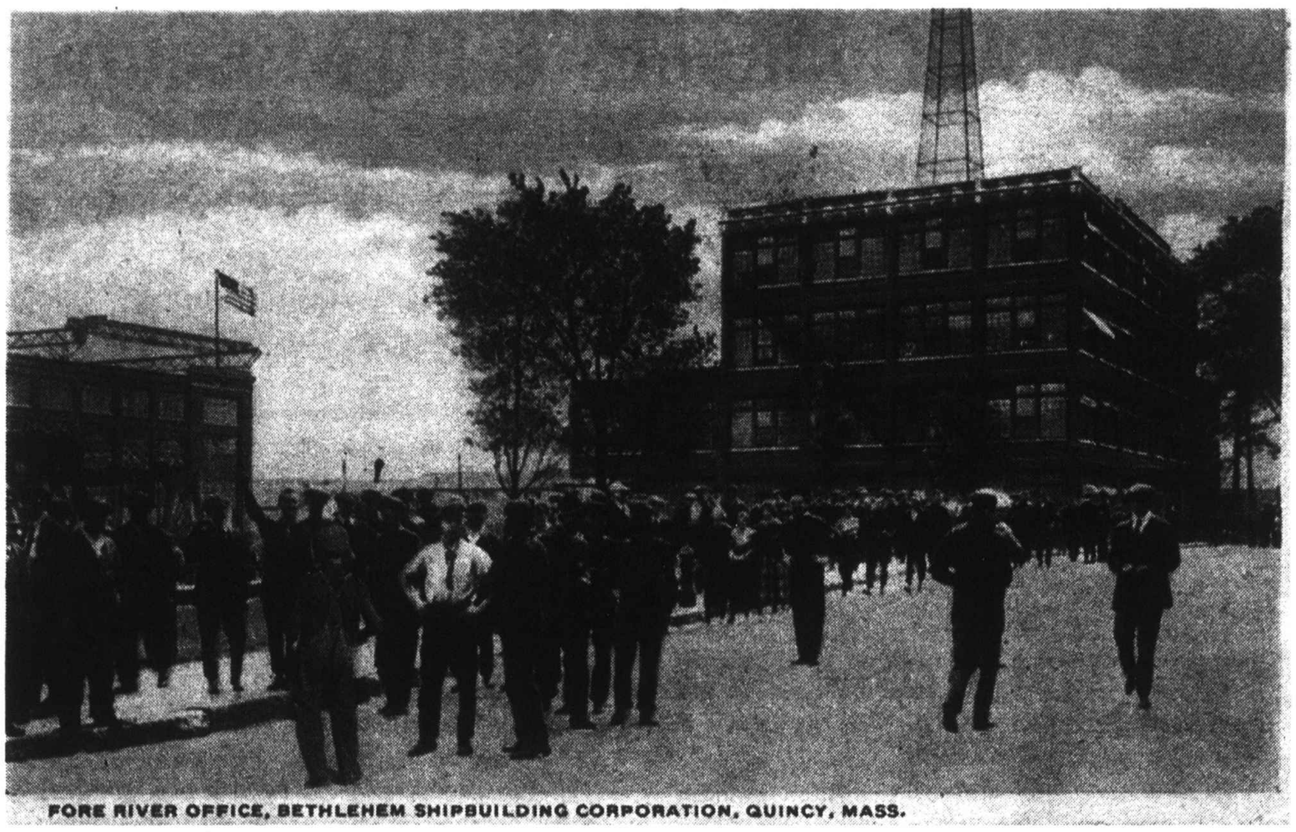
Scenes From Yesterday



FORE RIVER OFFICE, BETHLEHEM SHIPBUILDING CORPORATION, QUINCY, MASS.

THIS IS A 1922 postcard view of the Fore River Shipyard's main office on East Howard Street in Quincy Point. Bad news came to the shipyard in February of that year when the world's five major naval powers signed a treaty that placed a 10-year moratorium on the construction of battleships and heavy cruisers. Other provisions of the treaty required the United States to scuttle 30 other warships. You can only guess as to why all these people gathered at the gates of the shipyard. The personnel office was just to the left of this picture, perhaps they were collecting their last paychecks. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Quincy College To lead Nutrition/Exercise Study

By RITA LA ROSA LOUD

You may be of the opinion that it is virtually impossible to improve your body composition, especially during the winter months.

It is a period when we tend to hunker down and pack on the pounds, scoffing up delectable goodies associated with the holiday season.

At the start of the New Year, many of us head to the gym to unravel the damage done, but soon exercise is superseded by a calorie-restricted diet. Since most diet plans do not provide enough food to fuel your body properly, hunger pangs set in and you begin to overeat.

Ultimately, you end up weighing more than you did before you started, as do 95 percent of dieters. It is a counterproductive cycle indeed, but one that can be broken, if only you understood how to do so.

We shouldn't be too hard on ourselves nor should we become complacent. We gain fat weight (adipose tissue) because we are losing muscle (lean tissue) at about 5-10 pounds per decade unless we are involved in some form of resistance (strength) exercise. This loss of muscle (metabolically active tissue) leads to a 24-hour decline in our metabolism. That means we burn fewer calories and store excess fat on our bodies which results in a less than desirable body composition (too much fat, too little muscle).

Of course it would be better to attain and possess a healthy body composition with more muscle and less fat that facilitates desirable health and fitness.

Picture your home (or your body) settled on a weakening foundation without proper exercise and nutrition to support it. What do you think would happen to the construction (you)? As you surmised, the structure (your body and shape) would eventually break down and collapse. In addition, other problems may well arise, such as osteoporosis, diabetes, heart disease, arthritis, back pain, and functional decline.

It makes sense that having a strong musculoskeletal system (muscle, bones, tendons and ligaments) is paramount to experiencing a physically active lifestyle that reduces the risk of degenerative disease and debilitating injuries.

For the 70 percent of American adults who are overweight or obese, the starting point for achieving these health and fitness benefits is an exercise and nutrition program that is designed to concurrently rebuild muscle (and bone) and reduce fat.

Research has shown that these objectives can be realized if we include enough protein-rich foods in our daily diet and perform sensible resistance training.

Quincy College wants to help you strength your healthy foundation in 2016. Beginning Jan. 5th, Quincy College is conducting a six-month, highly supervised, exercise and nutrition study that should result in a lower body weight and a better body composition, as well as more desirable blood cholesterol and lower blood pressure.

The exercise program will feature muscular and cardiovascular components, and the nutrition plan will include protein-enriched meal replacement shakes. There is no cost for the exercise program, nutritional products, or health/fitness assessments for those who complete this program.

If you are interested in participating in this weight loss/body composition study, call Dr. Wayne Westcott or Rita La Rosa Loud at 617.984.1716 to reserve your seat at our Orientation Meeting, on Tuesday, Dec. 29th, 5:30 p.m. at Quincy College's Presidents Place location, 1250 Hancock Street, Quincy.

Interim Sludge Facility At Shipyard

Mayor Francis X. McCauley announced that the city of Quincy had entered into an agreement with the Mass. Water Resources Authority for an interim sludge facility at the Quincy Shipyard at least through 1995.

"We pressed the court case as far as we could," said McCauley, referring to the city's efforts against the purchase of the shipyard by the M.W.R.A.

The agreement was jointly announced by M.W.R.A. Executive Director Paul Levy, Mayor McCauley, DPW Commissioner Paul Anderson and consultant David Stanley.

McCauley and Levy said the agreement would accelerate the Boston Harbor cleanup, provide the city with tax revenue as well as eliminate planned sludge processing activities at the MWRA Nut Island Pollution Control Facility in Houghs Neck.

OVER 1,200 TOUR HISTORIC SITES FOR 'HOLIDAYS IN QUINCY'

Over 1,200 visitors toured Quincy's historical sites during this year's "Holidays in Quincy" festival.

This bi-annual event is sponsored by the Quincy Historical Society, the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, United First Parish Church and the National Park Service.

The sites decorated for the holidays included the Adams Academy Building, the Church of the Presidents, the Adams Mansion and the Josiah Quincy House. Involved were the Garden Clubs of Squantum, Wollaston and Germantown.

Point Webster Students Visit Commonwealth Museum

Eighth grade students from the Point Webster Middle School recently attended a special program at the Commonwealth Museum on Columbia Point.

Commemorating the 250th anniversary of the Stamp Tax controversy, students learned about Quincy's connection to important events in the American Revolution.

The Stamp Act required colonists to affix revenue stamps to a wide range of documents from newspapers to packages of dice and playing cards. Nathaniel Sheidley, Historian and Director of Public History at the Bostonian Society/Old State House, explained the hardship of the tax in economically depressed Massachusetts and the protests against "taxation without representation."

Revolutionary era personality "Thomas Crafts," portrayed by a Bostonian Society educator, described his role in organizing protests on the pivotal date of August 14, 1765. Mobs hung effigies of tax stamp agent Andrew Oliver from an Elm tree near Chase and Speakman's Distillery in Boston. Quickly it became known as the "Liberty Tree" and protesters began calling themselves "Sons" and "Daughters" of Liberty.

Commonwealth Museum director Stephen Kenney explained Quincy connections. The museum's "Treasures Gallery" holds an official copy of the Declaration of Independence, sent to Massachusetts during the Revolution, and signed by John Hancock. The 1780 Massachusetts Constitution, also on display, was written largely by John Adams in his south Quincy salt box farm house.

NATHANIEL SHEIDLEY of the Bostonian Society introduces Stamp Tax protester "Thomas Crafts."

Students also viewed documents from the Massachusetts Archives vaults that are not on public display, including John Hancock's 1780 Inaugural Address as Governor of Massachusetts and a Revolutionary era letter sent from Paris by John Adams and Benjamin Franklin warning of a possible British attack. John Hancock's family bible and a personal letter from Hancock to his wife Dorothy Quincy were displayed from the Bostonian Society/Old State House collection.

"This trip gave the students the amazing experience of being able to see original, one of a kind documents," said teacher Jacquie Principi. It "enhanced their understanding of the Stamp Act and the colonist's attitudes…We cannot wait to visit next year." Point Webster staff members Michelle Velez, Mike Santoro, Kim DeLisle, Michelle Kaye, and Meghann Dennehey accompanied the students.

A lobby exhibit about the Stamp Tax will be on display at the Commonwealth Museum through January. The museum is administered through the office of Secretary of the Commonwealth William Francis Galvin. It is located in the Massachusetts Archives building near the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Edward M. Kennedy Institute for the United States Senate. Admission is free.

Quincy Quarries, Granite Workers Museum Program, Meeting Jan. 6

The Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum will present at their Jan. 6th meeting two DVDs on the geology of Massachusetts including the Quincy area.

The DVDs were part of the 1995-96, Commonwealth Museum's exhibit titled "Granite Enduring Legacy of Massachusetts" that was displayed in the Massachusetts Archives Building at Columbia Point.

The DVDs were part of the focus exhibit and programs which were produced by the Commonwealth Museum. The two DVDs feature Fr. James Skehan, S. J. Geology, Professor and Director Emeritus, Boston College, discussing the granites of Massachusetts, including the Quincy area.

The DVDs were copied by the museum from the original DVDs in the archives of the Commonwealth Museum collection.

Museum member Les Tyrala, a registered geologist with extensive knowledge of the science of earth geology and well-versed in local geological past, will comment on the DVDs and answer any questions from the audience.

On display will be granite samples from many of the Quincy quarries and geological interpretive information on Massachusetts and the Quincy area including information on the location of many of the quarries of Quincy which were located in the West District and North Commons.

The meeting will be held Wednesday, Jan. 6th at 7 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

The public is welcome to attend the presentation and learn about the museum.

Explore Walking/Running Trail Jan. 9

The Park Department's Environmental Treasures program invites the public to explore the beautiful new Red Diamond walking/running trail in Faxon Park with trail creator Eagle Scout Paul Trubiano and Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall on Saturday, Jan. 9.

Participants can also enjoy nature fun facts posted along the trail and a self-guided, kid-friendly scavenger hunt. The trail is next to a new playground.

The tour will start at 2 p.m. at the first parking lot on the right up the hill from the playground. Faxon Park is off Faxon Park Road.

For more information and inclement weather rescheduling, call 617-472-0799.

Houghs Neck Garden Club Meets Jan. 6

At the Houghs Neck Garden Club's Jan. 6th meeting, members and their guests can enjoy a presentation "Houses of Houghs Neck" by noted Houghs Neck historian, Patti Williams.

Houghs Neck contains a rich mixture of unique houses. Williams will talk about some of them including a house that was a hotel, a house that was an army barracks and a house that was a stable. Some of the houses exist only as photographs, such as the group of cottages made from parts of steamships that were taken apart at Nut Island.

Williams will also describe the first house (no longer standing) built in Houghs Neck in the 1600s and what is perhaps the oldest house (still standing) in Houghs Neck. Williams is also a member of the Houghs Neck Garden Club and Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

The meeting will be held in the Community Room at Nut Island, 149 Sea St., starting at 7 p.m. with refreshments and a brief business meeting followed by the program at 7:30 p.m. Refreshments will be served by Susan Boudreau and Gail Freel.

The Club is a member of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts.

Find out more about the club by visiting the website http://hngc123.wix.com/houghsneckgardenclub/.

'How To Cook Your Life' Film Jan. 9

"How to Cook Your Life" is the second film of this season's Winter Movie Series of Cong. Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills, co-sponsored by the First Congregational Church of Milton.

The theme of the series is "Cooking Culture," and it is open to the public.

The film will be shown Saturday, Jan. 9 at 7 p.m. in Huntington Hall of the First Congregational Church, 495 Canton Ave., Milton. Doors open at 6:45 p.m. Enter through the side door entrance.

"How to Cook Your Life" features self-deprecating Zen Buddhist priest, chef, and Tessajara Bread Book author Edward Espe Brown taking over Buddhist center kitchens around the world to school viewers in the joys of organic cooking.

The donation for admission to the film is $3 per person or two for $5 in advance, $4 per person at the door, and the public is invited. More 5th Grade Holiday Wishes

Editor's Note:

Several grade five students from the Bernazzani School were absent when their classmates responded to the classroom assignment for the Quincy Sun: "If I Could Give One Wish This Holiday Season, It Would Be . . ."

We are printing their responses in The Sun this week since they were forwarded to us after the Sun went to press last Monday.

Here are their holiday wishes:

Norah Cronin: If I could give one wish this holiday season it would be clothes for homeless people, because they don't have a lot of money to buy them.

Curtis Ru: If I could give one wish this holiday season it would be warm clothes for people who don't have a lot.

Wei Dai: If I could give one wish this holiday season it would be sneakers for my mom.

Quincy Residents Recognized For Serving Veterans Through Senior Corps

Norfolk County Commissioners and Norfolk County RSVP Volunteer Program recently honored Quincy residents Jake Comer, Steve Greene, Joe Leason and Peter Pechulis for their outstanding volunteer service driving veterans in need to medical appointments and for distributing food at the Interfaith Social Services Food Pantry.

Some 40 Norfolk County residents were recognized with special pins as veterans who have supporting veterans and military families at the event which featured a National Veterans Corps pin presentation. Norfolk County RSVP is collaborating with the Corporation for National and Community Service (CNCS), the federal agency that administers AmeriCorps and Senior Corps, to recognize these dedicated individuals as members of the National Veterans Corps, as part of a larger effort to raise awareness of the value veterans bring to communities.

Speakers at the event included Norfolk County Commissioner Francis O'Brien, state Sen. Michael Rush and state Rep. Paul McMurtry. Presentation of Colors was conducted by the Norfolk County Sheriff's Color Guard, courtesy of Sheriff Michael Bellotti.

Leading the singing of the National Anthem was Norfolk County Register of Probate Patrick McDermott.

Apple Coconut Cake

By MARIE

I recently came across an apple cake recipe that was a little different and a big hit with family and friends.

You will love it's unique festive flavor.

APPLE COCONUT CAKE

3 cups all-purpose flour
1 tsp. baking soda
½ tsp. salt
1 ½ cups vegetable oil
2 cups sugar
3 large eggs
3 cups chopped apples (about 3 medium apples washed and peeled)
2 tsp vanilla extract
2 tsp ground cinnamon
1/4 tsp. nutmeg
½ cup coconut (or raisins if preferred)
1 cup chopped walnuts (optional)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease a bunt pan. Mix the oil and sugar until blended. Add the 3 eggs one at a time and mix well, then add vanilla until blended.

Add the flour, baking soda and salt mix well. Add apples, cinnamon and nutmeg. Add coconut (or raisins)(add nuts if you are using them) mix until everything looks well blended.

Pour into bunt pan and bake for about 1 hour and 20 minutes or 90 minutes or until toothpick comes out clean.

Breakfast Sausage

By SUZIE

Here is another recipe from Elana's Pantry for a quick, healthy and completely delicious breakfast sausage. It will take you just about 5 minutes to prepare and 10 minutes at the most to cook.

If you make the patties the night before, all you have to do is cook them up in the morning. The kids love these with eggs, toast, and fruit. Sometimes I just make these with an English muffin and they are good to go.

Loaded with healthy protein and seasonings, these are sure to be a winner. Who knew cooking healthy good be so easy and delicious!?

Ingredients:

1 1/2 pounds organic ground turkey
2 tablespoons minced fresh sage
1 tablespoon minced fresh rosemary
1 tablespoon honey
1 1/2 teaspoons sea salt
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1 tablespoon olive oil

Directions:

In a large bowl, combine the ground meat, sage, rosemary, oil, honey, salt, and pepper, using your hands to mix the ingredients thoroughly.

Using a 1/3-cup measuring cup, form the mixture into 8 patties, each about 21/4 inches in diameter.

Heat some olive oil in a large skillet over medium-low heat. Cook the patties, turning them once and gently pressing them down to flatten, for 5 to 8 minutes per side, until golden brown and crispy. Transfer the patties to a paper towel–lined plate and serve.

Koch To Take Oath For 1st 4-Year Mayoral Term

8 Councillors, 3 School Committee Members Also Sworn In At Ceremonies Monday

augural address, the City Council and School Committee will hold their respective organizational meetings. Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes is set to be elected by her colleagues as the body's president and School Committee member Paul Bregoli will be chosen by his peers as the board's vice chairman.

The mayor, in a recent interview, said having a four-year term would provide more of an opportunity to discuss the future of the city during his inaugural remarks than two-year terms did. Koch was still working on his inaugural speech, but expects to cover items that his administration has worked to address in recent years.

"A four-year term allows you to talk a little bit more about the future, because you've got four years, not two years," he said. "I think we'll be building on some of what we've actually been doing over the last couple of years – talking more about some of the similar themes – but surely more of a plan going forward related to infrastructure, education, public safety and all those areas – streets, sidewalks, et cetera."

Koch, during his most recent midterm address in January 2015, had said he was in the process of putting together a five-year plan to address the city's capital needs. The capital improvement plan has yet to be released, however, as a result of last winter's record-breaking snowfall.

The mayor said his administration is working on a new capital plan, which will look at "all municipal assets," including buildings, surface and subsurface infrastructure, and equipment.

"It is in the works. We're going to really get into that in more detail and more depth because of the four-year term," Koch said. "You can really talk about five- and ten-year capital programs when you have a four-year term. When you have a two-year term it's tough to get that far along in a conversation because it's awfully presumptuous of you to be talking about something six years out when you may not even be there. I'm sensitive to that, but with the four-year term I think it makes perfect sense to be laying these things out."

Koch did not have an estimate on the total cost of the new capital improvement plan. He did note the cost would be spread out over the length of the plan, as opposed to being borne out all out once. The cost of some items could be paid for using bonds while other items would be paid out of free cash.

As mayor, Koch said part of his job is to be the "custodian of municipal assets." If items go unaddressed now, it could cost the city more in the long run, he stated.

"You've got to spend money to maintain these municipal buildings and if you don't it's going to cost a lot more money down the road. That's what I try to remind people of," Koch said. "You pay now or you pay later – that old adage is so true. You pay a lot more when you let it go too long."

As part of the capital program, the city is looking at the condition of its police headquarters and eight firehouses to see if major repairs, or possibly replacements, are needed.

"We're going to be looking at all of them. We're going to be looking at the police station, the firehouses," Koch said. "We're doing some work now to some of the firehouses – repointing. We've been doing some work here and there but some of them need some major work, including the police station, which is a shame because it's not that old. It's easy to second-guess, I know, but I think everyone would have liked to probably have done a different thing at the time the police station was redone."

The Quincy Police Department building, at the corner of Sea Street and Southern Artery, was built in the 1920s and underwent a major renovation in the late 1980s. Koch said the building has structural and roof issues as well as problems with its HVAC systems.

"It's not really friendly to the public," the mayor added. "There are a lot of challenges to that building.

"I don't want to second guess decision makers – I'm sure some will do it to me years from now, it's always easy to look back – but I think a new facility at the time probably would have been more of an investment. We wouldn't have to be dealing with it again now had they gone a different route."

Koch said he likes the building's current placement because it provides quick access to major roads, but the location will be looked at as part of a study of planned improvements to the Sea Street corridor.

"I think it's a great location – you can get to a lot of places pretty quickly because of the main thoroughfares you're on – but we're going to take a real hard look at it," Koch said. "We took a cursory look at it last year but we need to take a real hard look at it as well as that whole traffic issue.

"Right now we're going through a process where Sea Street is being looked at from Palmer Street up to Quincy Shore Drive. We're looking at it, in partnership with the state, all the way up to Southern Artery. The 3A traffic we deal with at the commuting hours is very challenging, so we have to try to figure that out."

The mayor doesn't anticipate significant changes to staffing levels at the Fire or Police Departments, or in the Quincy Public Schools, in his budget for fiscal year 2017, which begins July 1. The proposed budget will be unveiled in the spring.

"I see it about the same. I don't see any major changes," Koch said. "We'd like to build up a little bit more perhaps in the Fire Department someday; it would be nice to have that rescue service in all the time, but that's a big commitment dollar-wise.

"A couple years ago we added ten patrolmen because we felt in these times we're in that was really the area we wanted to concentrate on because you can never have enough policemen, in a sense. You can never forget where we live and our proximity to Boston; we're susceptible to issues so we want to stay on top of it, stay ahead of it and I think we've done that for the most part."

Ideally, Koch said he would like to include funds for street replacement in the new budget to match the Chapter 90 money the city receives annually from the state; Quincy has received upwards of $1.9 million in recent years. Koch said the amount the city is able to include in its budget is dependent on several factors, including how much is spent on snow and ice removal this winter.

"One of my goals in the next budget is to have street money in there to match the state Chapter 90 [funds] we get," the mayor said. "That's one of the goals for the upcoming budget so we can get more streets done. There is just a lot of need out there."

As he said in an October interview, Koch also plans to include in the budget a "drug czar" who would coordinate efforts already being undertaken by other municipal departments and organizations in the city. That person would be tasked with allocating mitigation funds the city will receive from a planned medical marijuana dispensary on Ricciuti Drive and looking for grant money, among other roles. The position would be paid out of the mitigation money from the dispensary.

Walk Of Names In New Downtown Park

4,000 Original Bricks Will Be Replaced With New Engraved Ones, Koch Says

By SCOTT JACKSON

The planned park in Quincy Center City Hall and the United First Parish Church may not have an official name yet, but it will include thousands of engraved bricks collectively known as the Walk of Names.

Some 4,000 bricks, purchased by residents for $50 each, had been installed outside City Hall in the 1990s to create the original Walk of Names. The original bricks were removed in 2013 as the city began a restoration project at the James R. McIntyre Government Center and have been in storage at the Department of Public Works headquarters on Sea Street ever since.

Next year, when work on the yet-to-be-named park begins, Mayor Thomas Koch said the first step the public will notice is the replacement of the Walk of Names and the re-installation of the large granite ball. New bricks will be installed in place of the old ones, which were weathered and worn over the course of two decades.

"The old bricks are old. Some of them chipped. Some of them are faded. They've been beaten up," Koch said. "The plan is really the first phase of the new park would be the Walk of Names – bringing the ball back as a centerpiece, putting the walk of names in – that will be the first visible phase of the park.

"I hope to be tackling that in 2016 as an early phase of the park."

The new Walk of Names will be located in front of the glass annex building and adjacent to the James R. McIntyre Government Center, in the same spot the previous Walk of Names was located for 20 years.

Other alternatives had been discussed as the design of the new park progressed, Koch explained, including placing all of the names engraved on a series of stanchions.

"Nobody got a warm fuzzy feeling with it, so we went back to whole brick thing," he said.

The bricks removed from the city hall plaza were placed in shrink-wrap once brought to the DPW headquarters. Residents who purchased a brick will have the option of taking the original one home, Koch said.

The new park will connect the historic church with city hall. To accomplish that, the portion of Hancock Street between the two buildings must first close. The mayor anticipates the closure happening in "mid to late spring," at which time traffic will flow in both directions around the church.

Utility lines under the portion of Hancock Street will be upgraded following the road closure.

"All the utilities that run under there today, they're all old whether it's water, sewer, drain, Verizon or National Grid – all that has to be dealt with because you don't want to build a beautiful park and then in a year you're ripping everything up because the water main broke or the sewer is crushed or the telephone company wants to replace their lines," Koch explained.

"All that needs to be coordinated and get done ahead of time so once the park is done nobody is touching it for a long, long time."

The new park was initially known as Adams Green when plans for it were first unveiled. Koch, however, has said he also wants to honor John Hancock by including his name in the park as well.

A new name has not yet been decided upon.

The park will feature bronze statues of both its namesakes, John Adams and John Hancock, located on opposite sides of the park along the 18-foot-wide promenade that will run north to south through the park roughly where Hancock Street is now located.

Sergey Eylanbekov was commissioned to design the two new sculptures. He was one of 78 artists who entered submissions to design those sculptures; a committee of local art experts and historians vetted the applicants.

Eylanbekov, who resides on Long Island and in Italy, is a fellow of the National Sculpture Society and has served on its board of directors. The 55-year-old Russian native began sculpting at the age of 13.

The sculptor is still working on the clay forms for both statues, Koch said. Once Eylanbekov is finished with the clay models, the statues will be cast in bronze. The mayor anticipates the statues being completed and delivered to the city this spring; they will be placed in storage until their installation in the new park.

The ABC's Of ZZZ's

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Sleep plays a vital role in good health and well-being throughout your life. Getting enough quality sleep at the right times can help protect your mental and physical health, quality of life, and safety. During sleep, your body is working to support healthy brain function and preserve your physical health. In children and teens, sleep also helps support growth and development. The damage from sleep deficiency can occur instantaneous (such as a car crash), or it can harm you over time. Ongoing sleep insufficiency can raise your risk for some chronic health problems, affect how well you think, react, work, learn, and relate to others. If you're sleep deficient, you may have trouble making decisions, deciphering problems, controlling your emotions and behavior, and adjusting to change. Sleep deficiency also has been linked to depression, suicide, and risk-taking behavior.

While you're sleeping, your brain is preparing for the next day and forming new pathways to help you learn and remember information. Children and teens who are sleep deficient may feel annoyed and impulsive, have mood swings, feel sad or depressed, or lack motivation. They also may have problems paying attention, experience more stress and get lower grades.

Sleep is involved in healing and repair of your heart and blood vessels. Ongoing sleep deficiency is linked to an increased risk of heart disease, kidney disease, high blood pressure, diabetes, and stroke. Sleep deficiency also increases the risk of obesity. Sleep helps maintain a healthy balance of the hormones that make you feel hungry (ghrelin) or full (leptin). When you don't get enough sleep, your level of ghrelin goes up and your level of leptin goes down. This makes you feel hungrier than if you were well-rested. Sleep also affects how your body reacts to insulin, the hormone that controls your blood glucose (sugar) level. Sleep deficiency results in a higher than normal blood sugar level, which may increase your risk for diabetes. Deep sleep is essential because it triggers the body to release the hormone that promotes normal growth in children and teens. This hormone also boosts muscle mass and helps repair cells and tissues in children, teens, and adults. Sleep also plays a role in puberty and fertility. Your immune system relies on sleep to stay healthy. This system defends your body against foreign or harmful substances. Ongoing sleep deficiency can alter the way in which your immune system responds, if you're sleep deficient; you may have difficulty fighting common infections.

RUTH JONES

After several nights of losing sleep—even a loss of just 1–2 hours per night—your ability to perform suffers as if you haven't slept at all for a day or two. Lack of sleep also may lead to a condition referred to as Microsleep. Microsleep refers to brief moments of sleep that occur when you're normally awake. You can't control Microsleep, and you might not be cognizant of it even transpiring.

Studies show, that sleep deficiency harms your driving ability as much as, or more than, being intoxicated. It's estimated that driver sleepiness is a factor in about 100,000 car accidents each year, resulting in about 1,500 deaths. Drivers aren't the only ones affected by sleep deficiency. It can affect people in all lines of work, including health care workers, pilots, students, lawyers, mechanics, and assembly line workers. As a result, sleep deficiency is not only damaging on a personal level, but it also can cause large-scale injuries. The amount of sleep you need each day will vary over the course of your life. Although sleep needs fluctuate from person to person, these are the general recommendations for different age groups:

Newborns 16–18 hours a day

Preschool-aged children 11–12 hours a day

School-aged children At least 10 hours a day

Teens 9–10 hours a day

Adults (including the elderly) 7–8 hours a day

Sleeping when your body is ready to sleep is also extremely important. Sleep deficiency can affect people even when they sleep the total number of hours recommended for their age group. For example, people whose sleep is out of sync with their body clocks, such as shift workers, or routinely interrupted such as caregivers or emergency responders, might need to pay special consideration to their sleep needs. Certain medical conditions have been linked to sleep disorders including; heart failure, heart disease, obesity, diabetes, high blood pressure, stroke or transient ischemic attack (mini-stroke), depression, and attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD).

Health care providers can diagnose some sleep disorders by inquiring about sleep schedules and habits and by getting information from sleep partners or parents. To diagnose other sleep disorders, providers may also use the results from sleep studies and other medical tests. A physical exam is also usually performed to rule out other medical problems that might interfere with sleep, including blood tests to check for thyroid problems or other conditions that can cause sleep difficulties.

To improve your sleep habits:

•Go to bed and wake up at the same time every day. For children, have a set bedtime and a bedtime routine. Don't use the child's bedroom for timeouts or punishment.

•Try to keep the same sleep schedule on weeknights and weekends. Take a hot bath or use relaxation techniques before bed.

•Use the hour before bed for quiet time. Avoid strenuous exercise and bright artificial light, such as from a TV or computer screen. The light may signal the brain that it's time to be awake. Keep your bedroom quiet, cool, and dark.

•Avoid heavy and/or large meals and alcoholic drinks within a couple hours of bedtime.

•Avoid nicotine and caffeine. Nicotine and caffeine are stimulants, and both substances can interfere with sleep. The effects of caffeine can last as long as 8 hours

•Spend time outside every day and be physically active.

Three Red Door Agents Honored With Sales, Service Awards

During Red Door Real Estate's company holiday party, three agents were awarded with top honors which also included a cash bonus.

The agents qualified for the awards based on their sales volume, average sale price and customer reviews.

Sam Rounseville, a 22+ year veteran realtor, was presented with the prestigious Top Producer Award for selling close to $6 million in real estate in 2015. Rounseville has been a consistent top producing agent and is a well-known public figure in Quincy.

During the award presentation, Rounseville brought up his wife Jean Kenney to recognize her for all of her help and support, which has greatly aided in his success.

Sandra Fennelly was presented with an award for achieving the Highest Average Sales Price of $401,000 which is three percent higher than Quincy's average sale price of $391,000.

Christos Drovatzikas was presented with the Quality Service Award for providing outstanding service throughout the year.

"It is one thing to do a good job for your client, but to have that client take the time to write a review for you afterwards, you know he must be doing something right," said Madelene Cheney Broker/Owner of Red Door Real Estate. "Christos has such a great rapport with every one of his clients; I am not surprised that he was the recipient of the Quality Service Award."

Red Door Real Estate will soon begin its sixth year in business and consistently ranks in the top 10 for real estate companies in Quincy. Currently Red Door employs 20 agents with a diverse range of knowledge and experience.

Red Door Real Estate is a family-owned independent real estate company located at 222 Sea St., Quincy. For more information on these agents of the company visit www.RedDoor-RE.com.

Beachcomber's Liquor License Transferred To Investors Group

By SCOTT JACKSON

The business assets of the Beachcomber, including the venue's liquor license, have been sold to a group of local investors though there are no immediate plans for the future of the site.

The Board of License Commissioners on Dec. 22 approved the transfer of the Beachcomber's all alcohol license to Beachcomber Bounty Inc., a group of investors led by Quincy resident Christopher Carrigg. Ed Fleming, the attorney representing the investors, said Beachcomber Bounty was in the process of purchasing the business assets of the former nightclub.

"Mr. Carrigg and his partners don't presently intend right now – as they're looking at a number of different options for the re-use of the site – to operate the existing Beachcomber building for restaurant or bar use," Fleming said. "Those options include the possibility of operating a new restaurant at that location or on the property itself, but they're also looking at other potential re-uses of the land."

The Beachcomber, located at 797 Quincy Shore Dr., is located in a Residential A zoning district. Because of that, Fleming noted, future plans for the site would require review from the Inspectional Services Department and possibly the Zoning Board of Appeals and/or the Planning Board. Fleming said the group would also appear before the licensing board if a restaurant or bar were planned for the site.

The Beachcomber opened its doors in 1959 and closed this fall after 56 years in the business.

The Board of License Commissioners also renewed the liquor licenses held by the Morrisette American Legion Post and Quincy Yacht Club after both organizations provided updated paperwork to the board. Similar renewals for the Knights of Columbus, the Rural Lodge of Masons and the South Quincy Social Club were continued to Jan. 12 to allow those groups time to complete their paperwork.

The beer and wine license held by Mandarin King, 656 Washington St., was revoked. City Clerk Joseph Shea, the board's chairman, said the restaurant voluntarily decided to relinquish its liquor license but will remain open.

The board also revoked the all alcohol license previously held by Zona Sul at 1506 Washington St. Shea said the license was revoked because the establishment is no longer in business.

The board additionally approved the request of Masoud S. Buisir, doing business as ND Garage, for a garage/repair license at 571 Hancock St. Buisir said he had leased out the garage at the site to another business and will now be operating the garage on his own.

First-Time Homebuyers Workshop Jan. 23, 30 At Winter Gardens

Mayor Calls For Renewed Fight Against Substance Abuse

2015 The Year In Review

ment Center more than four years after it closed to the public; the demolition of the Long Island Bridge; and continued progress on plans to replace the aging Sterling Middle School and the start of work to enhance North Quincy High's campus.

Here is a month-by-month recap of the people, places and events that made 2015 a year to remember.

JANUARY

Mayor Thomas Koch, delivering his fourth mid-term address, called for a renewed sense of purpose in the fight against substance abuse as Quincy and communities across the South Shore and beyond see an increase in opioid overdoses.

"Think about it, this year in our country there was a scare with Ebola. There were three cases confirmed in our country and it dominated the news each and every night, night after night, week after week. Yet, everyday across this country we lose 115 young people to drugs. Every day. Where is the outcry? Where is the outrage? It's accepted. It's a shame," Koch said.

"I don't accept it. I don't think we should accept it as a community. And I look forward to working with my colleagues in all levels of government to make a difference for our city. We need to do more."

After being re-elected to his second one-year term as City Council president, Joseph Finn said the council is a place where complex issues should be wrestled with and that the questions raised during meetings are almost as important as the solutions being brought forward.

"Be wary of anyone who proposes easy answers," Finn said. "However, no matter the issue, I believe that the Quincy City Council should be the place where complexity is wrestled with. In this context and the debate that occurs there, the questions that are asked are almost as important as the answers proposed."

A three-alarm fire on Bent Terrace in Quincy Point caused $600,000 worth of damage. The fire was believed to have started accidentally in a second floor kitchen.

City Councillor-at-large Doug Gutro and School Committee member Anne Mahoney both announced they would run for mayor; Gutro would have to vacate his seat on the council to do so. Incumbent Mayor Thomas Koch said he expected to seek re-election, but would hold off on an official announcement for several weeks.

Sen. John Keenan said lawmakers on Beacon Hill were crafting legislation aimed at the opioid epidemic. The legislation's goal would be to limit the number of prescription painkillers available.

Rep. Bruce Ayers filed four pieces of legislation related to Long Island as the city of Boston prepared to raze the 64-year-old bridge connecting the island to land.

Quincy Mutual executives reiterated their commitment to following through on a plan to build 169 apartments and 12,000 square feet of retail space in Quincy Center, which they hoped would jumpstart private redevelopment in the downtown.

"There is not a doubt in our mind that this is going to go up," said James Moran, a vice president with the company. "We're committed to it."

Koch said up to 700 houses would be removed from federally designated flood plains following the city's appeal of FEMA flood maps issued in 2014. An additional 1,000 homes would be placed into lower risk zones, allowing property owners to pay less in premiums. FEMA's final maps were to be issued later in the year.

Julian T. Tynes, former chairman and commissioner of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination, was the keynote speaker at the South Shore YMCA's annual Martin Luther King, Jr., breakfast at the Germantown Neighborhood Center. He described the late civil rights activist as a man who "helped lead a movement of ordinary people doing extraordinary things."

A time capsule was placed inside the altar at Faith Lutheran Church, where it will remain until 2089 – the 200th anniversary of the congregation's founding.

School Committee member Paul Bregoli, a longtime educator and coach, said a more intensive curriculum about teen dating violence was needed in the school system and hoped to use grants from the Norfolk District Attorney's Office to fund those programs.

"I think it's an important topic. I don't think we've done enough," Bregoli said. "I think it needs to be a more powerful message."

The Quincy Housing Authority's board of commissioners tapped James Marathas to fill the newly created position of director of facilities. Marathas had served as the director of facilities management for state's Department of Housing and Community Development, the same agency that conducted sweeping inspection of QHA properties in 2014 after maintenance deficiencies were found.

George Bouchard, an Army veteran and past commander of both the Quincy Veterans Council and Morrisette American Legion Post, was appointed the city's new graves registration officer within the Department of Veterans Services.

Ted Stevenson, who won 149 games as North Quincy High's boys' basketball coach and scored 19 points per game as a player there, was honored with a plaque inside the school's gym.

Snowstorms Wallop City elected chairwoman of the Massachusetts Republican Party.

A late January nor'easter left Quincy under 24.5 inches of snow, according to National Weather Service reports. The snow began the afternoon of Jan. 26 and continued through the next day. The snow forced the closure of Quincy schools from Jan. 27 through the end of the month.

The National Weather Service confirmed the nor'easter was officially a blizzard, becoming only the second blizzard to hit Greater Boston since the Blizzard of 1978, after the one that struck in February 2013. At Logan Airport, 24.6 inches fell during the storm, the most snow ever for a January storm in Boston's history.

Deaths during January included:

Francis X. Bellotti, Jr., 64, an employee for the Secretary of State's Office; Leo F. Burns III, 55, retired Boston firefighter; Grace H. Granahan, a Gold Star Mother; Paul D. Flaherty, retired Boston police sergeant; Helen L. Duffy, 81, retired secretary for the Department of Public Works; Sam Ameen, 87, retired Quincy and MDC police officer; Richard B. Fennelly, retired Quincy firefighter; Richard L. DiCesare, 79, retired Quincy firefighter; and the Rev. Dr. Eugene A. Langevin, 75, who ministered at the First Church of Squantum.

FEBRUARY

The city was walloped again and again by winter storms – a Feb. 2 storm dumped 16 inches on the city, a storm that began Feb. 7 and continued through the early morning hours of Feb. 10 left 27 inches in its wake, and a storm the following weekend dropped another 16.5 inches. The three February storms and the late January blizzard combined to leave the city under 88.5 inches of snow, the highest total for any 30-day stretch in Quincy's history.

"The problem is there is nowhere to put it," Mayor Thomas Koch said. "The real challenge is to get as much removed as we possibly can."

The weight of the snow caused several building and roof collapses, including one at the Fore River Shipyard, at a commercial plaza at 550 Adams St., and an unoccupied building on Garfield Street. One snow-related death was reported after a Wollaston resident suffered a heart attack while shoveling.

School officials were forced to cancel 11 days of classes between January and February, which would have pushed the final day for most students to July 1. The severe snowfall also led to widespread service interruptions on the MBTA, including Braintree branch of the Red Line, which was shutdown for more than a week as crews removed snow from the tracks.

City officials designated dozens of snow-choked streets temporary one-way roads as removal efforts continued around the clock. National Guardsmen were deployed to Quincy and other communities, helping to remove snow from roads and clearing fire hydrants.

The Phoenix House, a 64-bed, short-term detoxification facility, opened on Old Colony Avenue. The community was invited to attend an open house at the center to assuage any reservations about its presence in the neighborhood.

Peter Del Vecho – the Academy Award winning producer of the 2013 film "Frozen" – was honored by his hometown. A 1976 graduate of Quincy High, he received a brick from his alma mater and Feb. 12 was declared "Peter Del Vecho Day" in the city. Without the exposure to the arts he received as a Quincy Public Schools student, Del Vecho stated, he wouldn't have pursued a career in the arts.

"The support of the arts is really important, particularly in schools," Del Vecho said.

The City Council and School Committee unanimously approved a statement of interest to state officials, expressing a desire to renovate or replace the Squantum Elementary School, which first opened in 1919.

Public Works Commissioner Daniel Raymondi expressed concern the U.S. EPA may force Quincy to begin treating stormwater, which the commissioner said could cost $100 million to implement. The City Council approved $250,000 for stormwater planning.

Walter MacDonald of the Department of Public Buildings told the council the September 2014 fire at Old City Hall caused $2.5 million in damage, which would be paid by the contractor's insurance policy.

More than 200 people attended the sixth annual Houghs Neck Chili Bowl. The event raised $1,650 for the Houghs Neck Congregational Church. Coop's Bar & Grille topped the field in the competition for best restaurant chili; School Committee member Kathryn Hubley won the individual competition.

"I was so happy to have won first place; it was a lot of fun," Hubley said. "I guess the third time is the charm."

The city paid the Woodward School $1 million as part of an ongoing lawsuit over the city's stewardship of a two trust funds benefitting the private, all-girls school – a dispute that began in 2005. The $1 million was for damages related to the sale of real estate included in the trusts. A probate court judge still had to determine the penalty related to the city's investment of funds in the trust.

Michael A. Kelly of Miller Stile Road was arraigned on charges of armed assault with intent to murder and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon on a person over 60 years for allegedly attacking a Quincy attorney in the Ross Garage with a hatchet. The victim was released from a Boston hospital two days after the attack after receiving more than 20 staples in his scalp.

The Quincy High boys' basketball team advanced to the quarterfinals of the Div. 1 South Sectional tournament, bowing out to Taunton after bouncing out West Roxbury in the previous round. Quincy High's girls' team qualified for the Div. 2 South Sectional tournament, before being defeated in the opener to Durfee. The school's boys' hockey team also qualified for the Div. 2 South Sectionals, losing in the opening round to Plymouth South.

The boys' basketball team at North Quincy High qualified for the Div. 1 South Sectionals and bowed out in the first round to New Bedford.

Deaths during February included:

Edward M. Leonard, retired MDC police officer; Marie M. Marinelli, 96, retired employee of the City Clerk's Office; Leo J. Bongiorno, 94, retired Quincy firefighter; Sandra Stohlberg, 79, former president of the school Cafeteria Workers Union; William H. O'Donnell, 96, retired Quincy police detective; Edith B. Sheehan, 87, a testing administrator for Boston Public Schools; Mildred H. Rickson, 85, treasurer for the Quincy Tennis Club; Herbert S. Fine, known professionally as Herb Fontaine, the retired new director for radio station WJDA; and Michael Jovanovic, 94, former candidate for mayor of Quincy.

MARCH

Quincy would need to invest $96 million over the next 10 years in public infrastructure and parking facilities in the downtown to jump-start redevelopment, according to a study issued by Redgate Real Estate Advisors, the company brought on in 2014 as a consultant. The Redgate report called for spending that money in four phases over the next decade, which would be paid for with new tax revenue generated by development, beginning with work on Hancock Street.

"That's how you attract additional residential development that then attracts commercial development," Redgate principal Lisa Serafin said. "It's part of an ongoing chain and it starts with paying attention to Hancock Street and embracing it and invigorating it."

City Councillors Kirsten Hughes, Margaret Laforest, Brad Croall, and Kevin Coughlin introduced a resolution asking the council's ordinance committee to study the legality, viability, and enforceability of an ordinance that would require homeowners to shovel sidewalks and prohibit pushing snow into streets.

The Kiwanis Club of Quincy dissolved after 91 years. At its final meeting, the club awarded donations totaling $74,000 to a dozen community groups including $10,000 each for special education in Quincy Public Schools, Quincy Afterschool Child Care, and the Maria Droste Counseling Agency.

The Solarize Quincy initiative began with a goal of doubling the number of homes and businesses with solar power in the city from 200 to 400 over the next several months.

The Planning Board unanimously approved the West of Chestnut project proposed by Quincy Mutual and Gate Residential. The project includes two six-story buildings housing a combined 169 apartments and 12,000 square feet of street-level retail space in the 1400 block of Hancock Street. Work on site began later in the month.

The Rev. William J. English was named Irishman of the Year during the city's St. Patrick's Day Luncheon. English had served as pastor at Most Blessed Sacrament Parish and then Holy Trinity Parish from 1990 to 2010.

The City Council appropriated $200,000 to the Quincy Police Department, allowing the department to purchase five or six new SUVs. The council also appropriated $200,000 in free cash to the Department of Public Works for pothole repairs and $2.8 million to the stabilization fund, putting that fund over the $10 million mark.

To make up for 11 school days missed during January and February snowstorms, the School Committee approved "Beyond the Bell," a series of extracurricular activities for students and their families; the committee also approved holding classes on Good Friday. The Beyond the Bell program was instituted two days after the school board voted for several weeks of extended school days; that vote was rescinded because of concerns the MBTA would not be able to adjust its bus schedule to accommodate students.

The Quincy Housing Authority unveiled a plan to ban smoking on all of the agency's properties. QHA began surveying residents for their opinion as its commissioners began to review the proposed smoking ban.

A 750-foot long section of the Long Island Bridge came crashing down as demolition of the 64-year-old span began. Explosives were used during the demolition process.

Mayor Thomas Koch said the costs of snow removal could top out at more than $13 million. The city had allocated $1.76 million for snow and ice removal in the fiscal 2015 budget; communities are allowed to deficit spend on such costs. Overall, the mayor said he was pleased with the city's response.

"After the Blizzard of '78, everything shut down for about 10 days," Koch said. "After each of these storms this winter, streets were passable within a day."

The Quincy Police Department announced a partnership with social media site Nextdoor, which allows neighborhood residents to communicate with themselves and the department.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin announced he would not seek re-election in the fall; he was first elected to the council in 2001. In a letter to residents of his ward, Coughlin said, "it is time to turn the page and begin a new chapter."

Among the several hundred visitors to the Tomb watching from the steps of the Memorial Amphitheater were nearly three dozen family and friends who traveled from Quincy to support Bob and witness the solemn and moving ceremony.

Dozens of veterans, federal, state, and local officials, and community members came together for a ribbon cutting ceremony celebrating the opening of a new veterans clinic inside Manet Community Health Center's flagship location in North Quincy. The clinic had been located inside former Quincy Medical Center before the hospital closed at the end of 2014.

"We have 1,400 veterans across the South Shore who will be able to access health care because of the new facility here at Manet Community Health Center," said U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch. "They'll be able to take advantage of the new outpatient clinic, which offers additional space and public transit accessibility."

The Federal Emergency Management Agency awarded the city a $5.3 million grant to construct a new stormwater pumping station on Furnace Avenue in West Quincy. The $5.3 million from FEMA will pay 75 percent of the cost for the new pumping station, with Quincy providing the remaining 25 percent. The project was expected to take two years to complete.

Deaths during March included:

Sister Joanne Westwater, 84, director of Maria Droste Services; Peter F. Turowski, Jr., 31, former Norfolk County correction's officer; Marjorie F. Greene, 81, education coordinator of CCD at St. Ann's Parish; Kenneth E. Good, proprietor of the Woll-Nut Shop; Robert F. Dwyer, 86, past president of the Neighborhood Club of Quincy; Michael A. King, 62, retired Quincy police officer; Donna A. Sullivan, 61, Quincy Public Schools teacher's aide; and Linda Hajjar, 87, owner of Hajjar's Big and Tall.

APRIL

Proposals to build a new 15-story, 122-unit luxury apartment building, two new buildings with 48 condominiums between them, and a six-story, 116-room hotel in Quincy Center were unveiled at a City Hall press conference. The developers of the three projects – Peter O'Connell, Sean Galvin of Galvcon Development, and Alex Matov of LBC Boston, respectively – joined Mayor Thomas Koch to introduce the new plans to revitalize Quincy's downtown.

"This is a great day for the city of Quincy," Koch said. "For those of you that have doubted the progress of the downtown, you're in for a bit of a surprise. We've never doubted the commitment on the city of Quincy with our downtown. We've never lacked the confidence in this coming to be."

Paul J. Fahey of Lind Street was held without bail after being indicted on charged with murder for allegedly killing Keith W. Boudreau on March 23 inside the Home Ice Sports Bar in an unprovoked attack. Fahey pleaded not guilty and was held without bail.

Some two hundred people attended a vigil on the lawn of the Thomas Crane Public Library in memory of Boudreau, a father of two sons, then ages 15 and 8.

Koch and Gov. Charlie Baker joined more than 550 Granite Telecommunications employees who had their heads shaved for charities. The mayor's buzz cut netted $10,000 for substance abuse programs in the city's public schools.

BUZZ BENEFIT – Mayor Thomas Koch (above), Gov. Charlie Baker and more than 550 employees at Granite Telecommunications had their heads shaved for a great cause at a hair-cutting benefit April 7 at the North Quincy company. The event raised several million dollars for the Dana Farber Cancer Institute's Jimmy Fund. Here Debra Oneil, a stylist at Boncaldo's, had the honor of buzzing "His Honor." Koch's haircut translated into a $5,000 donation to the Jimmy Fund and $10,000 for local charities.

World War II Army veteran and ex-POW Robert Noble had the honor of placing a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia on National Former POW Recognition Day. Nearly three-dozen family and friends were on hand for the ceremony, which was attended by several hundred visitors from across the country.

"I feel it was not for me alone," Noble said. "I had all my friends in mind and all POWs from all the wars on my mind."

The Quincy Housing Authority's board of commissioners voted 4-1 in favor of a smoking ban on all the agency's properties. The policy was set to go into effect July 1.

The Planning Board approved plans for a 140-unit apartment building on East Howard Street. The building's size was scaled down twice because of concerns from residents, going from 184 units to 164 to 140.

Three companies submitted bids to provide ambulance services in the city for the next five years: Fallon Ambulance of Quincy, the city's ambulance provider since 1997; Brewster Ambulance of Boston; and Action Ambulance of Wilmington.

Sean Galvin, the developer who proposed building 48 Quincy Center condos, said he wanted the city's downtown to be fun again, like it once was.

"I would love to see it hustle and bustle the way it used to be. You used to walk down Hancock Street – you didn't get 10 feet without running into someone you knew. It would be great to see it come back. We're excited about being a part of that, we really are," Galvin said.

The final spans of the Long Island Bridge were demolished using explosives.

The City Council approved a home rule petition asking the Legislature to grant Quincy College the ability to award four-year degrees. College officials said four-year programs could potentially be offered in natural and health sciences, nursing, criminal justice and business beginning in September 2016.

"We view the opportunity to award baccalaureate degrees as a natural evolution of the college into a larger organization, which will provide more opportunities for individuals in the city of Quincy and in our service area," Quincy College President Peter Tsaffaras told the council.

The mayor said the process of finding developers for portions of the city-owned Hancock Lot would soon commence. Koch expected either a residential or office development, with a major ground level retail presence.

"I think there is a lot of interest in it, so it wouldn't surprise me if we had a number of folks interested in participating in development down there," the mayor said.

Koch also said he would name James Fatseas, his longtime chief of staff, the administration's point person for downtown redevelopment.

Quincy-North Quincy track coach Geoff Hennessy was named Coach of the Year by the Massachusetts State Track Coaches Association.

Demolition of the 60-year-old YMCA building on Coddington Street began. The site was to be converted into parking for the new YMCA building.

The City Council appropriated $1.2 million for costs related to the renovation of Old City Hall. The money came from two sources: $637,000 in unexpended funds borrowed for completed capital projects, some more than a decade old, and $600,000 from the $1.5 million bond for the new park outside Quincy High. A request to borrow $3.5 million for the project was refered to committee.

More than 200 union workers from Quincy and neighboring communities rallied in Quincy Center urging downtown developers to hire organized labor for their projects.

Memorial squares were dedicated to three Quincy servicemen killed during the Vietnam War: C.P.O. George R. Levesque, U.S. Navy; 1st Lt. Alfred V. Schofield, U.S. Army; and P.F.C. John P. Coughlin, U.S. Marine Corps.

Deaths during April included:

Marian V. Ciccariella, 71. retired Thomas Crane Public Library librarian; Dorothy I. Giarrusso, 93, longtime Quincy Historical Society member; Linda L. Sparks, 71, retired Quincy police detective; William Bereszniewicz, 88, past president of the Montclair Men's Club; Patrick J. "Rick" Newcomb, 59, owner of Fore River Bait and Tackle; Jean F. Tierney, Eucharist minister at Sacred Heart Church; and Jean C. Wilkosky, 64, Quincy Fire Department secretary.

MAY

Mayor Thomas Koch proposed a budget of $277 million for the upcoming fiscal year, an increase of 3.15 percent over the current budget.

Koch's proposed budget for fiscal year 2016 was $276.99 million, an increase of $8.48 million over the previous budget of $268.51 million. The budget included a 6.18 percent increase in health insurance costs, 5.16 percent increase in spending for pensions and a 15.68 percent increase in Medicare spending. Two new positions would be added – a compliance officer within Inspectional Services and a roofer in the Public Buildings Department.

Koch and Councillor Doug Gutro clashed over plans for the downtown. Gutro said the latest push for downtown development was being driven by politics; Koch dismissed that notion, saying the market and not politics was driving the timelines for proposals unveiled in April.

Quincy High senior Saxon Bresnahan pitched a perfect game against Duxbury, striking out all 21 batters she faced. The Presidents beat the Dragons 2-0 in the game. Bresnahan would go on to pitch back-to-back no-hitters later in the month, as well as a second perfect game, this time against Scituate when she struck out 17 on Senior Night.

President Barack Obama nominated Marine Corps Gen. Joseph F. Dunford Jr. to serve as the next chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The appointment would require Senate approval. Dunford was born in Boston and grew up in Merrymount, where his parents still reside.

"I was certainly surprised," Dunford's father, Joseph Sr., said. "After we kind of digested the fact, we were extremely proud of the accomplishment."

A pair of Quincy police officers who rescued two residents from a January fire and a former national commander of the American Legion were among more than a dozen people from Quincy and surrounding communities honored on Law Day. Quincy Police Officers Andrew Sweeney and William O'Neill received the Robert P. Dana Distinguished Service Award for Law Enforcement for rescuing an elderly woman and a young child from the January fire. John "Jake" Comer received the James R. McIntyre Humanitarian Award. Comer, an Air Force veteran of the Korean War, is a past national commander of the American Legion.

Former Mayor William Phelan announced he would join an already crowded field of candidates vying for the first four-year mayoral term in Quincy's history. Phelan, mayor from 2002 to 2008, was the fourth past or present city official to enter the race, after Koch, Gutro and School Committee member Anne Mahoney.

The City Council approved borrowing $1.2 million for designing improvements along the portion of Sea Street between Quincy Shore Drive and Palmer Street and for the acquisitions of necessary rights of way along that corridor. Final design was expected to take up to a year.

The council approved borrowing $3.5 million for the Old City Hall project. Gutro opposed the measure, saying not enough information was presented to the council.

Steward Health Care and city attorneys agreed to a second tolling agreement, which allowed the company more time to find new potential new users for the former Quincy Medical Center.

Edgewood Development, the company planning to convert the former Central Middle School into a 46-condo building, agreed to revise its stormwater management plan for the site after residents raised concerns over the potential impact to Butler's Pond.

Navy veteran Joseph McConville was the guest speaker at the city's annual Memorial Day observance. He spoke of several Quincy residents killed while serving in the military, and asked the crowd to remember the loved ones he did not mention.

"They may be at Arlington, Normandy, the beautiful Punch Bowl high above Pearl Harbor or right here where there is a flag," McConville said at the ceremony in Mount Wollaston Cemetery. "Each site has a separate story, but they all have two words in common: I served. And we say, 'thank you for your service. Rest in peace.'"

Sisters Bertha Glavin and Mary Kennedy – who worked in a factory that manufactured raincoats for Navy personnel and at the Fore River Shipyard; respectively, during World War II – received commendations from the City Council for their contributions to the American war effort.

The council approved the purchase of a vacant lot at 48 Cleaves St. in Wollaston to mitigate flood concerns in the neighborhood in a 7-1 vote, with Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee opposed.

Gutro introduced an ordinance that would mandate Quincy's pharmacies inform customers that prescription medication can be safely disposed of at the city's police station.

North Quincy High senior Mike Finn set the school's career record for goals on the school's boys' lacrosse team.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency was still in the process of working on new flood maps for Quincy, according to the engineer who oversaw the city's appeal of those maps in 2014, and residents were asked to provide comments to the agency during as part of the process. Joseph D. Shea, a senior vice president at Woodard & Curran, gave a presentation on the re-mapping process during a public meeting held at Quincy High School.

The North Quincy High boys' volleyball qualified for the Div. 1 South tournament, bowing out in the first round to Braintree. The school's girls' lacrosse advanced to the Div. 1 sectional tournament for the first time since 2007, losing in the opener to Wellesley.

Emily Bryson, a senior at North, defended her title in the two-mile race at the Div. 2 Championship, winning by more than 11 seconds.

Deaths during May included:

William A. Center Sr., 69, retired Quincy firefighter; Arthur E. Yacubian, an employee at Natick Labs; Donnarae Mollica, a worker for the Quincy Police Department; James F. Rush, 77, retired Weymouth Fire Department lieutenant; Guerino J. Litterio, 87, retired art director for Hill Holiday; Patricia E. Wiswell, an executive secretary at the State House; Walter E. Steen Jr., 77, an engineer for Raytheon; and Donald S. Moscone, 82, founder of Moscone, Inc. Builders.

JUNE

Quincy spent $13.5 million on snow and ice removal during a record-breaking winter, with more than half the total cost going to the hauling of snow to several sites in the city, Mayor Thomas Koch told the City Council.

The city set up several snow dumps, also known as snow farms, to hold the snow removed from city streets in late January and into February. Those included three major snow dumps at the Fore River Shipyard, Squantum Point Park and Crown Colony, as well as several smaller ones. In total, the mayor said it cost $7 million to move snow to those sites and another $1.5 million on operations inside the snow dumps. The owners of those sites did not charge the city for the dumping of snow.

Plowing and salting city streets cost $2.2 million and preparation for snow removal, including the purchase of 13,000 tons of salt and 8,000 tons of sand as well as fuel costs and vehicle maintence totaled $1.3 million.

School Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said the school system would be able to add five new teachers for the new school year – two English language learner teachers, a music instructor, an engineering teacher and one teacher that would be hired if needed to keep classroom size in acceptable range – with the budget increasing by $1.48 million to $95.59 million.

Brewster Ambulance was awarded the contract to provide EMS services in the city for five years. Brewster planned to double the number of ambulances in the city, the mayor's office said, and offer "Smart 911" services to residents for free.

The Quincy High softball team bowed out of the Div. 1 South Sectional tournament, losing in the opening round.

The Rev. Sheldon Bennett, a member of the city's Affordable Housing Trust Fund Committee, said the City Council should take steps to ensure affordable housing is created in the new Quincy Center as the body reviews an amendment to the Urban Revitalization and Development Plan for the downtown. "Lots of upmarket units will be produced in Quincy, and that's a good thing," he said, "but not so many for households at or below median incomes and that is not such a good thing."

The City Council gave final approval to Koch's proposed $277 million budget for the upcoming fiscal year and also set aside $2.17 million – the city's remaining free cash for the current fiscal year – for snow and ice removal costs for the previous winter. During a series of budget hearings, the council made one cut of $25,000 to the budget for the assistant wire inspector position in the Inspectional Services Department to correct for an accounting error.

The Planning Board approved the proposal to convert the former Central Middle School into a 46-unit condo building and plans to convert a one-story commercial building at 133-135 Hancock St. into a 21-unit, four story apartment building.

A two-alarm fire at the apartment complex at 185 Quincy Shore Dr. caused $200,000 worth of damage.

Three-hundred six seniors graduated from North Quincy High and 380 graduated from Quincy High.

"Where you go does not define who you are," NQHS valedictorian Deanna Leung said. "You define who you are, no matter where you go."

"Classes do not necessarily guide us to the path that we have been searching for our entire lives," QHS valedictorian Kun Yi Li said. "They prepare us to embark on that process on our own."

The City Council's downtown committee gave preliminary approval to changing the Urban Revitalization and Development Plan for Quincy Center to grant the Planning Board the ability to review downtown covenants signed between the mayor and developers.

Boston 2024, the group hoping to bring the 2024 Summer Olympics to Greater Boston, proposed hosting beach volleyball events in a temporary stadium at Squantum Point Park. The group also pledged to make various improvements to the state-owned park.

Koch said no city money would go towards hosting those events, including for necessary infrastructure improvements, if Boston were to be awarded the games.

Several Ricciuti Drive residents said they were opposed to plans to build a 269-unit residential complex at Quarry Hills citing traffic concerns, while other community members voiced their support for the project at a public hearing. Developer William Locke had proposed building two six-story buildings on the eight-acre site.

Passanageset Park at Broad Meadows Marsh officially opened after more than a decade of planning and restoration work. The park contains a total of 40 acres of land and water and 1.3 miles of walking trails, which include interpretive signs on the area's history and the Native Americans who lived there for hundreds of years. The interpretive sign project began in September 2013, by six girls who were in seventh grade at Broad Meadows at the time, known as "The History Girls" for the effort they made.

Song Jun Ohm, the South Korean consul general in Boston, said his country would never forget the sacrifice made by so many Americans more than 60 years ago during the Korean War.

"Korean people and the Korean government are grateful to the American veterans of the Korean War. Koreans pay respect to American veterans for their bravery and their patriotism. Koreans will not forget the sacrifice of American soldiers during the Korean War," Ohm said at a ceremony on the anniversary of the start of the war in 1950.

Deaths during June include:

Joseph F. Greene, 88, past president of the Cyril P. Morrisette Post; Rene Lumaghini, 87, retired Planning Department employee; Margaret Murray, past president of the AWHS Mother's Guild; Richard M. Turpin, volunteer for the Quincy Point Panthers; Walter F. Gibson, 85, retired Mass. State trooper; and Donald McCarthy Sr., 66, funeral director at Deware Funeral Home.

The developer who purchased the former Star of the Sea Church in Squantum said he wanted to hear from neighbors and city officials before deciding what to do with the property. Victor Sheen, the founder and managing director of Oakgrove Residential, purchased the 37,200-square-foot site for $600,000 from the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston. Sheen said the company purchased the property because of its location and because Quincy is a great market.

Mayor Thomas Koch said construction of a planned replacement for the Sterling Middle School would likely begin in the summer of 2017. Earlier in the year, the city brought on Watertown-based Joslin Lesser as the project manager Wayland-based Ai3 Architects as the designer for the new school.

"It has a great potential for a nice, nice layout," Koch said of the new school. "It will fit in better with the neighborhood. That building (the current Sterling) just dominates the street of houses there in a neighborhood setting. It will be nice to see something tie in a little nicer with the neighborhood surroundings."

The city closed on the ninth and final home officials planned to purchase and raze to make way for renovations to Teel Field and a new parking lot for North Quincy High School, paying Lawrence and Vicki Tasney $525,000 for the duplex at 30 Hunt St. in addition to a total of $75,000 in relocation fees. Demolition of the nine homes was expected to begin in the coming weeks. The renovated park was expected to be finished in time for fall sports at the start of the 2016-17 school year.

Residents were not digging a plan to host beach volleyball events at Squantum Point Park if Boston were awarded the 2024 Olympics. Those in attendance at a public meeting on the proposal said they were concerned about the impact on traffic and the ability to use the park.

John Quincy Adams' life and legacy were recalled by several speakers at wreath-laying ceremony in honor of the sixth's president's 248th birthday. Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, executive director of the Quincy Historical Society, said Adams' reputation among historians was the highest it had ever been.

"We're two years away from his 250th birthday and I hope historians continue to appreciate and explore the amazing complexity of this man," Fitzgerald said. "It would surprise most people that he was the first president to say 'representative democracy.'"

The Board of License Commissioners granted a one-day license to the group planning the Quincy Food Truck Festival in September, featuring two dozen food trucks serving up everything from lobster rolls, barbecue, whoopie pies and French, Jamaican and Asian fusion fare.

"We think this will be an absolutely terrific, family friendly event – a food event that's really going to shed greater light on our city," said Chris Cassani, the executive director of the Park Department.

Massachusetts' $38.12 billion budget for fiscal year 2016 increased local aid to Quincy by $844,055 (1.96 percent) over the previous budget. Quincy was to receive $43,859,886 combined for Chapter 70 education funding and unrestricted local aid for the new fiscal year that began July 1. Of that, $26.26 million is for Chapter 70 funds and $17.6 million is unrestricted local aid. In fiscal 2015, the city received $43,015,833 in local aid for those two categories – $26.02 million in Chapter 70 funding and $16.99 million in unrestricted local aid.

"This is a very strong budget for Quincy, something that the entire delegation worked on together and can be proud of," Sen. John Keenan said.

Faxon Park's newest accommodation – a three-quarter-mile long trail for walkers, joggers and runners – opened. The Red Diamond Trail, which is largely flat, is surfaced with woodchips. A sign points to the start of the trail, and red diamonds on trees along the trail mark its route. The Quincy Parks Conservancy helped raised money for the new trail and Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall ran the 2014 Boston Marathon to benefit the project.

"From a ward councillor's perspective, when you propose a community project you hope and pray this is how they turn out," Croall said. "It came out great."

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., a nonprofit organization that now serves 20,000 individuals on the South Shore and beyond, marked its golden anniversary with a special celebration at the Old House at Peace Field in the Adams National Historical Park.

"It feels like a really historic time and a time we're all really proud of this history and reflecting on all the work that went into the organization and into the community," QCAP Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo said of the 50th anniversary.

Two local labor unions reached agreements to work West of Chestnut – the first Quincy Center redevelopment project. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) Local 103 and Iron Workers Local 7 signed onto the project, joining two others: Operators Local 4 and Building Wreckers Local 1421.

Boston 2024 dropped Boston's bid to host the 2024 Summer Olympic Games, citing a lack of public support. Local officials greeted the announcement with a mixture of relief and disappointment.

The Board of License Commissioners voted unanimously to revoke the liquor license of Yaz's Place at 132 E. Howard St. following a stabbing. During a 90-minute hearing, neighbors complained of repeated problems at the Quincy Point barroom.

The U.S. Senate confirmed the appointment of Gen. Joseph F. Dunford Jr., who grew up in Quincy, to the position of chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Deaths during July included:

Frank A. Myett Jr., volunteer for QCAP; Harry A. Marini, 90, retired Quincy Fire lieutenant; Charles D. Jaehnig Sr., longtime youth baseball and basketball coach; Donald E. McCusker, Koch Club volunteer; John E. Schmock, 85, retired director of civil defense and superintendent of fire alarms for the city; Charles A. Lopresti, 89, retired director of Quincy veterans services; Matthew J. McDonnell, Esq., 74, president of the Quincy Bar Association; and Sandra R. Jordan, 74, founder of the Presidents Ladies Association at Presidents Golf Course.

DA Morrissey Trains School Nurses In Spotting Abuse, Reversing Overdoses

Quincy school nurses Rita Bailey, Barbara Campbell and Mary Jane Callahan joined more than 80 colleagues, sports trainers and other athletic directors from across Norfolk County for a two-part opiate safety training hosted by Norfolk Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey.

The event included how to use the opiate overdose reversal drug naloxone and an evidence-based screening system to identify students at risk for addiction – particularly following post-operative prescribing for sports injuries.

"The training was in two distinct parts. The Director of School Health Services for the Department of Public Health, Mary Ann Gapinski, provided the SBIRT training," Morrissey said. "SBIRT stands for Screening, Brief Intervention and Referral to Treatment."

The second training segment, instructing school nurses on administering the opiate overdose reversal drug naloxone, and associated treatment, was provided by Dr. Daniel Muse, director of the emergency department at Brockton Hospital. "Dr. Muse serves at medical director for the naloxone program we have provided to our municipal police departments," Morrissey said.

The Norfolk DA's Office was the first in the state, if not the country, to offer naloxone training and supply to every police and fire department in its district. It is the first in Massachusetts, if not the country, to offer the training to all of its school nurses and sports trainers.

"The naloxone training grabbed the headlines and the TV spots, but we view the SBIRT portion as equally important," Morrissey said. "It is aimed at identifying bellwether behaviors and initial warning signs before the disease of addiction has taken full hold. We are looking to prevent the eventual need for naloxone, even as we train to use it."

Morrissey reviews the circumstances of every fatal overdose his office responds to looking for trends and commonalities. "Many overdose decedents were introduced to opioids during their high school years following surgery for a sports injury," Morrissey said. "Everyone with a medical role in our schools needs to know that. It may save lives."

Morrissey, who has provided school safety grants to public school systems for the last several years, is going to supplement DPH funding to make the full implementation of SBIRT possible without cost to the towns as his grants this year.

"As one of our trainers said, schools don't have universal postural screening because every student has scoliosis," Morrissey said. "But if screening catches a problem early enough, prompt intervention can prevent a lifetime of negative consequences. The same holds with substance-abuse screening."

Knights Of Columbus Meet Raffle Jan. 8

The Knights of Columbus monthly Meat Raffle will be held Friday, Jan. 8 at the Council Hall, 5 Hollis Ave. in North Quincy.

Proceeds benefit the Knights' scholarship fund.

This month's raffle is sponsored by Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey with the Culinary Arts Program at Quincy High School cooking the dinner. The KofC is partnering with the Culinary Arts program to endow a scholarship to a student who is continuing on their education in the field.

Dinner is served at 6:30 p.m. and the raffle starts at 7 p.m.

Lions Host Luncheon For Vision Impaired

The Quincy Lions Club recently held its annual luncheon for the vision impaired at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

For over 25 years this is one of the highlight events of the Quincy Lions Club. The Lions Club welcomed nearly 30 guests from the South Shore Center for The Visually Impaired to this annual event, where all were entertained with a Holiday Sing a Long during the event. Thomas Clasby, Director of Elder Services for The City of Quincy and Lion Ed O'Leary coordinated this year's event.

The Quincy Lions Club has recently inducted the following new members: Janis Powis, Noel DiBona, Jennifer Amate, and Josephine Vidal, all of whom are committed to serving the Quincy Community.

The Quincy Lions Club also recognized Lion Don Uvanitte, for his continued contributions to the Club. Uvanitte has sponsored more members to the Quincy Lions Club than any other member.

The Quincy Lions Club is celebrating its 75th year of service to neighbors in Quincy. A 75th annual dinner gala is set for Thursday, March 31.

For over 70 years, the Quincy Lions Club has been serving the local community. In addition to providing hundreds of area residents with free vision and basic health screenings each year, the club provides free eye exams and new eyeglasses to residents in need, as well as awarding thousands of dollars in college scholarships to graduating seniors at Quincy and North Quincy high schools.

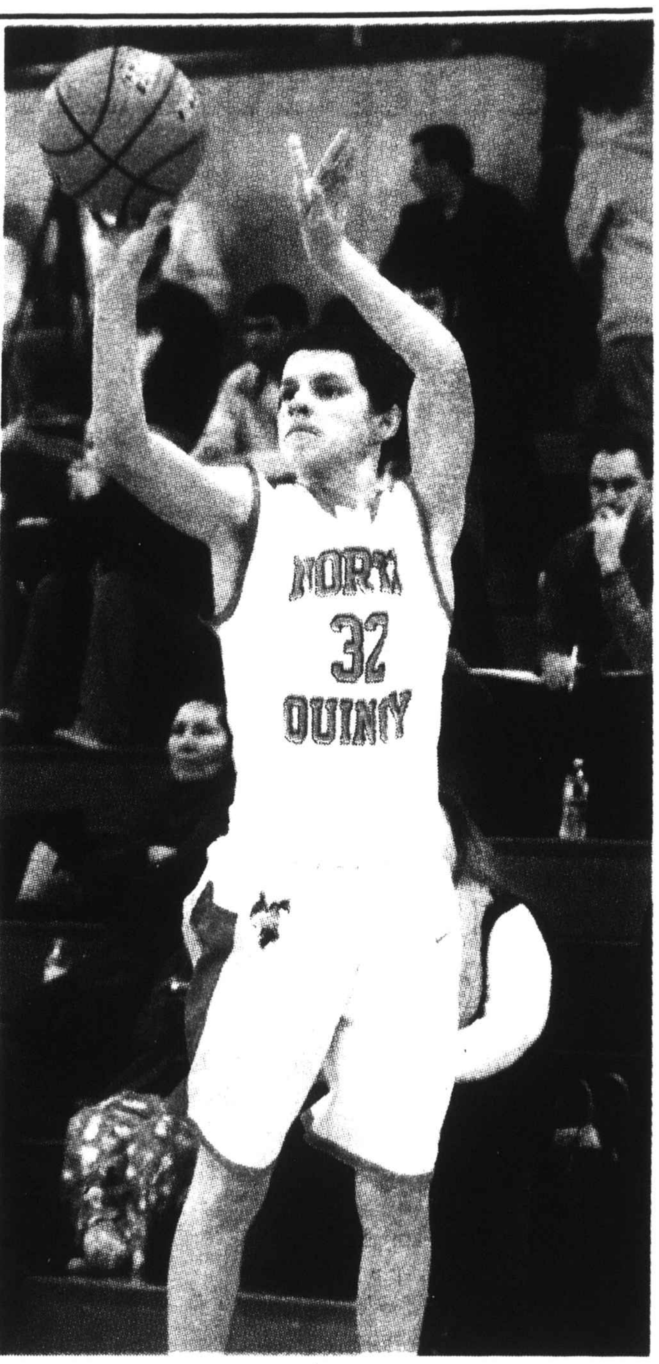
NORTH QUINCY'S Dhaaky Drake (right, #4) battles Silver Lake's Drew Neal (#21) as Red Raiders teammates Will Ortiz and Andrew Huang (#23) move in to help. The Red Raiders dropped a 72-60 decision to the Lakers Dec. 21.



AIDAN GOLDEN scored 17 points for North Quincy including two three-pointers to start the game in a 72-60 loss against Silver Lake. In three games, Golden scored 46 points.

Red Raiders Bow To Lakers

By BILL GRIFFIN

When Dhaaky Drake sliced to the bucket and made a beautiful inside-out feed to Aidan Golden for an open corner three, North Quincy was solidly in the game, down just five to Silver Lake two minutes into the third period.

The largest lead in the first half had been four points. There had been nine lead changes. The score had been tied five times. North matched the perimeter skills of Drake, Golden and Will Ortiz against Silver Lake's inside power game led by center Cam Keefe. It promised to be a fine finish.

Then came one big surge, and one big surge frequently decides a basketball game. Silver Lake went on a 14-0

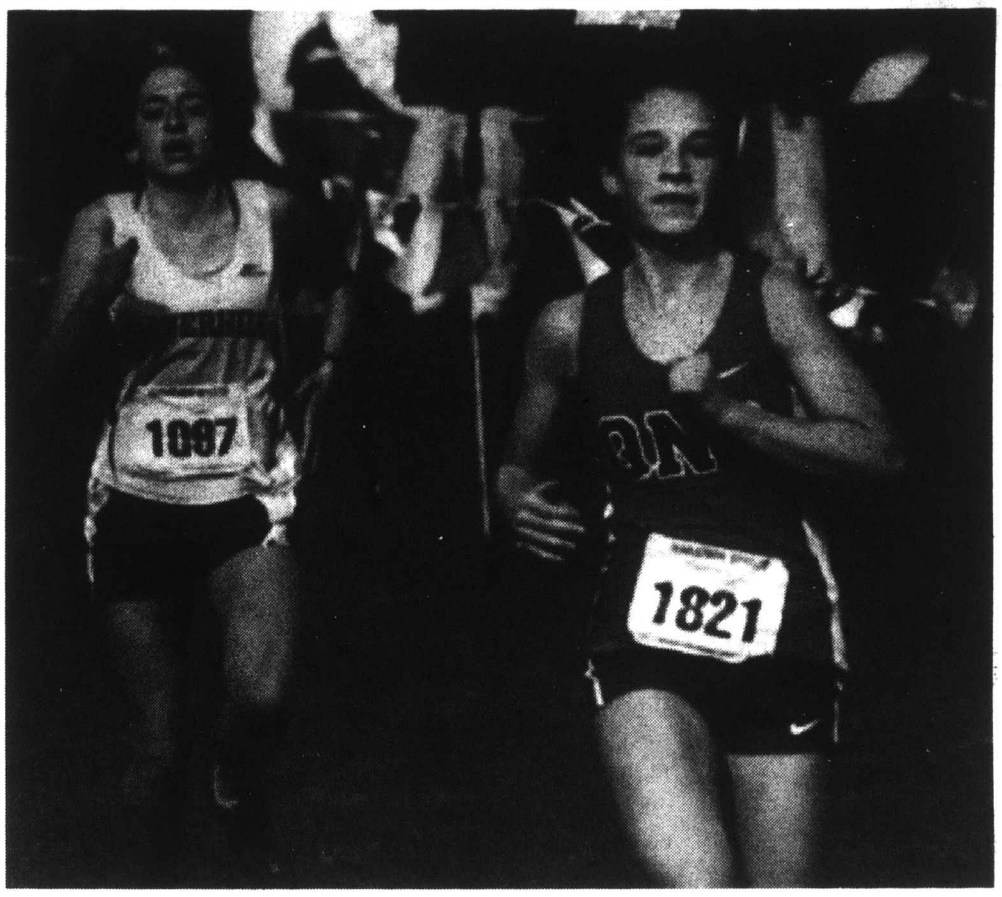
Banner Rookie Season NQ's Abby Murphy

Top Freshman In EMass Cross Country



NORTH QUINCY FRESHMAN Abby Murphy had a banner rookie season in high school cross country as she was the top freshman finisher at the Eastern Mass. championships. Her 11th place finish overall qualified her for the All-State meet. Photo Courtesy Geoff Hennessy

By JOE REARDON

Abby Murphy was concentrating so hard to pass the harriers around her she had no way of knowing what place she was in heading into the last half mile of the Div. 2 EMass Cross Country Championships in November.

What the North Quincy freshman did know was that she had plenty left for a strong finish and was running her best race of the season. When it came time to kick, Murphy held nothing back and simply let the speed pour out.

Competing in cold, windy conditions on the wide-open fields of the Wrentham Developmental Center's rolling 3.1-mile course, the 14-year-old sprinted hard and wound up just two seconds outside of the top 10 with a sterling 11th-place finish in 19 minutes, 37.7 seconds. Maybe even more impressive was the fact that she was the top freshman finisher in the field.

That finish in tough conditions qualified Murphy for a spot in the All-State meet the following Saturday at Stanley Park in Westfield.

North Quincy head coach Geoff Hennessy said people shouldn't let Murphy's laid-back demeanor fool them. She's a different person entirely in a race. "She's a very aggressive and competitive kid," said Hennessy. "She doesn't give you that impression when you meet her, but when the gun goes off she's a beast."

Murphy ran under control at Wrentham and was still able to put herself among the top 20 in the early going. She suprised herself by earning a trip to All-States "I started off at the back of the lead pack," said the soft-spoken harrier. "The race didn't feel that long. I really didn't think I was going to qualify."

Murphy continued her fine running in western Massachusetts. Unlike the challenging Wrentham course, the Stanley Park route had barely a single incline, giving the kickers a big advantage. And although Murphy doesn't rely on her finishing speed in every race, she knows it's there when she needs it. "I try to go hard during the race, but I still have enough energy to sprint at the end," she said.

Murphy ran yet another tactically sound race in perfect, 60-plus degree conditions. She got into a rhythmn early and concentrated on moving up in the pack. When she exited the woods with 600 meters remaining, Murphy switched gears once again and sailed across the finish line in 19:21.93 for 43rd place against a very deep and talented field.

"I just tried to stay with the pack the whole way," said Murphy. "It was a very easy course because it was mostly flat."

Hennessy said it was Murphy's best race of the fall. "All-States was the best," he said. "I didn't get to see the finish because I was watching from the woods. I watched her finish on a video and she put on quite a sprint at the end. She muscles her way through races."

Her success at All-States capped off a banner rookie season for Murphy. Only a year before, she was battling for the win in the Quincy Middle School Cross Country Championships at Pageant Field after placing fourth as a seventh grader. Murphy was able to shake the competition in the final 400 meters and win easily.

"We were running close during the race and I took the lead in the last stretch," she said.

Murphy trained very lightly during the summer heading into her freshman year and she took the Patriot League by storm. She won dual meets against Silver Lake, Pembroke, Duxbury and Hingham and raced to a strong fourth-place showing in the league meet, clocking a 19:30.6 over Silver Lake's hilly, 3.1-mile course.

Murphy proved to be one of the best female freshmen in the state when she got the opportunity to race against her own grade. She had her eye on a top-five finish at the Coaches Invitational and burned an 11:24.24 for second just seven seconds behind Emma Whitehead of Shepherd Hill over the 3,000-meter course in Wrentham. That performance came after she took third in the freshman event at the enormously popular Twilight Invitational at the Barnstable Fairgrounds. Murphy earned a bronze medal, clocking a very quick 12:18.1 for the 2.1-mile course behind Magdelana Sorrentino of Lenox and Coyle & Cassidy's Rachael Johnson.

"Her season was wonderful," said Hennessy. "She likes to win. That's what gets her going."

run to close the third period en route to posting a 72-60 win over the Red Raiders in a Patriot League contest at the North Quincy gym Dec. 21.

The loss dropped North to 0-3. The Red Raiders had played well and led in the final period of each of their two opening games against Plymouth North (53-42) and Hanover (52-50). They were right there as well with Silver Lake in the second half, but coach Kevin Barrett did not see the progress he hoped for against the Lakers.

"I was very happy with our effort in our first two games. With a bounce here or there, we could easily have been 2-0," said Barrett. "I thought we took a step back against Silver Lake. I'd like to see better effort from us, especially rebounding and playing defense."

The Lakers drained three threes in the decisive rally, but the story of the run and the game was the inside power of Keefe, a junior center who led all scorers with 26, and senior forward Anthony Videtto who added 15. The two enjoyed a significant size advantage. The Lakers did a good job getting the ball to the post, the inside passing between the big men was excellent, and their three-point marksmen were accurate when North's zone dropped back to protect the middle.

North's initial defense was good. The Red Raiders worked hard out of their zone, made the Lakers grind down the shot clock, and forced contested, difficult shots. The problem was the rebounding. Keefe and Videtto found open creases in the zone for second and third chances off the boards and frequent trips to the foul line (27 free throws for SL).

"It's frustrating to play good defense, force a difficult shot and not get the rebound," said Barrett. "We have work to do. We have to get a body on people and box them off the boards. We aren't big enough to jump over people for rebounds. We have to get position."

Drake played his third solid game at the point. He has 41 points in three games. He was especially effective in the second period when Silver Lake went man-to-man. He is simply too quick to guard one-on-one. He not only beat his man, he beat the help defense to the hoop. Drake had 13 of his 15 points in the first half. He not only got to the basket, he was steady and sure with the ball and found the open shooter

"Dhaaky is very tough to guard one-on-one. He is so quick that I think he forced them back into playing a zone," said Barrett. "He has done a good job pushing the ball up in transition for the first three games. We want to get out and run, but we need to rebound the ball better."

Ortiz, a senior forward, had a career-high 19. He showed three-point range and clever moves along the baseline, scoring 15 of his points in the second half to keep North within range. He gets his shot off quickly, drives well to the basket and scored 36 points in North's first three games.

"I've been pleased with Will. He's showed a nice progression shooting over the first three games," said Barrett. "He understands the game well and he takes good shots. He can rebound, score inside or get to the line."

Golden has given North the three-point range it needed with graduation of Jackie Chen. He knocked home two threes to start the game, one on an assist from Mike Soricelli who scored six points and played solid floor game. He had 17 for the night and 46 through three games. Ideally, he will settle in his spot in the corner and be open when Drake draws double-teams with his drives.

"Aidan has given us a good outside threat. He's shot the three well. He's good against a zone," said Barrett.

Silver Lake led, 14-13 after one and 34-30 at the half. Their run late in the third opened up a 54-35 lead entering the fourth, and North could not get closer than 12 in the final period.

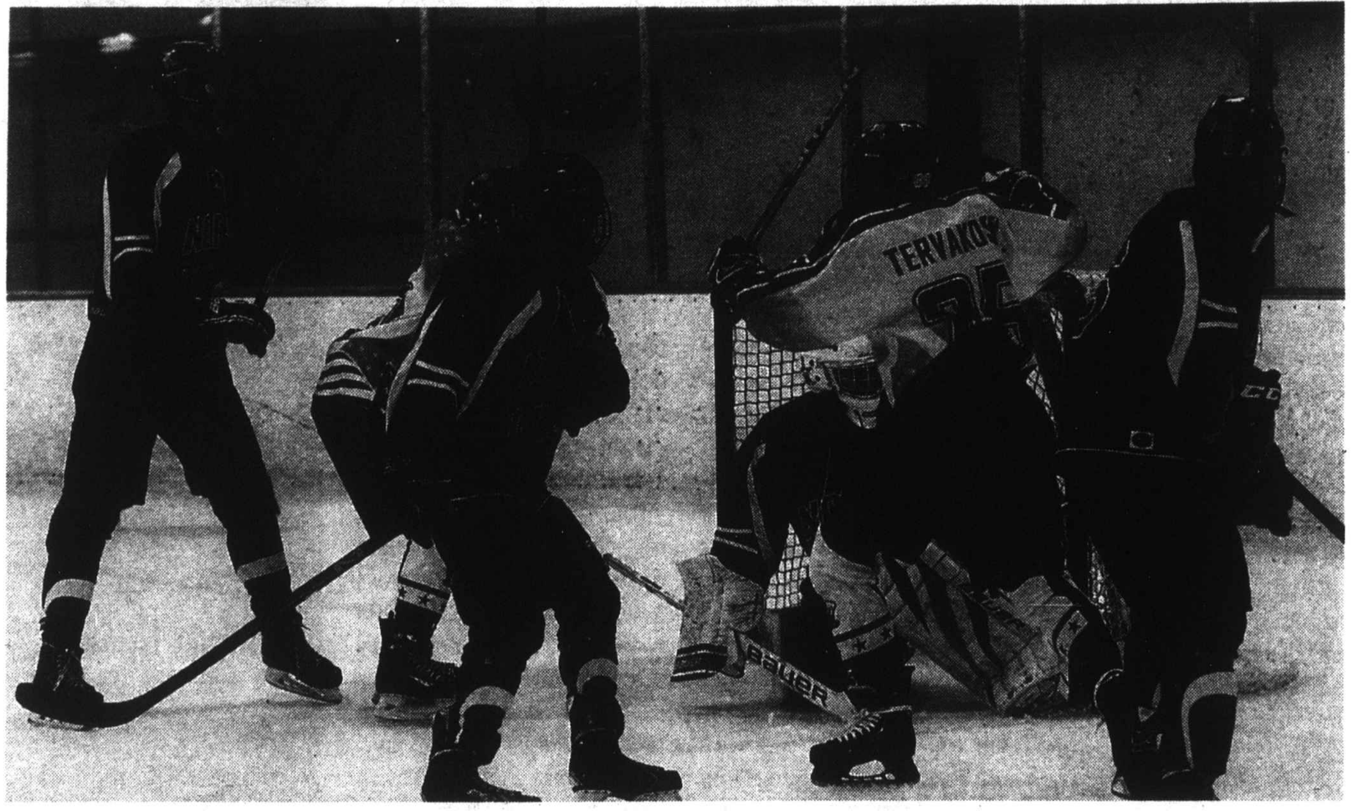
Connolly Backs Quincy To 4-2 Win Over North



QUINCY'S MIKE TERVAKOSKI celebrates after scoring a goal on a wrap around the North Quincy net to give the Presidents a 3-1 lead over the Red Raiders late in the second period. The goal proved to be the game winner as Quincy doubled up North, 4-2 in the opening round of the Quincy Holiday Hockey Tournament Sunday night. The Presidents faced off against Milton in the championship game Monday night. The Red Raiders played King Philip in the consolation game.

arena five and six deep. He watched the speed and the passion of the rivalry game. He watched the Quincy goalie raise his stick and skate to center ice to join his teammates in celebration.

Sunday night, it was Connolly's turn. The senior goalie stepped onto center stage and made 28 saves, including several brilliant stops at game-deciding moments, to lift the Presidents to a 4-2 win over North Quincy in the opening round of the sixth annual Quincy Holiday Hockey Tournament before an overflow house at the Quincy Youth Hockey Arena.

Quincy (3-1-1) posted its sixth straight win over North and met Milton in the championship game Monday night. Milton defeated King Philip, 3-1 in first round Sunday night. North (2-2) faced KP in the consolation game.

"Chris Connolly has waited three years, and he deserves this," said Quincy coach Ted Walsh. "He backed up Ryan Higgins. He sat and watched this game, and never complained, never said a word. He made quality stops tonight. There are nights when a goalie can steal you a game, and tonight might have been an example of that."

Connolly was calm and sure in his rivalry debut. He settled his young team, which skates seven freshmen, and made it clear early that he would give away nothing. North would have to beat him. There would be no soft goals.

"I was a little nervous to start, but once I made a few saves, I was into the game," he said. "While I watched Ryan, I thought about what it would be like to play in one of these games. The excitement of playing in this atmosphere against a great hockey team with all the energy of the crowd was even better than I thought."

It was not so much the number of the saves he made, but their difficulty and when he made them. After Quincy jumped to a 2-0 lead, North closed within a goal on a perfect wrister from Hunter Phillips along the right wing which caught the far corner with 6:10 left in the second period.

The game could have slipped away in the next 21 seconds. Nine seconds after Phillips' goal, Austin Lee cut uncovered across the crease. Connolly didn't buy the fake and closed his pads to protect the five-hole and make the stop. Twelve seconds after the save on Lee, North's Mike McDonald ripped the hardest shot of the night, a blistering slapper from the point which Connolly grabbed with a quicksilver glove hand.

Just over three minutes later, Corey Hernandez sent in Timmy Glynn on a clean breakaway. Again, Connolly didn't react to the deke. He stood up, followed Glynn across the crease and stopped the backhand with his body on the stick side. He made 12 of his saves in the second period. When North played its best hockey, Connolly made his best saves.

"On Lee's shot, I didn't want to jump at the fake," said Connolly. "We knew they worked the puck well point-to-point and McDonald has a great shot. But I had a good look and saw it all the way. On Timmy's play, I tried to keep good position and not go for the deke because he knows how to score."

His best came in the third with Quincy up 3-2 with 9:30 left in the game. McDonald started it again from the point. Austin Currie took clean possession at the tip of the crease. The top corner looked wide open. Currie picked it. North's sticks both on the ice and from the bench began to rise in celebration. North's partisans in the bleachers began to stand and roar, but Connolly flashed his glove to save the one-goal lead.

"That was the save of the night. Connolly was awesome," said North coach Matt Gibbons.

Quincy started the scoring with a beautiful passing play with 7:01 left in the first. Paul Blake controlled along the left sideboards and threaded a pass along the ice through the defense to Josh Campbell at the top of the right circle. Campbell found the top corner for a 1-0 lead.

Blake tipped home a flip from the point by Brandon Nunnink for a 2-0 lead with 7:35 left in the second. After Phillips scored for North, after Connolly made his three four-star saves, Mike Tervakoski scored on a wraparound with an assist to freshman Griffin Lynch with 1:28 left in the second for a 3-1 lead entering the third.

"We really passed the puck well on the first goal," said Walsh. "We've telling them to shoot the puck, to put it on net and that helped our second and third goals. The tip-in was a changeup which changed directions which is one of the hardest saves for a goalie to make."

Mike McDonald, the best player on the ice, drew North within 3-2 with a rush from the blue line and a backhand finish with 11:45 left in the game on an assist from Kevin McDonald. Pat Quirk finished the scoring with an empty-netter on an assist from Dan O'Leary with five seconds left in the game.

"Quincy High deserved this game," said Gibbons. "They outplayed us for most of the night. We had a good second period, but they were better. We got within one in the third, but we took two bad penalties, and they stopped our momentum. We should know better."

Quincy is young, but the Presidents played solid, confident hockey. The defense stood up at the blue line and stopped rushes before they entered the scoring zone. The Brothers Lynch, Owen and Griffin, were excellent as the No. 1 pair. Griffin Lynch also showed a powerful slap shot. Nunnink, Campbell, Mike Calnan, and Ryan Larsen were also strong along the blue line.

The first line of Quirk, Dan O'Leary and James O'Leary kept consistent pressure on the North end.

"The one place we have experience is on defense, and that helped us tonight," said Walsh.

For North, Mike McDonald did everything from protecting his net, to rushing the puck, to setting up scoring chances, to driving slap shots. He also seemed to play 35 of the game's 45 minutes. Senior Kevin Doherty made 22 saves for North and was terrific in the third with three testing stops midway through the period to keep the Red Raiders within one.

The final word belongs to Mr. Connolly.

"My whole team deserves the credit. We played as a family tonight and that's the way we want it to be for the next two months," he said.

Scituate Downs Quincy In Swimming, Diving

Quincy High School hosted their second meet at Lincoln Hancock pool against Scituate on Dec. 22.

Scituate won both the girls and boys meets with scores of 90-67 and 76-50 respectively.

Highlights for the girls include Juniors Bailee Carey (captain) and Madison Synan placing first and third in diving with scores of 218.85 and 140.55 respectively. Two of the girls freestyle relays also came in second place.

The 200 Freestyle relay of Sophomore Kat Casey and Juniors Bailee Carey (captain), Clare Doherty, and Emilia Kapacia finished with a time of 2.04.28.

The 400 Freestyle relay of Junior Clare Doherty, Sophomore Julie Hong, and Freshman Kumudini Devalla and Hannah Ford finished with a time of 5.01.81. Individually, Julie Hong also got second place in the 200 yard individual medley with a time of 2.57.25.

For the boys, Junior Captain Thomas Tran placed first in the 100yd Breastroke (1.06.53) and second in the 100 yd Butterfly (59.88). The 400 yd freestyle relay of Senior Matthew Pham, Junior Mattia Dema and Freshmen Guilherme Eller and Kevin Warner also placed second to close the meet with a time of 5.10.35.

QHS travels to Middleboro on Jan. 5th.

LEVERAGING POWER

If not performed correctly, snow shoveling is strenuous exercise that has great potential for injury. One way to approach this task involves thinking of yourself as the fulcrum (pivot point), the shovel as the lever, and the snow as the load. At the length of a shovel, it takes about 16 pounds of force to lift 6 pounds of snow. The denser the snow, the more effort it takes. To ease the difficulty of the task, it helps to move closer to the snow (effectively reducing the length of the lever) and bend at the knees (not the waist). These steps help to lighten the load and shift the effort away from the lower-back muscles to the stronger leg muscles.

FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC welcomes anyone having a variety of pains and issues such as neck or back pain, headache, migraine, and many more. Patients come and receive comprehensive consultations that include thorough spinal examination before starting care. We are located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we are currently accepting new patients. We offer computerized spinal scans.

P.S. When twisting their upper bodies to toss away the snow, snow shovelers subject their lower backs, shoulders, and knees to twisting forces that can harm joints, tendons, ligaments, and muscles.

Memorable Local Sports Moments In 2015

By BILL GRIFFIN

The years go by too quickly, so quickly that we don't fully appreciate all that we have seen and experienced.

The time for reflection also comes at the year's busiest corner of the street, the holiday season when we all have too little time and too much to do. Still it is worth pausing for a small moment to call up the memories of all that has moved, excited, and inspired us from our sporting life over the past year.

It is in that spirit that I offer these games, people, and memories.

1. Quincy volleyball – There was a run to the sectional finals, a tie for the league title and a 22-2 record, but there was much more. No team from the city played better, harder, or with more grace under pressure. They climbed out of a 2-0 hole against Canton, out of a 2-1 hole and four match points in the tourney against King Philip for memorable victories. Down, 2-0 and 23-8 to Newton North in the sectional finals they played the point of a lifetime which showed well their character to all who made the stagecoach ride to Northboro for the match.

The front line of Nicole Jorgensen, Sarah Gibbons, Maggie Parker and Anxhela Hoti worked as one. Jessie Lei dove into walls to keep the volleyball from hitting the floor. Shannon Doherty showed uncommon poise for a sophomore. A special team.

2. Saxon Bresnahan – It is most rare when it can be accurately said that a player could not possibly have done better. With Bresnahan, it was true. Against Duxbury, she faced 21 batters. She struck out all of them. Each and every one. 21 batters. 21 strikeouts. There are no-hitters, there are perfect games, and there is this. History. Watch five games a week for 40 years, and you will not see it again.

She had four no-hitters and two perfect games in the space of 24 days. She set the school record for strikeouts in a season and had over 800 in her career. She and her best friend catcher Angelina Avitable, who wasn't always fully aware of these pitching gems, led a team that not only made the tournament, but was great fun to be around.

3. Mike Rowland – Rowland was born with cerebral palsy. Before he could go to pre-school, he had to prove to his mother that he could walk up and down a flight of stairs. He ran with a limp. As a senior, he made Quincy's varsity basketball team. He did every drill, ran through every practice, prepared for every game just like all his teammates. Against Silver Lake, he knocked home a three-pointer, the first basket of his varsity career. The gym shook with noise. This is the best that sports can be.

4. North Quincy softball – In 2014 coach Jim Connor cobbled together a team to save the program. In 2015, the Red Raiders won their first game in two years, a 10-0 victory over Hull. The standouts in the game were catcher Sarah Franklin, pitcher Mia Sapienza and shortstop Madison Hally. In victory, they not only showed they knew how to win, but they also knew how to act. After the game, Connor told his team that Hull was having a poor year, that the Pirates had not won a game. He asked his club to be gracious in victory. The players smiled and walked quietly through the handshake line. They waited until the Hull players approached the bus before they celebrated. Winning is more than scoring more runs than the other team.

5. Babe Ruth and Junior League baseball – I remember sitting in Adams Field and watching Quincy win the Babe Ruth 14-year old state championship games by 10 runs in a game called because of the mercy rule. 10 runs. This was a state championship game. Who does this? I also remember thinking that the players did not go wild with celebration. It was almost like they expected this. There was good reason. This group won five state titles in six years. As 12-year-olds, they went to the Cal Ripken World Series. Five days later, they won the state Junior League Championship. Two state titles in five days. They won 24 of 27 tournament games last summer in a run to the Junior League Regionals in New Jersey where they made the final four and lost in the semifinals in extra innings. Connor McDonald and Tommy Kelly pitched, Colin McGrath and Jack Free hit, Martin McCormack played a great shortstop. And everybody ran. Everybody always ran.

6. Emily Bryson – Everyone in the city knew she was the best distance runner in the history of North Quincy High. Now the entire country is finding out how good she is. She earned All American honors by finishing 31st in the nationals in the 6K at the University of Wisconsin. She also became the first freshman to win the 6K UAA race at Franklin Park. As a senior at North, she won the indoor two mile state championship and finished second in the outdoor. Her goal this year is to qualify for the nationals in the 3000 meters. May she run swift and strong.

7. Declan Mayo – When he was eight, he was diagnosed with macular degeneration. His sight declined until he was 13. He had to give up baseball and hockey. His sight stabilized in middle school. He kept playing football. He has little peripheral vision and is legally blind. He needs a visual aid to read papers in class. It takes him extra hours to do his homework. As a senior, he started at center for Quincy's football team. He was the cornerstone of an offensive line which tore open huge holes for the last five games of the season. As a wise man one said: Don't quit. Don't ever quit.

8. Quincy vs. Taunton basketball – This is the reason they have tournaments. They gym was packed, the drama was high, the basketball was of the finest level. Quincy trailed by 11 in the third period. Drew Myers lit up the floor with 21 of his 26 points in the second half. He and Taunton's Corey Green matched hoop for hoop in a tense and wonderful duel of excellence. Myers drained a three in the final minute to put Quincy ahead. The gym seemed to crumble with noise. Taunton forced overtime with a seeing-eye bounce pass which managed to find its was through four sets of arms and legs. Taunton won in OT. Taunton advanced. There were no losers.

9. North Quincy Girls Soccer — Could a team have better story lines in one season? Coach Paul Bregoli won his 200th game. The senior class finished with 45 wins in four years. North made the tournament for the 15th time in 20 years. Keeper Shannan Kennedy shattered the career school record for shutouts midway through her junior year with 28. More than numbers and records, there are the images of Julia O'Donnell directing a stonewall defense, of Marissa McGue flying through the center of the field, and of Ali Coleman battling back from an ACL injury to score goals.

10. Billy Reardon — When people talk of great coaching jobs, they look for the 10-1 or the 11-0 season. This is a mistake. Sometimes a coach has his best year with a 4-7 club. The questions which should be asked are: Did his team always play hard? Did his team improve? The Presidents lost three games games in the final minute. They played hard. They lost to Marshfield by 40 points. They played hard. Early in the year, an inexperienced offensive line struggled opening holes. They got better. By the end of the season, Jahvae Handsom-Fields had wide open spaces in which to run. After one close loss, a parent of a player put her arm around Reardon's shoulder and said: We are a family. Well done, coach.

More Memories: Handsom-Fields breaking the Thanksgiving Day rushing record with 296 yards and four touchdowns and establishing himself as one of the best backs in school history as Quincy won its fourth straight over North... The joy of watching Izzie Flaherty play volleyball as North went back to the tournament with a young team and a 16-6 record...Aidan Brown rushing for over 1200 yards and making that acrobatic TD catch on Thanksgiving...Quincy boys soccer team winning clutch games late in the season to make the tournament with a deep, young club...Abby Murphy becoming the first Quincy High freshman runner to qualify for the state cross country meet since 1978.

Ciara Forde scoring 50 goals and North girls lacrosse team making the tourney for the first time since 2007. Coach Meg Therrien building a tournament team from a program which won one game combined in her first two seasons... Mike Finn setting the record for career goals for North Quincy lacrosse...Geoff Hennessy winning the Massachusetts Track Coach of the year...Quincy's Curtis Calley taking second in the shot put and North's Julia Bryson finishing fourth in the two mile in the state outdoor track championships...Jackie Chen taking the serve with North trailing Quincy, 13-9 in the fifth game of a volleyball match which lasted 2 ½ hours and consumed 210 points. Chen serving six straight winners and saving four points with digs in a closing run to give North the win in the best of the rivalry games.

Gabby Jerhaian knocking home five three-pointers in the first nine minutes of the game. Nicole Jorgensen putting up 19 points, 15 rebounds and five blocks, and Quincy holding the lead until the final five minutes of the game before falling by five to Durfee in a terrific tournament match... Quincy boys hoop winning the Triple Crown of the Keenan Division, the Moscardelli Tournament and the city championship...Chen, Matt Gerakis, and Solomon Umoren leading North to its fifth straight tournament trip in boys hoop... Molly Minton, Jen Butka, Remy Aucoin and Marissa McGue leading North girls hoop back from a slow start with seven wins in ten games late in the season...Quincy's hockey team making the tourney for the second straight year...Quincy's Bantam B team winning the state title... Katrina Veasey helping Archbishop Williams to a Division 3 state title in girls hoop.

Quincy's Peter Orseno winning the sectional wrestling championship and compiling a 39-3 record in the 120-pound class...Quincy's Bailee Carey earning medals in sectional and state diving as a sophomore...Quincy's Sabrina Rauch winning the Patriot League title in the 100 butterfly and setting a school record in the 50 freestyle against North... Quincy's Nicole Lee earning the Platinum Certificate, the highest award given to a high school skater by the United States Figure Skating Association.

Anthony Green maturing at Tilton Academy into a big-time Division 1 player for Northeastern...Grace Geary lighting up the floor and earning Little East Rookie of the Year honors at UMass Boston...Danny and Pat Gould playing great hoop at Framingham State.,

Finally, and most importantly, I will always think of Matt Gerakis whenever I walk into a gym to watch a basketball game.

Saturday Gym Program

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct supervised programs in nine school gymnasiums on Saturdays throughout the winter.

Programs are free and open to boys and girls age 8 through high school. The time varies according to age groups. All programs have walk in registration at each location and are open only to Quincy residents. Participants may attend the location of their choice, not just their neighborhood gymnasium.

Assorted gym activities such as dodge ball, tag football, basketball, and gym games will be conducted under the supervision of the Quincy Recreation staff. The core schedule is from 9 to 10:30 a.m. for elementary youth age 8 through grade 5; 10:30 a.m. to noon for middle school and high school. Some adjustments in this time schedule may be made at different locations to accommodate difference in attendance by age groups.

The Saturday schedule is offered at Atherton Hough, Atlantic, Beechwood Knoll, Central, Merrymount, Montclair, Snug Harbor, Squantum and Point Webster.

4-Way Mayoral Race; 23 Others File Nom. Papers

FAMILY AND FRIENDS of Emily Zarnoch light candles in her memory during a funeral service for the beloved Quincy school teacher Aug. 20 at Central Middle School. More than 500 attended the service in the auditorium of the school where Emily taught as a substitute teacher last year. Set to begin her full-time teaching career next month, she was killed a tragic hit-and-run accident Aug. 4 in York, ME. People from all walks of life including many of her former students recalled "Miss Z's" passion for teaching and zest for life.

AUGUST

Twenty-seven residents submitted nomination papers to run for municipal office before the deadline to do so, including four for mayor. Incumbent Mayor Thomas Koch, former Mayor William Phelan, Councillor Doug Gutro and School Committee member Anne Mahoney all submitted papers to run for mayor.

Five residents submitted nomination papers for at-large spots on the City Council: Incumbents Joseph Finn and Michael McFarland, School Committee members Noel DiBona and David McCarthy and political newcomer Nina Liang.

Contested races were also setup for five of six ward seats, with incumbent Margaret Laforest facing challenger John McCone in Ward 1; incumbent Brad Croall facing challengers James Connors and Gulistan Malik in Ward 2; Ian Cain, Karl Roos and Sandra Verhault vying for an open Ward 3 seat; incumbent Kirsten Hughes facing challengers Gina Ostis and Gordon DeCambra in Ward 5; and incumbent Brian McNamee facing challenger William Harris in Ward 6.

Four candidates submitted papers to run for School Committee: incumbents Paul Bregoli and Kathryn Hubley, retired Quincy High Principal Frank Santoro and James DeAmicis.

Santoro and DeCambra would withdraw from their respective races later in the month.

The city rescheduled the preliminary election from Tuesday, Sept. 22, to Thursday, Sept. 24 because the former date conflicted with Yom Kippur. Preliminary races would be needed for mayor and the Ward 2 and Ward 3 council seats.

An overflow crowd of more than 500 family, friends, fellow educators and students attended a funeral service at Central Middle School for Emily A. Zarnoch, who was struck and killed in a hit and run accident by an alleged drunk driver in York, Maine, on Aug. 4. Zarnoch, 24, had been a substitute teacher at Central before being hired to a full-time position in July.

"We are so happy to have these 24 years with Emily – proud moments that we will never forget," said her father, John. "We will forever hold her in our hearts."

The Beachcomber, an iconic club on Quincy Shore Drive for 56 years, was slated to close as soon as September. The owners of the site were expected to demolish the building and replace it with a new, high-end restaurant of the same name.

"It was always packed and there were local people there you've known your whole life," Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, who performed there in her 20s as the lead singer of a cover band called Velvet Krush, recalled. "It is certainly the end of an era."

The Planning Board approved a proposal to tear down a one-story commercial building and two multi-family homes at 118 Old Colony Ave. and 54 and 60 Warren Ave. and replace it with a 40-unit, four-story apartment building. The board also approved a plan to build eight townhouses on Cleverly Court.

Demolition of nine North Quincy homes near Teel Field began.

Four years after being forced out of Old City Hall because of concerns over the building's condition in 2011, City Clerk Joseph Shea and his staff were able to move back to City Hall from leased space in the neighboring Monroe Building. The City Clerk's Office moved into newly renovated space on the second floor of the all-glass annex building.

Selling cookies is more than just a fun way for Girl Scouts to raise funds to support their local troop – it's a way for girls to learn valuable lessons they can use later in life, including those needed for jobs in STEM and the financial sector, state Treasurer Deb Goldberg told two-dozen Quincy Girl Scouts.

Mayor Thomas Koch reassigned longtime Planning Director Dennis Harrington to the position of director of transportation planning and appointed mayoral chief of staff James Fatseas interim planning director, citing Harrington's Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) request in June to work on a reduced, 15 hours per week schedule.

Harrington, in a written response to Koch, said the reassignment was "unlawful" under the state law that established the Planning Department, which says the mayor is responsible for appointing a planning director and that director "may be removed by the mayor with the approval of the City Council."

Gen. Joseph F. Dunford Jr., who was set to be sworn in as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in late September, attended a reunion of Vietnam veterans in Quincy.

"I am humbled to go on as the chairman and enthusiastic about tackling the challenges we have," said Dunford, who was raised in Merrymount. "This is a particularly complex time in our history. It's probably the most volatile, complex security environment since World War II so there are plenty of challenges and being a part of trying to work our way through that is certainly something to think about."

Tommy Moran, head coach of the Jefferson Parish, La., team that won the 2005 Babe Ruth World Series at Adams Field, said he was grateful for the outpouring of support his team and community received from Quincy in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, which struck two days after the championship game.

Daniel J. Flynn III, a Milton resident and Quincy real estate agent and auctioneer, was arrested on a charge of federal wire fraud. He would later plead not guilty to several charges at his arraignment in federal court after being formally indicted.

Deaths during August included:

William R. MacDonald Jr., 90, past president of the Adams Heights Men's Club; Gordon E. Parry, 87, retired Quincy police lieutenant; Dennis R. Delorey, Central Middle School custodian; Joseph LaPointe, retired Quincy firefighter; and Lindo J. Infascelli, 91, retired Quincy firefighter.

THE CHIEFS
GORMAN

GORMANS HONORED – Retired Quincy Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, Jr. gestures to a crowd of family, friends, city officials and colleagues after a plaque was dedicated Sept. 19 in honor of the chief and his father, Thomas Gorman, who also served as Quincy fire chief. The Gormans are the only father-son tandem to serve as fire chief in Quincy. The dedication took place at Quincy Fire Headquarters on Quincy Avenue.

SEPTEMBER

Dean Rizzo, longtime president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, announced he would be stepping away from his position by the end of the year. Rizzo had served as president of the Quincy Chamber and a predecessor, Quincy 2000, for a dozen years. The chamber's board of directors began its search for a new president following Rizzo's announcement, inviting interested applicants to apply.

Nine new firefighters – Thomas Callanan, Mark Gilbody, Daniel Kennedy, Christopher Stivaletta, Anthony Walsh, Joseph Keegan, Gerard Shea, Joseph Morris and James Reilly – were sworn in.

The Quincy Farmers Market relocated to Pageant Field after a nearly 34-year run at the Hancock Parking Lot. Janet Little, head of the farmers market, said she was pleased with the move and had received positive feedback from customers.

The City Council sought permission to retain an attorney to review the reassignment of longtime Planning Director Dennis Harrington by Mayor Thomas Koch in August. Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said the reassignment of Harrington was a removal that would require council approval per state law, or at least close enough to a removal to require extra scrutiny.

"This to me looks like it implicates Chapter 898," Palmucci said, referring to the portion of state law that established the Planning Department. "Even if it doesn't, it comes pretty darn close and it's probably worthy of some sort of additional scrutiny to make sure it doesn't if that's the position of the mayor and the administration."

Harrington, meanwhile, agreed to take a paid leave of absence while an outside attorney reviewed claims he created a hostile workplace, according to City Solicitor Jim Timmins.

The Planning Board approved Sean and Scott Galvin's proposal to tear down the former Woolworth's building and construct two buildings featuring a combined 56 condominium units and 7,500 square feet of ground floor retail in Quincy Center. The project was expected to take 18 months to complete.

Gov. Charlie Baker announced the state would provide Quincy with a $4.2 million grant to pay for infrastructure work necessary before a new public park linking City Hall and the United First Parish Church can be built. Koch said the $4.2 million is for subsurface infrastructure work needed before the park itself can be constructed. Construction of the park, the mayor said, could begin in 2016.

North Quincy High Athletic Director Michael Joyce said the school's hockey program could fold after the current school year because of a lack of students trying out for the team. While the city has a strong youth hockey organization, Gibbons said too many good players were opting for private schools instead of North.

More than 1,500 residents attended the annual Houghs Neck ChowdaFest. Wood Road Deli claimed the prize for best restaurant chowder while John Carvello took the individual crown.

A bronze plaque was dedicated at Fire Department headquarters to the late Thomas Gorman and his son, Thomas Gorman Jr. – the only father-son tandem to serve the city as fire chiefs. The two Gormans served the city for 80 years in the department, including 30 as chief.

The developer who purchased the former Star of the Sea Church in Squantum, Victor Sheen, said he would scrap plans to convert the existing buildings on site into 14 condominium units and was likely to move forward with plans to build four single-family homes instead following feedback from residents at a community meeting. Nearly 200 residents attended the meeting and those who spoke said they would prefer the existing buildings on site be torn down and replaced by single-family homes, four of which would be allowed by right.

Quincy Housing Authority Executive Director James Lydon said the agency may look to expand in the future by taking over operations of smaller housing authorities in neighboring communities and creating new developments for residents being squeezed out of the city by rising rents.

A spokesman for Miao Kun "Michael" Fang, who purchased the former Wollaston Theatre in 2012, said the historic building would need to be torn down because of concerns over its structural integrity. The announcement prompted a group of concerned residents to launch an effort to save the building, affectionately known as "The Wolly" to many.

Incumbent Mayor Thomas Koch and former Mayor William Phelan finished 1-2 in the four-candidate field in the preliminary mayoral election, setting up a third showdown between the two in November. Koch received 40.87 percent of all votes and Phelan 21.53 percent. Councillor Doug Gutro came in third and School Committee member Anne Mahoney fourth with 18 percent each; Gutro and Mahoney would endorse Phelan days after the preliminary.

Two preliminary council races were held as well, whittling each down to two candidates. In the Ward 2 race, incumbent Brad Croall finished first with 73 percent of the vote, ahead of James Connors (21 percent) and Gulistan Malik (5 percent). In Ward 3, Ian Cain topped the field with 41 percent of the vote, besting Karl Roos (32 percent) and Sandra Verhault (26 percent).

Paul Bregoli, North Quincy High's girls' soccer coach since 1995, recorded his 200th win as head coach. "I still love the competition but the most important thing to me is being around the kids," he said.

Ward 4 Councillor Palmucci introduced an amendment to the city's zoning code would require downtown developers to comply with the Inclusionary Zoning Ordinance, which is designed to increase affordable housing in Quincy.

Michael A. Kelly of Miller Stile Road pleaded guilty to charges stemming from a February hatchet attack on a Quincy attorney and was sentenced to seven to nine years in prison.

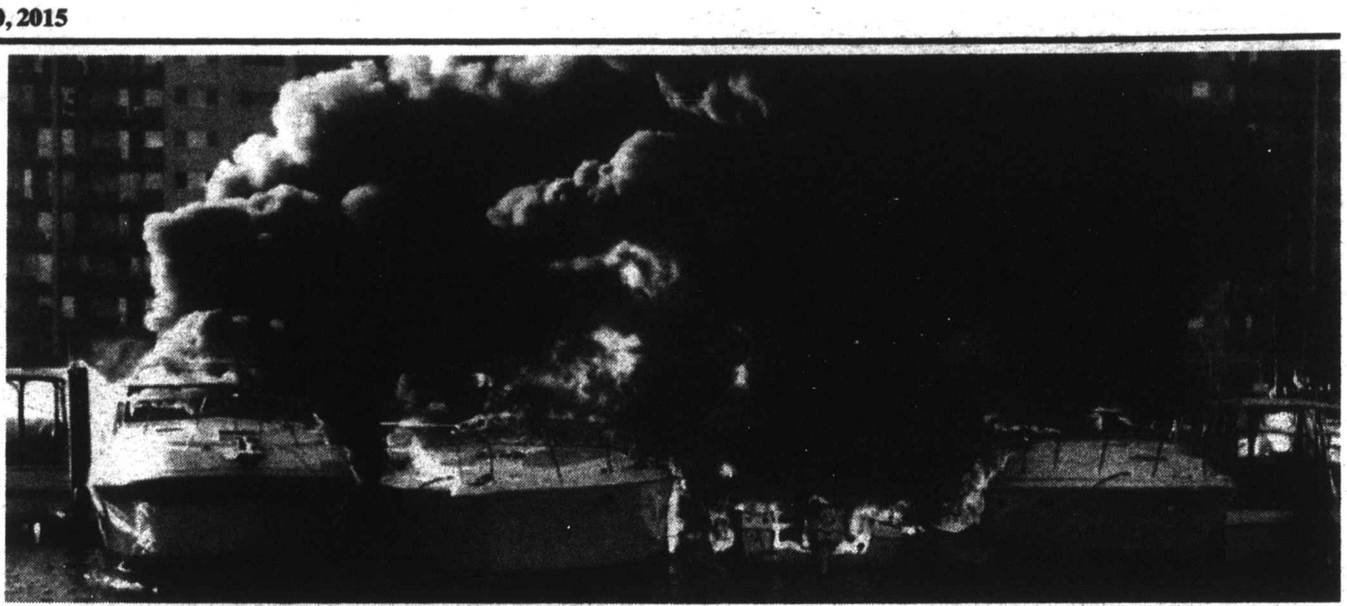
Officials Target Opioid Epidemic



EIGHT BOATS were destroyed or damaged by a two-alarm fire Oct. 8 at Captain's Cove Marina off Southern Artery. Fireboats from Boston, Cambridge and Beverly assisted the Quincy Fire Department in fighting the conflagration and the Quincy Police Department's Marine Unit helped tow six boats to safety. No injuries were reported but several people living on the boats were left homeless. The fire was the first of three in Quincy over the course of 72 hours. Photo courtesy Quincy Police Department

Deaths during September included:

Louis P. Mastroianni, 71, retired park and recreation employee; Charles R. Towers Jr., 74, past commander of the American Legion Department of Massachusetts; Paula A. Williams, DOVE and Survival Inc. board member; Gino Volandre, 87, owner of the Centre Street Garage; Gail M. Paton, 54, former Quincy schoolteacher; Paul A. Andrade, 49, professor at Suffolk University; Stephen T. Keefe Jr., 93, retired USAFR major general; and Phyllis K. Quint, 87, co-owner of Quint's House of Flowers.

OCTOBER

The United First Parish Church was one of several stops on a cultural bus tour, led by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, meant to highlight the role historic buildings can play in economic development. Peter Forman, president and CEO of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, said Quincy leads the effort in tying historical buildings to economic growth, citing the plan to construct a new public park linking the church to City Hall.

"That [the church] factors in so centrally to the redevelopment of a vibrant city center is really exciting," Forman said.

An employee of the Adams National Historical Park, Bruce Beck of Plainville, pleaded not guilty at his arraignment after being charged with threatening a co-worker with an inert claymore mine.

Former School Committee member Emily Lebo launched a write-in campaign to run for a seat on the school board. She was hoping to become the first resident to win a write-in campaign in city history.

Incumbent Mayor Thomas Koch and former Mayor William Phelan squared off at a debate inside North Quincy High School, with each candidate taking aim at his opponent's record. On the issue of downtown redevelopment, Phelan said Koch threw away the city's vision for Quincy Center while Koch highlighted projects undertaken during his tenure in City Hall.

"We had that vision and in fact young people moving into the downtown was part of that vision. Young businesses moving in. Arts was a part of our vision for a downtown that would attract new businesses and entrepreneurial endeavors. That was all part of the vision for downtown. It's been thrown out," Phelan said.

"We built the Hannon Parkway. We moved the Town Brook. We're now redirecting the traffic to create the Adams Green, which was the result of public input. All are being paid for with federal and state dollars. We have 169 units with 14,000 square feet of retail being built," Koch said.

The Quincy Fire Department responded to three two-alarm fires, which collectively claimed two buildings and destroyed or damaged eight boats, over the course of 72 hours. The first fire, at the Captain's Cove Marina on the Town River, engulfed eight boats in flames that shot 50 feet in the air, destroying at least five. The second fire claimed a duplex at 98 Phillips St. and the third burned the long vacant Sons of Lebanon Hall on Lebanon Street nearly to the ground.

More than 230 residents of West Quincy signed a petition asking state transportation officials to install noise barriers along Interstate 93 between exits 7 and 9.

Federal lawmakers joined state and local officials at forum inside the Coddington Building to address the ongoing opioid epidemic affecting communities nationwide, including Quincy.

"We need an army of ordinary citizens in order to match off against the army of lobbyists for the pharmaceutical industry or the [American Medical Association], who still stand there protecting a business as usual culture," U.S. Sen. Edward Markey said.

Ironworkers hoisted into place the final steel beam for the 169-unit West of Chestnut project – the first redevelopment project undertaken in Quincy Center – following a brief ceremony to mark the milestone.

"This has been a long, hard road but this is going to be an absolutely beautiful building when it's finished with state-of-the-art amenities and features. Right now, it looks a bit of a mess but when it gets finished it's going to be absolutely beautiful," Quincy Mutual President and CEO Douglas Briggs said.

Speakers at a wreath-laying ceremony marking John Adams' 280th birthday warmly recalled the second president's love of education and his desire for a well-educated populace in front of a crowd of more than 300 residents, many of them students.

"He took enormous pride in his library and his books served as essential tools in his varied roles as student, lawyer, revolutionary, diplomat, president and grandfather," said Kelly Cobble, curator at the Adams National Historical Park. "Such books laid the foundation for his understanding and ability when he drafted our state model for our national constitution, putting forth the idea that education be made available to all people despite their role in life."

At the ceremony, it was announced that Gary Haynes, the director of the church's visitation program since 2012, would be retiring at the end of the season.

Conceptual plans for the new Sterling Middle School were unveiled. The new building would be located on the same parcel of land as the current school, but pushed further back off of Granite Street. The designs call for two student entrances, one for grades 6-8 and the other for grade 5. Each grade would also have its own academic neighborhood – grades 5 and 6 on the ground floor and grades 7 and 8 on the second floor – with a gymnasium and auditorium in the basement.

The new school would cost upwards of $49.67 million, which also includes the demolition of the existing building and site landscaping, under a worst-case scenario.

Deaths during October included:

Gino B. Buccella, 78, member of the Quincy High Football Hall of Fame; Martha I. Robinson, 94, teacher at the Quincy Voc-Tech School; Jack P. Phillips, 68, past president of the United First Parish Church Board of Governors; Stephen Goodyear, 87, teacher at Quincy High; David J.P. Fennessey, 92, Koch Club baseball coach; Alden W. Poole, 89, college professor; the Rev. Keijo I. Aho, 88, pastor of the former West Quincy Congregational Church; Mathew N. Gerakis, co-captain of the North Quincy High basketball team his senior year; James Tufts, 78, vice president of the former Flying Tiger Airline; Douglas Randall, 91, former city solicitor; Paul T. Conway, retired Boston police.

NOVEMBER

Mayor Thomas Koch coasted to a fifth term, and the city's first four-year mayoral term, defeating former Mayor William Phelan 12,425 votes (55.97 percent) to 9,615 (43.31 percent). Koch carried five of the city's six precincts, losing only in Ward 1, en route to his third victory over Phelan. Koch unseated Phelan in 2007 and won a 2009 rematch.

"This victory belongs to all of you," Koch said at a victory rally. "We made a decision at the beginning of this campaign. We said we're going to talk about records. We're going to answer every question. We're going to talk about everything we've done for parks, for schools, for public safety, for seniors. The people of Quincy responded to that message."

History was made in the election as Noel DiBona and Nina Liang were elected to at-large seats on the City Council, becoming the first two residents of Asian descent to do so. Ian Cain was elected to an open Ward 3 seat, becoming the first African-American elected to the council. James DeAmicis became the youngest resident in city history to win elected office, winning a race for School Committee at the age of 19.

Incumbent Joseph Finn topped the voting in the at-large race, followed by DiBona and Liang. Incumbent Michael McFarland and school board member David McCarthy finished fourth and fifth in the race for the three seats. All four ward councillors facing opponents won re-election. Incumbents Paul Bregoli and Kathryn were also re-elected to new terms on the School Committee.

Joseph Shea, Quincy city clerk since 1992, announced he would retire in the spring.

Shea's predecessor as clerk, John Gillis, retired from his post as a Norfolk County Commissioner. Gillis served as city clerk from 1959 until 1992, when he was first elected to the county post.

The remaining two county commissioners chose Shea to serve out the remainder of Gillis' term.

A three-alarm fire gutted the mixed-use building at 307-311 Newport Ave. in Wollaston, leaving several people homeless. The building was also home to a barbershop and cabinet store.

The City Council approved a plan to construct 269 apartments off Quarry Hills Drive with the developer agreeing to set aside $250,000 for mitigation work at the intersection of Ricciuti Drive and Willard Street.

City councillors weighed the pros and cons of a proposal to require downtown developers to comply with the city's affordable housing ordinance, with proponents of the change saying those developers should meet the same obligations as builders elsewhere in the city and opponents arguing it would hinder progress in Quincy Center. Council President Joseph Finn and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci both spoke in favor of the proposed change, while Councillor Michael McFarland and Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said they were opposed. No vote was taken.

Palmucci and Councillor Doug Gutro introduced an ordinance that protects gender identity under the city's anti-discrimination ordinance.

More than 300 residents attended the annual Veterans Day observance, which was forced indoors by inclement weather for the first time in more than 25 years. James Laskey Sr., a Vietnam veteran and past national commandant of the U.S. Marine Corps League, was the featured speaker at the event.

"It doesn't matter whether they served during a time of war or peace. It doesn't matter where or when they served," Laskey said of veterans. "What does matter is that they did serve. They committed themselves to upholding those principles that we as a nation hold dearly."

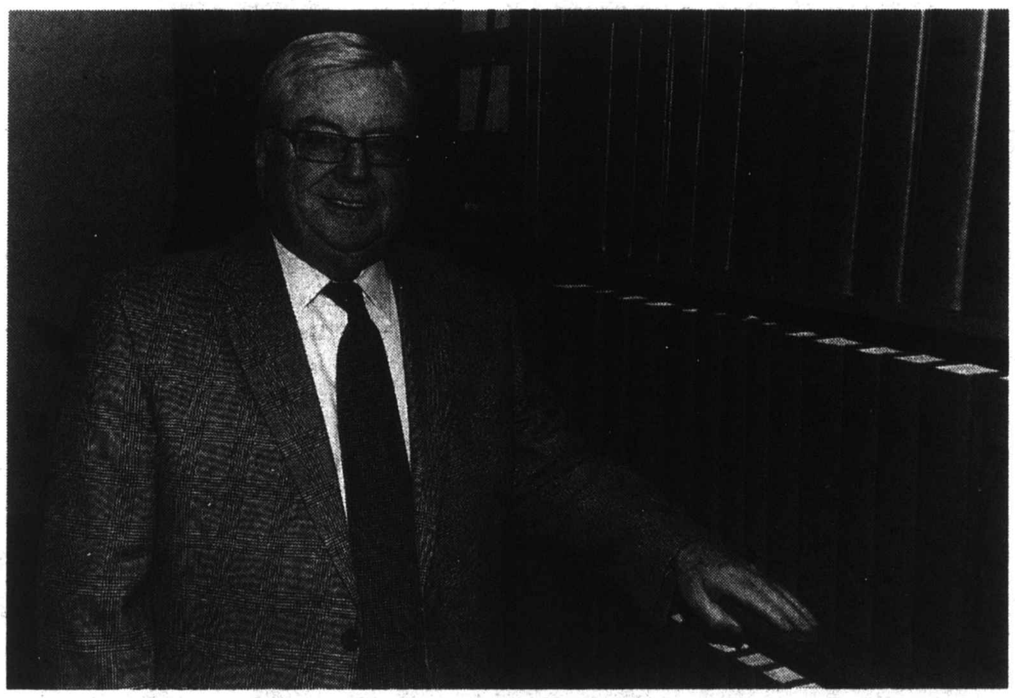
Officials celebrated the opening of a new veterans housing complex on East Howard Street. A dozen veterans and their families were to move into the new apartments there.

Christine Prendiville, a longtime Sterling Middle School educator, received a commendation from the mayor for organizing the school's annual Veterans Day assembly the last seven years. Prendiville, who began teaching at the school in 1988, planned to retire at the end of the school year.

The playing field behind Atlantic Middle School was dedicated in memory of longtime Park Department and Department of Public Works employee Joseph W. Koch. The restored field on Hollis Avenue was one of the last projects he worked on before his death in August 2014.



JOSEPH SHEA, who has served as city clerk for nearly 25 years, announced in November that he will retire sometime during the first quarter of 2016. Later in the month Shea was also appointed to fill the unexpired term of Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis who resigned. Gillis, who is 90, preceded Shea as city clerk. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

The Planning Board approved a plan to build six residential buildings featuring 492 apartments at Crown Colony. The plan also included a clubhouse, pool, tennis court, perimeter walking path and skating pond as well as a total of 861 parking spaces. The developer agreed to more than $300,000 in mitigation work.

Residents at the meeting voiced their dissatisfaction with a proposed hotel at 1073 Hancock St. on the fringe of Quincy Center, citing concerns that it may not be appropriate for the neighborhood. Haocheng Trading USA had proposed converting the existing four-story office building on site into the 36-room Kendon Hotel.

Steward Health Care said the satellite emergency department at the former Quincy Medical Center would stay open through 2016.

Quincy High Presidents won their fourth straight Thanksgiving game over North Quincy High, 33-20. Senior running back Jahvae Handsom-Fields rushed for four touchdowns for the Presidents and had 296 yards on the ground in the game, a Thanksgiving record.

The girls' volleyball teams at both high schools advanced to postseason play. Quincy High advanced to the sectional finals, where they bowed out to Newton North. North Quincy made it to the quarterfinals of the sectional tournament, bowing out to Brookline.

The boys' soccer team at Quincy High bowed in the first round of sectional play to Braintree and the girls' soccer team at North bowed in the first round of sectional play to Newton South.

Deaths during November included:

John F. Sullivan, 35, member of the North Quincy High Baseball Hall of Fame; John E. Valante, owner of Neighborhood Pharmacy; Dr. Vincent Pattavina, 92; John T. Griffin, 77, retired Quincy firefighter; William P. Doyle Jr., 87, retired Boston fire captain; Edwin L. Curtis, 81, retired Quincy firefighter; Alfred DiRico, 95, owner of Hub Folding Box Company; and Charlene Archer, Quincy College adjunct professor.

McIntyre Center Reopens After $12M Restoration

2015 The Year In Review

DECEMBER

A standing-room-only crowd of more than 300 residents and city, state and federal officials filled the Great Hall inside the newly restored James R. McIntyre Center during a ceremony to celebrate the re-opening of the 171-year-old historic building four years after it closed to the public. The restoration of the building, which first opened in 1844 and is thought to be the oldest municipal building in the country, took two years and cost $12 million.

"We are here rededicating what is our heritage, our history and truly a gift for future generations," Mayor Thomas Koch said.

"We are here today to dedicate a hallowed space in many respects," City Council President Joseph Finn added. "What this does, is it really calls forth the almost sacred nature of our civic duty. This is the place where it happens."

More than 100 veterans, residents, and city officials gathered to remember the 2,400 American service members and civilians killed at Pearl Harbor on the 74th anniversary of the surprise attack by Japanese forces on the U.S. naval base.

"We were buoyed by the president's speech the next day when he asked Congress to declare war between Japan and our country," said Robert Noble, a World War II veteran and former prisoner of war who was 15 at the time of the attack. "I don't recall there was any despair. I only remember that people were mad."

The City Council approved new tax rates proposed by the Koch administration for 2016, which would increase the property tax bill for the average single-family home in Quincy by $296, from $4,981 to $5,277. Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci voted against the increase and said residents were being squeezed by dwindling local aid from the state.

The council also approved paying back over the course of three years the $11.1 million deficit in the snow and ice removal account caused by the previous winter's record snowfall.

Planning Director Dennis Harrington announced he would retire and Koch named James Fatseas, the mayor's longtime chief of staff and acting planning director, the full-time planning director. Lisa McBirney was named the new mayoral chief of staff.

Koch joined the mayors of Boston, Braintree and Somerville and the city managers of Cambridge and Chelsea in signing the Greater Boston Regional Economic Compact, which was meant to facilitate regional problem solving among the six municipalities with a combined population of more than 1 million.

Maureen Rogers was named the president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, effective in January. She was most recently president of the Woburn-based North Suburban Chamber of Commerce.

School Committee members Paul Bregoli and Kathryn Hubley introduced a proposal allowing school nurses and athletic trainers to equip themselves with Narcan, a drug used to reverse opioid overdoses. Narcan was already available in more than 130 school districts statewide.

"It would be a good idea if Quincy jumped on board," Bregoli said. "It's better to be safe than sorry."

State officials granted full certification to Quincy's Local Emergency Planning Committee, a move that made the city eligible for additional grants for training and equipment, according to Fire Chief Joseph Barron.

Koch suspended police Lt. Thomas Corliss six months without pay and reassigned him from his position as a commander of the Special Operations Unit following an internal investigation into allegations regarding private details the lieutenant worked.

Police Chief Paul Keenan said in a statement that an internal investigation found 21 instances of Corliss working city time overlapping with private details and/or other city time. The investigation further revealed Corliss took nine vacation days that were not recorded in department attendance records. The value of those incidents, according to Keenan, was $11,000.

Corliss agreed to the discipline, the chief stated.

Deaths during December included:

Gerald D. Gardiner, 64, retired Quincy police officer; James T. Clifford, 98, founder of Clifford's Flowers; Patrina M. Quinn, 83; retired Quincy schoolteacher; Keith H. McElman, 79, past president of the Ward 2 Civic Association; Dr. Daniel C. Armstrong, 85; and Mary L. McDonald, a traffic supervisor for the Police Department.

QUINCY CATHOLIC ACADEMY

A Job Well Done

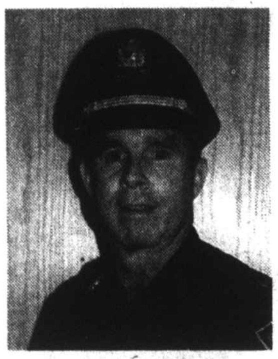
By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, December 18, 2015, at approximately 9:00 p.m. Officers Ken Wood and Joseph Paccioretti were dispatched to Quincy Medical Center for a report of persons refusing to leave. Upon arrival, Officer Wood met with one of the Doctors, who said that the male suspect was admitted to the hospital approximately 13 hours ago and when he awoke, he refused medical treatment and started yelling and swearing at the staff. Prior to the Police arriving, the suspect left against medical advice and walked to the waiting area where he continued to yell and swear at the staff.

Officer Wood located the suspect in the waiting room arguing with a female. The Officer knew the couple from past dealings with them. Officer Paccioretti advised the female that she had to leave while Officer Wood approached the male suspect. The suspect began to yell and swear at the Officer as he (suspect) backed up stating, "I'm using the bathroom and there ain't a f@#$%^& thing you can do it about it." The suspect then locked himself in the bathroom. His female friend reluctantly left but said that she was reporting everyone in the hospital for various offenses. When pressed to elaborate, she refused and left.

The suspect exited the bathroom and as Officer Wood began to approach, the suspect said, "F@#$ you you're gonna wait" and walked outside the emergency room. Officer Wood told the suspect that he had to leave because he refused medical treatment, left against medical advice and was being disorderly. Officer Paccioretti brought the suspect's bags outside.

At this point the suspect began to yell and swear at the Officers, stating, "I'm going back into that hospital and you're not gonna f@#$%^& stop me." He continued to carry on at which point other people in the waiting room were drawn to the area to see what the commotion was. As he began to walk back in, his female friend began pushing him back. He then turned to the Officers and said, "Just wait - you're gonna f@#$%^& get it." He then walked around the female and approached the Officers who were standing between him and the hospital entrance. After being advised that he was not going in, the suspect pushed Officer Wood with both hands to the chest then cocked his left arm back with a closed fist in a combative manner. Officer Wood responded by physically restraining the suspect and bringing him to the ground.



LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Paccioretti then placed handcuffs on the suspect and then brought him to their cruiser. Officer Wood initiated a pat down of the suspect for weapons. The suspect told the Officers that he had a needle on him in his left front pocket. The suspect then blurted out, "I'm sorry. I didn't know you were cops. I thought you were security guards for the hospital." During the booking, the suspect attempted to swallow an unknown pill that Officer Watkins was able to stop and retrieve. The pill was confiscated and was identified as generic Suboxone. A check of the suspect's criminal record showed that he had a prior conviction for Possession of Class B on 03/11/2015.

Officer Paccioretti transported the suspect, a 28 year old Abington resident, to the station where he was charged with "Trespassing, Disorderly Conduct, Assault and Battery on a Police Officer, Resisting Arrest and Possession Class B subsequent offense." Nice Work!

CHILD SAFETY KITS FOR FREE? BEWARE: of callers offering child safety kits for free. Residents have informed this department that they have received calls from people citing crime statistics, offering to come to their home to conduct a safety assessment and offer a free safety kit. Residents state that there is an insinuation that either he (the caller) is from the Quincy Police or that the statistics are local and provided by the Quincy Police. It is believed that the caller(s) may be independent Insurance Agents attempting to gain your business. It is important to note that so far no victim has contacted this department so there may be a reasonable explanation. We just don't want anyone opening their door and home to a possible scam and/or risking their personal safety.

Although the Quincy Police Department does provide many seminars on a wide range of issues involving safety, it is mainly for groups within the community. We do not go to individual homes. SPOOFING is often associated with this type of activity, especially if the caller is unscrupulous. Caller ID spoofing is technology that disguises the caller's actual telephone number. It is often used unethically but it isn't illegal.

Between 2004 and today, dozens and dozens of Caller ID spoofing companies have been established to meet this incredible need for people to spoof their phone numbers. It is very easy. Enter your number, the number you want to call, and the number you want to be displayed on their website widget to place the call. It then shows up on your caller ID. In this particular case, a scammer could use a well known insurance company's telephone number to show up on your caller ID to give him credibility. This has also happened with the IRS scam, with the telephone number showing up with a Washington, D.C. area code. When in doubt, don't commit to anything until you have had a chance to consult with a Quincy Police Officer. I (Lieutenant Dan Minton) can be reached at 617 745 5719.

OBITUARY

William P. Murphy, Sr., Esq.

WILLIAM P. MURPHY, Sr., Esq.

A Mass of Christian Burial for William P. Murphy, Sr., Esq., 64, a lifelong resident of Houghs Neck, where he was active in many civic and humanitarian causes, will be celebrated at 10 a.m. tomorrow (Thursday) in Most Blessed Sacrament Church of Holy Trinity Parish, Quincy.

Mr. Murphy died Dec. 26 after a lengthy battle with multiple sclerosis.

Born in Quincy Feb. 10, 1951, he was a son of the late Mary (Fennelly) and Paul H. Murphy, Sr. He had served as an altar boy at Most Blessed Sacrament in his youth, where he had been a life-long communicant.

He graduated Quincy High School, class of 1969, and received a bachelor's degree in liberal arts from Northeastern University in 1974. He received his JD from New England School of Law in 1976.

Attorney Murphy worked as a claims adjustor supervisor and retired from Hanover Insurance Company. He also provided legal services to his friends and neighbors in Houghs Neck for many years, and selflessly continued to do so despite suffering the debilitating effects of MS in his later years.

He was a former board member of the Manet Community Health Center and served on the Quincy Commission on Handicapped Affairs and the Houghs Neck Scholarship Committee. He was a member of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Loving father of William P. Murphy, Jr. and his wife Caitlin M. (Brillo) of Houghs Neck. Cherished grandfather of Gianna Murphy. Dear brother of Dr. Paul H. Murphy, Jr. and his wife Lorraine of TX, the late Mary Welliver and Professor Charles W. Murphy and his wife Sally of Quincy. Also survived by nieces, nephews, great nieces and great nephews.

Visiting hours are 5-9 p.m. today (Wednesday) at Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy. Funeral from the funeral home at 9 a.m. today, prior to the Mass.

Interment at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

OBITUARIES

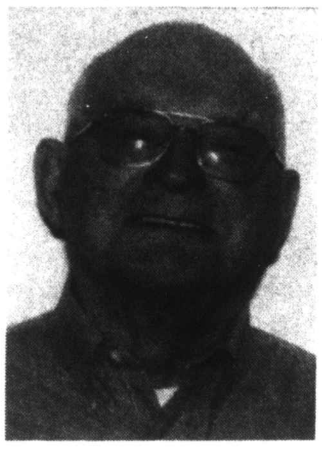
Peter P. Golden

A funeral Mass for Peter P. Golden of Quincy was celebrated yesterday (Tuesday) in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Golden died Dec. 24.

He grew up in South Boston, where he met Dolores, his high school sweetheart, who became his wife and mother to their eight children. Mr. Golden was a member of the U.S. Navy and served on the USS Saratoga (CVA 60) during the Korean War. He worked as a director for the comptroller's division of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

In 1963, Mr. and Mrs. Golden moved to Quincy, where he was a valued member of the community. He was an active brother of the North Quincy Knights of Columbus, an usher for St. Ann's Church, a volunteer for Quincy Youth Hockey, and a Cub Scout leader. He enjoyed camping with his family, rooting for Boston sports teams, golfing, meeting friends at the local coffee shop, and going for walks, especially with his grandchildren. Mr. Golden will be remembered as a devoted family man who always spoke kindly of others. His strength, perseverance, and fighting spirit are the legacy that will continue to be a source of inspiration.



PETER P. GOLDEN

Beloved husband of Dolores (Lewis) Golden of Quincy. Loving father of Paula J. Coleman (Peter) of Quincy, Linda A. Tierney (late Kevin) of Pembroke, Peter P. Golden (Carlin) of Plymouth, Mary Beth Pound (Robert) of Quincy, Stephen P. Golden (Jennifer) of Quincy, Richard B. Golden (Cheryl) of Quincy, Kristen M. Arnstein (Jack) of Braintree, and Lori A. Golden of Quincy. Son of the late Francis M. and Mildred Golden. Brother of Dorothy Donahue of Norwood, Mildred Davis of Mansfield, Clare McDonough of ME, Joseph of Marshfield, and the late Marie Doucette, Kevin, Paul, Francis, and Ruth Conti. Also survived by 27 grandchildren, one great-grandson, and many nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Interment at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to JDRF (Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation), 26 Broadway, 14th Floor, New York, NY 10004.

Brian F. McNamee, 59

A funeral Mass for Ward 6 Councillor Brian Francis McNamee was celebrated yesterday (Tuesday) in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mr. McNamee died the evening of Dec. 23 after a short battle with cancer at the age of 59. Family and friends surrounded him at the time of his death.

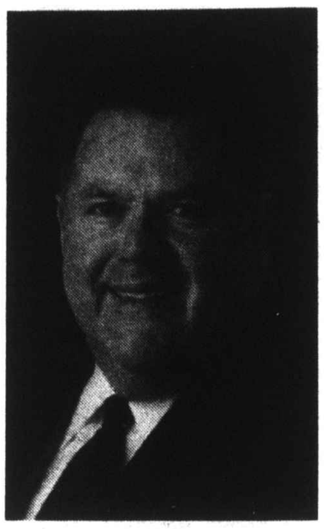
He moved to Quincy shortly after college to raise a family and start a career. Mr. McNamee became active in the community and local politics. Before joining the City Council, he was a member of the city's Zoning Board of Appeals for many years. He was known as the unconventional city councillor serving Ward 6 since 2005. Ward 6 covers Squantum, Marina Bay and sections of North Quincy and Wollaston. He was straightforward and the consummate fighter for all the people of Quincy. For more information about his political career, please go to BrianMcNamee.com.

"Quincy's challenge, as I see it, is to make sure 'good government' is government that's good for all and not just a connected few," Mr. McNamee said in 2012.

Mr. McNamee most recently worked as special sheriff and chief financial officer for Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

"He was an extraordinary public servant who fought for the underdog every day and never forgot why he was elected and who elected him," Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti, a friend of Mr. McNamee's, said.

He is survived by his daughter Maura McNamee of Quincy and three siblings: Russell McNamee of VA, Deirdre McNamee and Marguerite McKeeman of RI. His late parents were Margaret Russell and Augustine Miles McNamee. His father was a doctor and the former chief of the Anesthesiology Department at the Rhode Island Hospital. His mother was born and raised in County Cork Ireland before immigrating to the United States at the age of 20. She was a nurse and a strong advocate for the homeless. His mother's clan, the Russells from Quincy and Boston, were close family supports of Mr. McNamee.



BRIAN F. McNAMEE

He grew up in the town of Rumford, RI, a subdivision of East Providence. He graduated from Saint Raphael Academy in Pawtucket, RI, and then attended Tabor Academy in Marion, MA. for a year before attending college. Mr. McNamee was a standout football player in high school. The Providence Journal's sports writers selected him as an all-state tackle in 1974, and area football coaches named him an all-state tackle that same year. He attended college at Villanova University and received a BA in political science in 1980. In 1986, he received an MBA from University of Massachusetts at Boston. His interests included sports, politics, amateur radio, and photography.

His real passion was politics and fighting for those who did not have a voice. His past civic activities included memberships to the Knights of Columbus and the Quincy Elks and Massachusetts Government Finance Officers Association, and he served on the board of advisers for the UMass-Boston College of Management.

Mr. McNamee's voice will be missed from the streets of Quincy!

Funeral arrangements were made by the Lydon Chapel for Funeral Homes, 644 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Florence M. Lookretis, 86

A memorial service for Florence M. Lookretis, 86, of Quincy will be held at a later date.

Ms. Lookretis died Dec. 25 surrounded by her loving family.

She was born and raised in New York City and was a true "New Yorker." She graduated from Brooklyn College with her bachelors degree. Ms. Lookretis was a lifelong nurse working in various places in both New York and in Boston. She was a true artist and enjoyed painting and going to the theater. Ms. Lookretis appreciated different cultures and in her youth experienced several foreign countries. She will be greatly missed.

Beloved mother of William "Bill" Viscomi and his wife Deborah of Hull. Also survived by extended family in Maryland.

Arrangements by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Shirley M. MacLeod, 85

SHIRLEY M. MACLEOD

Funeral services for Shirley M. (Parry) MacLeod, 85, a lifelong Quincy resident, will be celebrated tomorrow (Thursday) at 11 a.m. in Fort Square Presbyterian Church, Quincy.

Mrs. MacLeod died peacefully Dec. 26 at the Hancock Park Rehabilitation and Nursing Center, surrounded by her loving family.

She was born in Quincy, raised and educated in Quincy schools and was a graduate of Quincy High School. She was a homemaker but had also worked at the former South Shore Bank in Quincy and had been retired many years.

Mrs. MacLeod was a lifelong active member of the Fort Square Presbyterian Church in Quincy. She was a member of the Friendship Circle and had served as an elder. She also led many bible studies and belonged to the Rainbow Girls. She loved baking and enjoyed serving tea to all who visited her. Mrs. MacLeod was devoted to her family and especially to her cherished grandchildren.

Beloved wife for 66 years of Earle P. MacLeod. Devoted mother of Kevin E. MacLeod of Quincy, Cynthia R. Post and her husband Michael of Abington, Heather M. MacLeod of Marshfield, Kent W. MacLeod of Abington, Matthew G. MacLeod and his wife Ruth of Abington. Loving grandmother of Shaun Post and his wife Sarah, Krista and Timothy Post, Candice Travers and her husband Rick, Cody, Ian, Allison and Neil MacLeod. Sister of Audrey V. Borst of Stoughton, Richard Parry and his wife Marsha of NE, Lorna Torressen of Braintree and the late Gordon E. Parry and his wife Irene of Quincy. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Pastor John W. Culp will officiate.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your batteries should be fully recharged by now, making you more than eager to get back into the swing of things full time. Try to stay focused so that you don't dissipate your energies.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're eager to charge straight ahead into your new responsibilities. But you'll have to paw the ground a little longer, until a surprise complication is worked out.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Rival factions are pressuring you to take a stand favoring one side or the other. But this isn't the time to play judge. Bow out as gracefully as possible, without committing yourself to any position.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Reassure a longtime, trusted confidante that you appreciate his or her words of advice. But at this time, you need to act on what you perceive to be your own sense of self-interest.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You need to let your warm Leonine heart fire up that new relationship if you hope to see it move from the "just friends" level to one that will be as romantic as you could hope for.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) There's still time to repair a misunderstanding with an honest explanation and a heartfelt apology. The sooner you do, the sooner you can get on with other matters.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect a temporary setback as you progress toward your goal. Use this time to re-examine your plans and see where you might need to make some significant changes.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Some missteps are revealed as the cause of current problems in a personal or professional partnership. Make the necessary adjustments and then move on.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Jupiter's influence helps you work through a pesky problem, allowing your naturally jovial attitude to re-emerge stronger than ever. Enjoy your success.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Set aside your usual reluctance to change, and consider reassessing your financial situation so that you can build on its strengths and minimize its weaknesses.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Some recently acquired information helps open up a dark part of the past. Resolve to put what you've learned to good use. Travel plans continue to be favored.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Act on your own keen instincts. Your strong Piscean backbone will support you as someone attempts to pressure you into a decision you're not ready to make.

BORN THIS WEEK: You embody a love for traditional values combined with an appreciation of what's new and challenging.

Quincy Teens Participate In YouthSpeak Institute To Prevent Abuse In Dating Relationships

By SYDNEY PALINKAS

While people talk idealistically about being young and in love, it can often be difficult for young adults to navigate new relationships, especially those that are unhealthy or abusive. According to the Centers for Disease Control, nearly 1.5 million high school students nationwide experience physical abuse from a dating partner every year. That doesn't even include the emotional, sexual, or digital abuse that many youth face. Young women, between the ages of 16 and 24, are experiencing dating violence at a rate triple the national average, says the U.S. Department of Justice. DOVE is working to combat this growing and alarming phenomenon with its teen dating violence prevention program, YouthSpeak.

On Monday, Nov. 30, 35 students from North Quincy and Quincy High Schools began their training as YouthSpeak Peer Educators. While several of the students were returning peer educators, most were new to the program. The students participated in a 5-hour teen dating violence awareness leadership training, led by Jen Bolton, Senior Manager of Prevention and Education; Lindsay Greyerbiehl, LGBQ/T Advocacy & Outreach Coordinator; and Sam Williams, a Social Work Intern from Boston College. Students were educated on the dynamics of abusive relationships, including the different types of abuse, the cycle of violence, common myths and excuses, victim blaming, healthy relationships and respectful communication, and safe break ups. Students were especially interested in learning how to help a friend who is in need.

Once students are fully trained as peer educators they will lead their own prevention presentations to freshmen in their high schools. In addition students will participate in monthly afterschool meetings to plan various prevention and awareness events throughout the school year. All of the students are committed to creating social change in their schools.

It seems easy to pinpoint dating violence when it results in a black eye, but looking beyond physical violence, the lines are murkier. How many times a day is too many to Snapchat or text your partner? Is it okay to give your partner your Facebook and Twitter passwords? What if your partner is constantly monitoring who likes your photos on Instagram? The YouthSpeak training tackled these questions and more, giving students the tools to recognize and address digital abuse. Students were also particularly interested in the dynamics of cultural abuse and ways that someone's cultural identity could be used against them by a partner.

For some students the discussions around partner manipulation felt all too familiar to what they had witnessed among their own friends and peers. For others, discussing dating violence and its prevalence was relatively new. These can be difficult and uncomfortable issues to discuss. YouthSpeak is able to make that conversation easier by allowing teens to learn from their peers about topics that are relevant and interesting to them.

YouthSpeak was launched in 2004. DOVE has trained well over 500 students as peer educators in just the last five years. DOVE is working to grow the program and create long-lasting change in schools and communities.

For more information on YouthSpeak or DOVE's other services, visit www.dovema.org.

Sydney Palinkas is a DOVE intern.

Red Kettles Raise $130K For Local Salvation Army

The Red Kettle Christmas Campaign in the Quincy area raised more than $130,000 - about 96 percent of its goal.

"The Salvation Army of Quincy is very grateful for the generosity of the greater Quincy community in support of its recent Red Kettle Campaign. The campaign raised $130,267.18, which is 96 percent of the goal of $135,000," said Capt. Timothy Ross, Quincy Corps Officer, Salvation Army.

"The funds raised through the Red Kettle Campaign will assist many people in our community throughout the upcoming year. Many donors, volunteers, and businesses gave of their resources to help raise the funds needed to help people through The Salvation Army's Emergency Assistance Program.

"The Salvation Army looks forward to working with the Quincy community in this upcoming year to make sure that the needs of people within our community are met," Ross added.

Quirk Pays $60K For Prohibited Contributions

By SCOTT JACKSON

Two companies owned by Daniel Quirk have paid $60,000 to the state to settle claims concerning prohibited contributions to four candidates running for office, including Mayor Thomas Koch and Gov. Charlie Baker.

Braintree-based Daniel J. Quirk Inc. and Quincy Auto Auction Inc. agreed to the payment in a disposition announced Dec. 21 with the Massachusetts Office of Political and Campaign Finance. The two companies contributed $19,500 between 2013 and 2015 to the four candidates by providing funds to employees who subsequently gave the money to the candidates' respective committees, according to the disposition; the dealerships arranged for employees to make 39 total contributions of $500 each.

Of that $19,500, Koch received $7,000 and Baker $2,500. Ward 2 City Councillor Brad Croall received $6,000 and Warren Tolman, a candidate for attorney general in 2014, $4,000. The four candidates were unaware the contributions were made from corporate funds, the OCPF said.

The candidates will have to disgorge the amounts of prohibited contributions they received by Feb. 28. Under state law, that money can be given to the state, a city or town, a scholarship fund or a non-profit organization.

Four Quirk employees made $1,000 donations to Koch – the maximum amount allowed under state law – on Oct. 20. Those employees swore in signed affidavits the contributions were made using personal funds and were not reimbursed by either Quirk company, according to the disposition.
